—O. 41, R. 33—Powers of appellate Court — Appellate Court cannot reverse or interfere with decree of trial Court which becomes final and when not challenged by party aggrieved.

An appellate Court has got no jurisdiction to reverse or interfere with a decree of a trial Court, when it has become final and when it was not challenged by a party aggrieved. Though in exceptional cases O 41, R. 33, Civil Procedure Code, enabled the Court to pass a decree as ought to have been passed or as the nature of the case requires even in favour of a party who has not appealed, it is restricted to cases where, as a result of interference in favour of the appellant, further interference is rendered necessary in order to adjust the rights of the parties according to justice equity and good conscience. Where there is no interference in favour of the appellant, the decree already passed should not be reversed or modified. ——O. 41, R. 33—Non-appealing respondent — He has no right to ask for interference in decree though Court may do so where necessary.

The wording of O. 41, R. 33, Civil P. But the said provision does not confer any right on any of the non-appealing respondent to claim it as a matter of right, he having elected to be satisfied with the decree passed by the trial Court ILR (1960) Madh Pra 458 : 1961 M P L J 1251 : 1961 Jab L J 1489 : AIR 1962 Madh Pra 141 (143) (Pt C) (Prs 28 to 31) (DB).

——O. 41, R. 33—Relief to party not appealing — Power of appellate Court to grant.

Though O 41, R 33, confers wide and unlimited jurisdiction on Courts to pass a decree in favour of a party who has not preferred any appeal, there are, however, certain well-defined principles in accordance with which that jurisdiction should be exercised. Normally a party who is aggrieved by a decree should, if he seeks to escape from its operation, appeal against it within the time allowed after complying with the requirements of law. Where he fails to do so no relief should ordinarily be given to him under O. 41, R. 33.

But, there are well-recognised exceptions to the rule. One is where as a result of interference in favour of the appellant it becomes necessary to readjust the rights of other parties. A second class of cases based on the same principle is where the question is one of settling mutual rights and obligations between the same parties. A third class of cases is when the relief prayed for is single and indivisible but is claimed against a number of defendants. In such cases, if the suit is decreed and there is an appeal only by some of the defendants and if the relief is granted only to the appellants, there is the possibility that there might come into operation at the same time and with reference to the same subject-matter two decrees which are inconsistent and contradictory. This however, is not an exhaustive enumeration of the classes of cases in which Courts could interfere under O. 41 R 33. Such an enumeration would neither be possible nor even desirable.

Considering the question on principle, when decree is in substance a combination of several decrees against several defendants, there is no reason why an appeal presented by one of the defendants in respect of his interest should enure for the benefit of the other defendants with reference to their interests.

Thus where a reversioner files a suit to recover possession of his share of many items of properties which are held by different defendants under different alienations some of which might be valid and others not, there is no community of interest between them. The plaintiff could have filed a separate suit in respect of each item and impleaded as defendants therein only the alienee interested in that item. In that event, if all the suits were decreed but an appeal were to be preferred against the decree in only one of them and that appeal allowed, that would not operate as reversal of the decrees in the other suits; nor would there be any power in the Court to set aside those decrees under O. 41, R 33. It would not make any difference when the plaintiff has, for convenience, combined several suits into one. 1954 Mad W N 531 : (1954) 2 Mad L J 509 : ILR (1954) Mad 1126 : 67 Mad L W 346 : AIR 1954 Mad 848 (851, 852, 853) (Pt C) (Prs 10, 11, 13) (DB).

—— O. 41, R. 33 — Appellate Court — Power to vary decree while dismissing appeal.

If the appellate Court considers that in a particular case, a decree ought to have been made, but has not been made, it has clearly the power to make that decree which has not been made by the Court whose decision is under appeal. If the circumstances of the case and the interest of justice demand the variation of the decree in that way, it is clear that the appellate Court has the power to do so: AIR 1949 F C 108, Rel. on. Such variation may be necessary for the purpose of dismissing a suit against persons against whom decrees have been made but which have not been appealed against. Likewise, variation may be necessary in order to make a decree against a person against whom none has been made but the interest of justice requires that it should be so made. 39 Mys L J 86 : I L R (1961) Mys 231 : AIR 1961 Mys 166 (168) (Prs 14, 15, 16).

——O. 41, R. 33 — Relief to party not appealing—"Although such respondents...objection".

The words "although such respondents...objection" bear the import that the appellate Court has jurisdiction to pass a decree even in favour of a party who has not been impleaded in the appeal. There can be cases in which from their very exceptional nature, interests of justice or the rules of good conscience or equity require that a decree should be passed or an alteration therein made even though the effect of it would be to give advantage to the party who has not appealed. It is to that class of cases that Rule 33 appears to have curative relevancy and as the power under the Rule is extraordinary, it should be exercised judicially with care and caution and only exceptionally in proper cases as distinguished from ordinarily. ——O. 41, R. 33 — Decree in favour of respondent who has neither appealed nor filed cross-objections.

Order 41, R. 33 does not authorise an appellate Court to give a decree to the respondents who have not filed any appeal or cross objection which was refused to them by the first Court and against which they did not care to file any appeal or cross-objection. Rule 33 is applicable when a party is before the appellate Court as a respondent and the Court finds that decree ought to have been passed but it had been wrongly passed in favour of some of the respondents whereas it ought to have been passed in favour of that party. ——O. 41, R. 33—Applicability to single plaintiff or defendant not filing appeal or cross objection.

The general principle is that a decree is binding on the parties to it, until it is set aside and as an ordinary rule an appellate Court must not reverse or vary a decree in favour of a party who has not preferred any appeal or cross-objection against it, and this general rule holds good notwithstanding the provisions of O. 41, R. 33. The power conferred by the said rule will ordinarily be confined to those cases where as a result of the interference in favour of the appellant, further interference with the decree of the lower Court becomes necessary in order to adjust the rights of the parties or in order to avoid inconsistent or contradictory decrees. The rule does not apply to a case of a single plaintiff or defendant because to apply it would mean that the trial Court's decree can be reversed or modified on an appeal filed by the other party even though the party himself has not filed an appeal or cross-objection and it would mean injustice to the party appealing. ——O. 41, R. 33 — Power under, can be exercised in favour of person not party to appeal.

When an appeal comes before the Court the whole suit out of which the appeal arises is within the control of the Court and the Court has ample discretion to pass any decree or order for preventing the ends of justice being defeated.

A suit was decreed against A ex parte and against B after contest. Subsequently the decree was set aside as against A and the suit was restored to file. The trial Court dismissed the suit. An appeal was filed by the plaintiffs. The first appellate Court allowed the appeal and decreed the suit against A. In second appeal by A, while allowing the appeal and dismissing the suit against A :

—— O. 41, R. 33 — Decree against several persons — Appeal by some — Power of appellate Court to vary decree against other defendants.

The language of O. 41, R. 33 is in very wide terms, but it should not be so read as to abrogate the other provisions with regard to the filing of appeal, cross-objections etc. The general principle is that a decree is binding on the parties to it unless it is set aside in appropriate proceedings. If a party wishes to have a decree against him modified and reversed, he must comply with certain requirements as to filing of appeals, objections and so forth. Illustration under the rule gives some class of cases in which R. 33 will apply; for example, it applies to a case where, as a result of interference in favour of the appellant, further interference with the decree of the lower Court is rendered necessary in order to adjust the rights of the parties according to justice, equity and good conscience. This rule enables the appellate Court where its decision interferes with or modifies or extends the decision of the lower Court, to give effect to that decision if necessary in the interest of justice by interfering with the rights of those parties which are not the subject of appeal before that Court.

Where a decree is in substance a combination of several decrees against several defendants and some of the defendants appeal, the Court cannot, while allowing the appeal, invoke the assistance of O. 41, R. 33 to give relief to the plaintiffs who are parties as respondents when they did not care to file any appeal against the dismissal of their suit against some of the other defendants respondents. But in the case of those defendants respondents where allowing of appeal would result in passing inconsistent decrees or where interference with their rights is rendered necessary because of the interference with the rights of the appellants, in their case the provisions of O. 41, R. 33 can be applied with justification. A defendant against whom the suit has been dismissed in the trial Court and who has not been made a party to an appeal preferred against that decree before the appellate Court, is not a party interested in the result of the appeal' and powers under O. 41, R. 33 which may be exercised in favour of an absent respondent cannot be exercised to his detriment or prejudice. With the object of doing complete justice between the parties O. 41, R. 33 confers a wide and unlimited jurisdiction on a Court of appeal to pass a decree in favour of a party who has not preferred a cross appeal or objection but that does not mean that other provisions of the Code should be completely abridged or abrogated. ——O. 41, R. 33 and S. 151 — Addition of parties — Power to add parties to an abated appeal — Use of inherent powers.

While the provisions of R. 33 of O. 41, Civil P. C., give wide powers to the Appellate Court as to the nature of the decree which it should pass, in terms the provisions of R. 33 do not empower the Court to add parties where the appeal as a whole has abated. The abatement of an appeal results in a valuable right accruing to the respondents, and if the Court readily added parties which could result in such a valuable right being destroyed it would be acting far beyond what was contemplated in the rule. AIR 1927 P 252, Rel. on. ILR 32 Pat 1138 : AIR 1955 Pat 237 (240) (Pt B) (Pr 12) (DB).

——O. 41, R. 35 O. 49, R. 3— Power of High Court in appeal to antedate decree.

The High Court exercising its appellate jurisdiction is not bound by the mandatory provision of O. 41. R 35 As R. 161 of the Rules is not framed by the High Court under any of the provisions of the C. P. Code the Appellate Side Judges could direct the Registrar to draw up the decree and antedate it However such a power should be exercised sparingly and with caution The scheme underlying S. 13 (1) (viii) and (ix) of the Hindu Marriage Act seems to be clear.

The specific period of two years laid down in these two clauses by the Legislature is the period commencing after a decree is passed by a competent Court. Where the decree for judicial separation has been passed by the High Court in appeal period under S. 13 (1) (viii) can only commence after the decree in appeal has been pronounced by the High Court and not from the date of the decree of the trial Court. Under the circumstances, assuming the High Court had the power, it was not a case where it should exercise it or even it could exercise it in view of the law. —— O. 41, R. 35 (3) — 'Costs incurred'—What are - Amendment in appeal — Reduction of claim - Costs in appeal reduced in proportion — Effect on costs in trial Court.

A suit for declaration was based on a registered contract for the sale of certain property to the plaintiff and defendant No. 3 for Rs. 62,000 and an ad valorem court-fee of Rs. 2,325 was paid thereon. The suit was dismissed with costs. In the decree which was prepared, plaintiff's costs were specified as Rs. 3,289-2-3, which included inter alia Rs. 2,325 which was the value of the Court-fee paid and Rs. 910 as pleader's fee on Rs. 62,000.

During the pendency of the appeal by the plaintiff, the contract sued upon became impossible of performance due to the passing of the Bihar Land Reforms Act and the appellant amended the plaint confining his relief to the recovery of the amount paid under the contract, which reduced the valuation of the suit to Rs. 10,500. Plaintiff's appeal was allowed and he was awarded costs of the appellate Court as also of the Court below.

In the decree that was prepared the costs incurred by the plaintiff in the lower Court were entered as Rs. 1,314 2-3 on the basis of the reduced valuation. On application by the appellant for amendment of decree under S. 151, C. P. Code, Held, that so far as the decree in appeal was concerned, R. 35 (3), O. 41, C. P. Code, did not state that the amount of costs in the suit was to be specified in it.

(2) Since the Appellate Court had given a decree with a direction that he was to get his costs of the Court below, the only thing that was required to be done was to give effect to that direction and the only way in which the office could give effect to that direction was to take the amount of the plaintiff's costs in the Court below as stated in the decree of the lower Court itself.

The decree in so far as it calculated afresh the plaintiff's costs in the lower Court on the basis of the reduced valuation was therefore, not in accordance with the judgment.

(3) that the fact that the amendment was allowed at the appellate stage carried with it a finding by implication that the amendment sought did not have the effect of altering the nature of the claim. 1957 Pat L R 123 : AIR 1957 Pat 498 (500, 501) (Prs 9, 11, 12) (DB).

ORDER 42, RULE 1

——O. 42, R. 1 (Allahabad) and S. 122 — Allahabad High Court Rules, Chap. 9, R. 8—Rule prevails over O. 42, R. 1—Constitution of India, Art. 225.

Rule 8 of Chap. 9 of the Allahabad High Court Rules was made in 1952 in the exercise of powers conferred on the Court under Art. 225 of the Constitution. The rules prevail against Rule 1 of O. 42 which was made in 1948. 1965 All W R (HC) 22.

—— O. 42, R. 1 (Allahabad) — Omission to file documents except decree not fatal to presentation of appeal—No objection raised on behalf of High Court—High Court must be deemed to have dispensed with filing of document.

The omission to file any of the documents except the decree appealed from is a defect which relates to form only. It is not fatal to the proper presentation of appeal. It is open to the Court at the time of the filing of the appeal to insist upon any particular document being filed or to dispense with it. Where no objection was raised on behalf of the High Court when the memorandum of appeal was filed in open Court, it would be unfair to penalise the appellant for the omission of which the Court had not taken notice at the proper time. In such a case the Court must be deemed to have dispensed with the filing of the document. The position would however be different if the decree appealed from was not filed because this Court has no discretion in the matter to dispense with a copy of the decree. ——O. 42, R. 1 and O. 41, R. 22 — Second appeal — Respondent's right to contest finding of fact.

O. 42, R. 1, C P. Code, provides that the rules of O. 41, shall apply, so far as may be, to appeals from appellate decree. O. 41, R. 22 which allows the respondent to support the decree on any of the grounds decided against him in the Court below, is a rule governing first appeals wherein questions of fact as well as law can be agitated. This rule applies "so far as may be" to appeals from appellate decrees. It clearly means that if any other provision prohibits him from agitating any of the grounds he would not be able to support the decree on those grounds. Ss. 100 and 101, C. P. Code, lay down such prohibition. What these sections permit the Court of second appeal to do is to set aside that decision which comes within the provisions of Cls. (a), (b) or (c) of S 100 and no other decision. So a Court of second appeal cannot interfere with a finding of fact either at the instance of the appellant or at the instance of the respondent if there is evidence to support it. It follows, therefore, that a respondent in second appeal is not entitled to support the decree of the first appellate Court by contesting a finding of fact of that Court. ORDER 42, RULE 2 (Andh-Pradesh)

— O. 42, R. 2 (Andh-Pradesh)—O. 42, R. 2 read with S. 151—Second Appeal to High Court— Power of Court to dispense with printed copies of judgment and to receive typed copies instead.

Held, that printed copies of the judgment had to be filed and that type-written copies of judgment were not sufficient to meet the requirements of law. Printed copies of judgment cannot be dispensed with in such a way as to allow typed copies to be filed in their place. Unreported decision in C. M. P. No. 9866 of 1960, D/- 3-1-1961 (Andh Pra), Followed.

Obiter :—The power of the Appellate Court to dispense with copies of the judgment on which the appeal is founded is not positively given by O. 41, R. 1, Civil Procedure Code, but is only referred to in O 41, R. 1, as existent even independent of O. 41, R. 1. So that, under O. 42, Civil Procedure Code also, the High Court has power to dispense with copies of the lower Courts' judgments in suitable cases. Also held that this is not a fit case for dispensing with copies of judgment altogether or of printed copies in particular (1965) 2 Andh W R 472 : (1965) 2 Andh L T 367 : AIR 1966 Andh Pra 181.

——O. 43 R. 1 (c) and (d)—Scope — Order dismissing petition for restoration of an application to set aside dismissal of suit—Whether appealable — Jurisdiction —Appeal incompetent—Court entertaining the appeal —No objection raised Jurisdiction, if given thereby.

Under the provisions of O. 43, R. 1, Civil P. C, an appeal lies from an order refusing to set aside the dismissal of a suit and an order refusing to set aside an ex parte decree. No appeal is provided for from an order dismissing an application which is for restoration of an application for setting aside the dismissal of a suit or an ex parte decree. A right of appeal cannot be claimed by virtue of S. 141, Civil P. C., when O. 43, of the Code makes no provision for such an appeal. Where no right of appeal exists but no objection is taken to the jurisdiction of the appellate Court, it cannot be considered that any consent (implied thereby) can cure the defect or give that Court jurisdiction to deal with the appeal. ——O. 43, R. 1 (d) and S. 115 — Application under R. 13 of O. 9—Conditional order — Subsequent order dismissing application—Appeal.

On 15-2-1952 the Court passed a conditional order allowing an application to set aside an ex parte decree on certain terms. The matter was put up again on 25-3-1952 and the Court passed an order actually dismissing the application on that day. The applicant having appealed against the order of 25 3-1952.

Held, that in the circumstances, the real order was the order of 25-3-1952 dismissing the application and, therefore, an appeal lay from that order.

Held, further that, even if no appeal lay, a revision would lie from the order of 15-2-1952 if that was treated as a complete order in itself allowing the application on certain terms I L R (1958) 8 Raj 295 : 1957 Raj L W 631 : A I R 1958 Raj 237 (238) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

——O. 43, R. 1 (j) and O. 21, R. 92 — Appeal challenging auction sale — Auction-purchaser is necessary party—Omission is fatal.

Three houses belonging to the petitioner were sold in auction for arrears of income-tax. Petitioner applied for setting aside the sale on the ground that there were material irregularities in conducting the sale. The application was rejected by Deputy Commissioner. Petitioner filed an appeal before the Board of Revenue in which he impleaded only the State Government. Subsequently he sought leave to implead the auction-purchasers as respondents to the appeal. The Board held that the auction-purchasers were necessary parties to the appeal and they having not been impleaded within time, the appeal was dismissed.

Held, that in view of the express provision in Order 21, R. 92 (2), Civil P. C., enjoining the executing Court to give a notice to the parties affected, including the auction-purchaser, it was not necessary for the judgment-debtor to men ion the name of the auction-purchaser in the formal array of parties. That did not however, imply that he was not a party to the proceedings. As the auction-purchaser was vitally interested in the result of appeal he was a nece sary party. Order 22 R. 11, Civil P. C., itself indicates that the inclusion of an appeal within the term 'suit' under the provision of law is confined to the application of that Order only, namely O. 22. Perusal of entire provisions of O. 43 would indicate that nowhere in this order any provision is made to the effect that in this Order the word 'suit' should be interpreted to include an appeal. Order passed after setting aside order recording compromise.

— O. 43, R. 1 (m), O. 23, R. 3 and S. 151 — Order recording or refusing to record compromise—Appeal.

Reading O. 23 and O. 43 R 1 (m), it appears that an appeal lies against an order recording or refusing to record a compromise at the time when the question of recording or refusing to record the same has to be determined after the filing of the compromise petition. They do not envisage that an appeal will lie against an order passed subsequently setting aside the order recording the compromise. The reason is obvious that there is no provision under R. 3 of O. 23 for such an order which has to be passed only under S. 151. 13. Clause (nn)—Order under O. 33, Rr. 5 or 7.

Andhra Pradesh.

——O. 43, R. 1 (nn) (A. P.) — Scope of — Grounds of appeal — If exhaustive.

Order 43. R. 1 deals with the right of appeal and not the grounds on which an appeal lies. If an order comes within the four corners of any of the clauses in the rule, an appeal lies and the appellate Court could determine the case finally under S. 107, C P. Code. The mention of the grounds in cl. (nn) of O. 43, R. 1 cannot be properly construed as limiting the right of appeal to those grounds. AIR 1960 Andh Pra 540 (541) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

Kerala.

——O. 43, R. 1 (nn) (Kerala) - Scope — Order rejecting application under O. 33, R. 7 (3) on grounds referred to in O. 33, R. 5, clause (d) or (d-1); alone appealable.

The reasonable interpretation to be placed on clause (nn) (Kerala) of R. 1 of O. 43, is that in order to enable a plaintiff to appeal, whose application to sue as a pauper has been rejected, whether the rejection is at the preliminary stage under R. 5, or after the issue of notice under R 6, and following the procedure under R. 7 and then finally rejecting the application under R. 7 (3), the rejection must have been either on the ground that the plaintiff's allegations do not show a cause of action as provided in clause (d), or on the ground that the suit appears to be barred by any law, as provided in clause (d-1) of R. 5. If the rejection of the plaintiff's application for leave to institute a suit as a pauper, is on any other ground not covered by clause (d) or clause (d-1) of R. 5 whether the rejection is at the preliminary stage dealt with by R. 5, or after hearing the parties under R 7, the plaintiff is not entitled to file an appeal as against such an order of rejection, (1964) 2 Ker L R 354 : ILR (1964) 2 Ker 64 : 1964 Ker L J 839 : 1964 Ker L T 800—AIR 1965 Ker 179 (181, 182) (Pt A) (Prs 12, 16).

Madras.

—— O. 43, R. 1, Cl. (nn) — (Madras Amendment) — O. 33, Rr. 5 and 7 — Appeal from order rejecting an application for leave to sue as pauper — Competency — Revision — Madras Court-fees and Suits Valuation Act (14 of 1955), Ss. 50 and 52 - Appeal against order rejecting a petition for leave to sue in forma pauperis and rejection of plaint for non-payment of court-fee—Valuation.

Where an application to file a suit in forma pauperis is rejected and time is given for payment of court-fee and if the court-fee is not paid within the time prescribed the petition is rejected, the remedy for the petitioner is to file an appeal against the order rejecting the petition and no revision could lie against the earlier order of refusal of leave to sue in forma pauperis.

In such cases the subject-matter of the appeal is only the right of the appellant to seek his remedy as a pauper and is as such incapable of valuation as it does not touch the merits of the subject-matter of the suit. Hence the court-fee need not be paid on the ad valorm basis for the appeal. Court-fee can be paid on a fixed basis under S. 52 of the Madras Court-fee and Suits Valuation Act, 1955, read with S. 50 of the said Act. ——O. 43, R. 1 (r), O. 39, R. 2—Order for ad interim injunction.

The plaintiff a former chairman of a Municipality instituted a suit to obtain injunction restraining the defendants the Vice-Chairman and the Commissioners of the Municipality from interfering with the affairs of the Municipality. On the day the suit was filed one of the defendants appeared and was heard, but an order of ad interim injunction was passed and notice was also issued on the remaining defendants to show cause as to why an ad interim injunction pending the hearing of the suit, as prayed for by the plaintiff, should not issue :

Held that the argument confused the temporary and limited nature of the injunction with the question of the finality of the order itself. The order so far as it ran, though it was an order for an injunction for a limited period, was clearly final. The ad interim injunction was clearly one made under O. 39, R. 2 and was appealable under O. 43, R. 1. A I R 1951 Cal 446 (447) (Pr 7) (DB).

——O. 43, R. 1 (s)—Order removing third party from possession—Appeal. See Ibid, O. 40, R. 1 (b). 1958 Ker L T 204.

——O. 43, R. 1 (s), O. 40, R. 1 (1) Cl. (b) and Cl. (d) —Suit for partition—Receiver appointed by consent for management of properties — Receiver auctioning lease of certain property and applying for delivery of possession to highest bidder — Order thereon is under Cl. (b) or Cl. (d) of O. 40, R. 1 and is appealable.

An order of appointment of a receiver may confer all or any of the powers mentioned in clauses (a), (b), (c) and (d) of sub-rule (1) of Rule 1 of Order 40, Civil P. C. and therefore, it would not be right to hold that it is only the order of appointment of a receiver that is appealable under O. 43, R. 1 (s), Civil P. C.

Thus where a receiver appointed by consent of the parties to a suit for partition is authorised to take charge of the property and during the course of his management he auctioned the areca gardens amongst the members of the family, and filed a memo to the Court for permission to deliver possession of the garden to the highest bidder in the auction, the memo filed by the receiver is during the course of the management of the estate seeking instructions from the Court and when the Court passes an order thereon, sueh an order clearly falls under clause (d) of Rule 1 (1) of Order 40, Civil P. C. and is therefore appealable. AIR 1962 S C 21, Rel. on. (1965) 1 Mys L J 342.

——O. 43, R. 1 (s); O. 40, R. 4 (b) and S. 47—Scope —Order calling upon Receiver to pay up amount due — Failure to comply with — Order directing attachment of property and sale thereof to satisfy debt—Second appeal.

An order directing a Receiver's property to be attached and sold and the sale proceeds to be applied to liquidate the amount due by the Receiver, on his failure to pay the amount due as ordered by the Court, falls within the purview of O. 40, R. 4 (b), C. P. Code, and is appealable under O. 43, R. 1 (s) of the Code. It is not an order under S. 47, C. P. Code, having the force of a decree and hence no second appeal lies in such a case. A I R 1951 Pat 451 (1) (Pr 2) (DB).

——O. 43, R. 1 (s); O. 40, R. 4 — Receiver failing to pay amount due from him—Order of Court directing amount to be paid out of deposit standing to credit of Receiver—Order held, in substance and effect, one under O. 40, R 4—Appeal, therefore, held lay under O. 43, R. 1 (s) from such order. See Ibid, O. 40, R. 4. AIR 1950 Pat 241 (DB).

——O. 43, R. 1 (s) — Scope — Order that property in suit be leased to a particular person for a certain period and rent and directing receiver to execute lease in accordance with it—Appeal. See Ibid, O. 40, R. 1. ILR (1960) 10 Raj 131 : 1960 Raj L W 334 : AIR 1960 Raj 192 (DB).

18. Clause (t)—Order under O. 41, Rr. 19 or 21.

——O. 43, R. 1 (t) — Assistant Commissioner's order rejecting application for re-admission of appeal passed by Commissioner or Additional Commissioner — Not appealable. See Tenancy Laws — U. P. Tenancy Act (17 of 1939), S. 263. 1951 R D 75 : 1951 All W R (Rev) 87.

— O. 43, R. 1 (t)—Scope—Dismissal of appeal for default — What is — "Appearance" — Adjournment asked for by pleader not ready to argue appeal as appellant reached late—Refusal of adjournment and dismissal of appeal — Application for restoration — Dismissal—If falls under O. 41, R. 19 and subject to appeal.

Where an appeal is dismissed for default of the appellant, after an adjournment requested by his pleader on the ground of his not being ready to argue the appeal as the appellant reached the place late, is refused, the dismissal is one under R. 19 of O. 41, C. P. Code. An order dismissing an application to restore the appeal so dismissed falls under O. 41, R. 19 and hence is appealable under O. 43, R. 1 (t), C. P. Code. The mere fact of the appellant and his pleader being personally present in Court does not constitute "appearance" and does not make the dismissal other than one for default. S. 622, Hyd. C. P. C. gives only a limited right of appeal. Under that section the appellate Court can entertain an appeal only if a review petition has been allowed contrary to the provisions of Ss. 617 and 619 of that Code, or when it is barred by time. Ss. 619 and 622 should be read together. It cannot be said that an appeal lies as a matter of course under S. 605 (30), for S. 622 controls the general provisions of S. 605. ILR (1951) Hyd 457. AIR 1951 Hyd 37 (38) (Pr. 3) (DB).

——O. 43, R, 1 (w)—Revision against order of review —R. 1 (w) is controlled by sub-r. (1) of R. 7 of O. 47. See Ibid, S. 115. AIR 1941 Madh-B. 3.

R. 1 (w) of O. 43 must be read subject to or along with R. 7 of O. 47 and an order granting review may be appealed from only on grounds set out in R. 7 of O. 47 and no other. The contravention of R. 4 referred to in O. 47, R, 1 (b) means a contravention of the proviso to sub-r. (2) of R. 4 of the same Order; but although only the said grounds can be set forth against the order granting the review as such in an appeal against the final decree or order passed consequent upon review, the appellate Court hearing such an appeal can exercise all the powers conferred on it by the relevant provisions of law allowing such an appeal. Hence the provision of the Code preventing a scrutiny of an order granting review except upon certain specified grounds is hardly likely to lead to any injustice which cannot be corrected nor is the original purpose of the Code of granting the power of review to all Courts to meet the ends of justice likely to be defeated. SYNOPSIS

1. Scope.
2. "Entitled to prefer an appeal."
3. "Who is unable to pay the fee required."
4. Application accompanied by a memorandum of appeal.
5. Subject to provisions relating to suits by paupers.
6. Sub-rule (2).
7. Power to grant time for payment of court-fee.
8. Effect of allowing application for leave to appeal as pauper.
9. Appeal.
10. Letters Patent appeal.
11. Limitation.
12. Revision.

1. Scope.

——O. 44, R. 1—Leave to appeal as a pauper—Permission under inherent powers. See Ibid, S. 151. AIR 1955 NUC (All) 3545 (DB).

——O. 44, R. 1 and O. 45, R. 7 — Applicability—Application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis to Supreme Court made to High Court—Supreme Court Rules, O. 12, R. 1—Allahabad High Court Rules, Ch. 23, R. 22.

An application for leave to appeal to Supreme Court was filed under Art. 133; and an application under O. 44, R. 1, C. P. Code for permission to appeal in forma pauperis was also filed. It therefore arose for decision whether the application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis would lie, Held: O. 44, read as a whole applies only to appeals entertainable by the High Court against the decisions of the subordinate Court. It does not apply to appeals to the Supreme Court from the decisions of the High Courts.

O. 45 is made applicable by O. 12, R. 1 of the Rules of the Supreme Court as also by R. 22 of Ch. 23 of the Rules of the Court, to applications for leave to appeal to Supreme Court. O. 44 is not made applicable; it is made applicable only to special leave to appeal before the Supreme Court. O. 45, R. 7, gives only a limited jurisdiction to the High Court to extend the time for furnishing security or for payment of printing charges. There is no provision enabling the High Court to order that they need not be deposited if the applicant was found to be a pauper.

An application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court in forma pauperis is not maintainable in the High Court. 1952 All L J 734 : 1953 All L W 5 : 1953 All W R (HC) 374: ILR (1954) 1 All 57: AIR 1953 All 115 (116) (Pr. 3).

——O. 44, R. 1 and O. 33, R. 10—Pauper appeals—Directions as to payment of court-fees—Power of Court.

Though O. 44, C. P. Code does not expressly contain any provision regarding directions to be given as to payment of court-fees, as the provisions of O. 33 apply to pauper appeals the appellate Court has power to direct the Court to calculate the court fee payable by the pauper and also direct which party has to pay it in accordance with the provisions of R. 10 of O. 33, C. P. Code. AIR 1952 All 173 (174) (Pr 3).

——O. 44, R. 1—Scope of—'Plaintiff succeeds in the suit', meaning of—Pauper appellant succeeding partly in appeal due to compromise - O. 33 R 10 attracted. See Ibid, O. 33, R. 10. AIR 1963 Guj 277.

——O. 44, R. 1, Hyd. C. P. Code, S. 478—Agreement to pay fees to pleader on successful termination of the case—Effect of.

A mere agreement undertaking to pay fees to a lawyer on the successful termination of the case would not amount to an interest having been created in the lawyer in the subject-matter of the suit within the meaning of S. 478, Hyderabad C. P. Code. ILR (1952) Hyd 64: AIR 1952 Hyd 157 (159) (Pt C) (Pr 5) (DB).

2. "Entitled to prefer an appeal."

——O. 44, R. 1 — Husband having two marriages — Suit by second wife for maintenance, in forma pauperis—Second wife cannot claim separate maintenance because in her case, husband has not "married again" — Claim rightly dismissed—Appeal in forma pauperis—Leave held rightly refused—Petition rejected and court-fee demanded—Order held legal. See also Hindu Married Women's Right to Separate Residence and Maintenance Act (1946), S. 2 (4). AIR 1955 N U C (All) 3549.

3. "Who is unable to pay the fee required."

——O. 44, R. 1—Appellant possessing land which he could not alienate because of S. 89 of the Tenancy Act for raising amount of court-fees—Appellant entitled to permission to appeal as pauper, 1965 Mah L J (Notes) 43.

——O. 44, Rr. 1 and 2 and O. 33, R. 1 — Who is unable to pay the fee required.

In the absence of evidence on the record to contradict the statement by the applicant that he had not sufficient funds he should be declared to be a pauper not able to pay the court-fees. Whether a person earning a particular amount per month should or could have saved sufficient funds for filing an appeal hereafter is not a matter into which the Court can enter into. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 2922 (DB).

——O. 44, R. 1—Pauper—Who is—Appellant able to pay court-fees—Inability to provide security for costs of respondent — Is pauper. See Supreme Court Rules (1950), O. 14, R. 2. AIR 1962 Guj 63.

4. Application accompanied by a memorandum of appeal.

——O. 44, R. 1—Leave to appeal under — Filing of copies of judgment and decree—Necessity.

There can be no application filed in Court for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, unless a copy of the judgment and the decree is also filed along with the memorandum of appeal. ILR (1958) 2 All 655 : AIR 1951 All 242 (243) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (DB).

——O. 44, R. 1—Application praying leave to appeal in forma pauperis — Memorandum must be accompanied by copies of judgment and decree.

The provisions of O. 41, R. 1 are imperative and according to this rule a memorandum of appeal shall be accompanied by a copy of the judgment and a copy of the decree appealed against. The provisions of O. 34, R. 1 are even more stringent, inasmuch as this rule lays down that the Court shall reject the application to prefer an appeal in forma pauperis unless, upon a perusal thereof and of the judgment and decree appealed from it sees reason to think that the decree is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law, or is otherwise erroneous or unjust. Thus, R. 1 of O. 44 makes it incumbent upon the applicant to show the Court that prima facie the decree appealed against is contrary to law, erroneous or unjust, and if the applicant has to show that just when he presents the application, it is necessary that he should file the copies of the judgment and the decree along with the application. 1954 B L J R 574; AIR 1955 Pat 301 (303) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (DB).

5. Subject to provisions relating to suits by paupers.

——O. 44, R. 1 and O. 33, R. 5 (c) — Application to file appeal in forma pauperis — Appellant disposing of property immediately after decree against him — Non-compliance with O. 33, R. 5 (c) — Permission cannot be granted.

The defendants who filed an appeal from a decree against them made an application under O. 44, R 1 for permission to file the appeal in forma pauperis. It appeared that immediately after the decree was passed the defendant sold away, by registered deed certain immovable properties. The lower appellate Court granted the permission on holding that the sale of property by defendant was to repay the loan incurred by him during the course of trial.

Held, that the defendants by selling away the properties after the judgment of the trial Court failed to comply with provisions of O. 33, R. 5 (c), C. P. Code and there was no other alternative for the Court of appeal than to reject the applications of the defendants for permission to appeal as paupers. 1961 B L J R 666.

6. Sub-rule (2).

——O. 44, R. 1, Proviso—Scope of.

The proviso enacts a condition precedent for entertaining an application and proceeding with it further. That condition is that the decree sought to be appealed from appears to be contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust. That being a duty cast on the Court there can be no question of hearing any party not even the appellant, before the Court proceeded to perform the duty. That was the law as it stood prior to its amendment in 1955.

Therefore where the Court on an application for leave to file an appeal in forma pauperis expressed the opinion that there was reason to believe that the decree sought to be appealed against was erroneous and issued a notice on the opposite party to show cause why the leave should not be granted it would not be open to the non-applicant to urge and the Court to again consider the question whether the decree was erroneous or not and reject the application on the ground that the decree was not erroneous. It was not open to the Court to do so even though it did not hear the non-applicant before it expressed its view on the question. ● ——O. 44, R. 1, Proviso (before amendment by Act 66 of 1956) and O. 44, R. 1 (2) (after amendment by Act 66 of 1956)—Scope—Application for leave to appeal as pauper — Notice to respondent—Respondent's right to show that decree is not contrary to law etc.

The first duty of the Court before which an application under O. 44, R. 1 is presented is to fix a date for the hearing of the application.

It is only after the Court has satisfied itself that the decree under appeal satisfies the conditions of the old proviso to O. 44, R. 1, or the present sub-r. (2) to O. 44, R. 1, as the case may be, that the notice in form No. 11 of Appendix G of Sch. 1 of the Code is to be issued or the application is to be sent down to the trial Court for enquiry under O. 33, R. 5, Cls. (a), (b), (c) and (e) of the Code after issuing a notice to the respondent and the Collector according to the form of notice referred to above. Where the Court has issued a notice upon the respondent to show cause why the applicant should not be permitted to file the appeal as a pauper, it must be presumed that the Court has applied its mind to the old proviso to O. 44, R. 1 or the present sub-r. (2) of O. 44, R. 1. The respondent will have the opportunity and the right to challenge the tentative satisfaction of the Court at the final hearing of the appeal. 58 Cal W N 367, Overruled. AIR 1956 Cal 530, Approved; AIR 1931 Pat 183; AIR 1934 All 1004 (FB); AIR 1958 Punj 437; AIR 1958 Raj 133; AIR 1937 Oudh 222, Diss. from. —— O. 44, R. 1, Proviso — Scope — Application to file appeal in forma pauperis — Notice issued to opposite party — Subsequently application rejected under proviso — Legality.

When a Court, before which an application to file an appeal in forma pauperis is made, does not reject the application in view of the proviso to that rule but issues notice on the opposite party to show cause why the application to prosecute the appeal as pauper should not be allowed, it is not open to the Court, at a later stage, to reject the application on the ground that under the proviso it is bound to reject it. ——O. 44, R. 1, Proviso — Scope of — Powers of Court.

The Court has jurisdiction to reject a petition at the ex parte hearing, if the Court finds that there is no prima facie case even issuing a notice upon the opposite party.

As a rule of jurisprudence ex parte orders should not be passed by a Court as final orders, without giving an opportunity to the parties affected to make their submissions thereon. For the purpose of issuing notices, a Court may at the preliminary stage, come to a decision, only as a preliminary one for issuing a Rule ; that cannot and ought not to be taken to be a final decision which would be binding on the opposite parties who have had no opportunity to make any submission before the Court. Hence the interpretation that the procedure envisaged under R. 1 of

O. 44 of the Civil P. C., is that when an application is filed by a person accompanied by a memorandum of appeal praying to be allowed to appeal as a pauper the Court is required, in the first instance, to peruse the application and the judgment and decree appealed from and to consider whether the decree is one contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or is otherwise erronenous or unjust as provided in the proviso to the said rule and it is only after the Court is so satisfied that a Rule may be issued by the Court for a decision in the presence of the opposite party as to whether the petitioners should be allowed to prefer the appeal in forma pauperis and therefore that after the Rule had been issued on the opposite parties the Court must be taken to have already been satisfied that the decree against which the appeal is to be preferred was contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or was otherwise erroneous or unjust and would thereafter be confined only to an enquiry as to the pauperism of the applicant cannot be accepted. If that interpretation is given effect to, the position will be that a decision is reached by the Court before the opposite parties have appeared in the case and while dealing with the application at the ex parte stage the opposite parties are denied the fundamental right of being heard before a final decision is made against them. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 2922 (DB).

——O. 44, R. 1, Proviso and O. 33, R. 7 — Issue of notice to respondents—If precludes consideration of the applicability of proviso.

The procedure as laid down in O. 33, though not reproduced in terms in O. 44, has been made applicable by specific reference in R. 1 of O. 44.

It is unquestionable that under O. 33 even though at the preliminary stage the Court did not reject the petition under R. 5 of Order, it is open to the Court to hear objections raised by the opposite parties and the Government Pleader, even on points which arise on R. 5, and arrive at a decision that the application is not maintainable. The Court would be justified and would be acting within its jurisdiction to pass the final order when the final hearing takes place in the presence of the opposite parties.

Therefore and in view of the fact that on the face of it the proviso to O. 44, R. 1 would be attracted only if the applicant is found by the Court to be a pauper and there is no occasion for the Court to consider at the initial stage, when an application is filed under O. 44, whether the decree is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust and that if the applicant is not a pauper, the Court is not called upon to enter into a consideration as required under the last portion of the proviso. The Court would not be debarred from considering the question, whether the decree complained against is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust, after giving a hearing to the opposite party and also to the Government pleader, if notice has been given to him merely because it issued a rule calling upon the opposite party to show cause why the petitioner should not be allowed to file an appeal in forma pauperis. Case-law relied on. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 2922 (DB).

——O. 44, R. 1, Proviso — Scope.

If the Court has reason to think that the decree is contrary to law, that will be sufficient under proviso. It is not for the Court for the purpose of the enquiry to hold that the decree is contrary to law. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 2922 (DB).

——O. 44, R. 1 and O. 33, Rr. 5, 7 — Proviso to the rule.

The difference in the tests to be applied between an application filed to sue as a pauper and an application filed for permission to prosecute an appeal in forma pauperis is fundamental and well marked. While in the case of an application by a pauper for permission to sue, he is to follow a particular procedure, and with regard to the merits of the claim in the proposed suit no enquiry is to be made by the Court, although the Court is to look into whether there is a cause of action in the case of an application by a pauper for permission to file an appeal in forma pauperis, he is to satisfy the Court, as required in the proviso to Rule 1 of Order 44, that the Court has reason to think that the decree is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust. In the case of a pauper appeal, therefore, the Court is called upon to examine the merits of the appeal and not merely whether the pauper has got a cause of action. The proviso is a mandatory one, and contemplates that on a perusal of the application, the judgment and decree, and nothing else, the Court would come to the view that the decree is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 2922 (DB).

——O. 44, R. 1, Proviso — Applicability — Decision based on appreciation of evidence.

Where the whole question depends on the evidence as led by the parties and the decision as it appears from the judgment depends as to which set of evidence is to be believed and which set is to be disbelieved, that being a pure question of fact, dependent upon the appreciation of the evidence, it cannot be said that the decision is contrary to law, or to some usage having the force of law. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 2922 (DB).

——O. 44, R. 1, Proviso — Pauper appeal—Opportunity to party to show that decree is contrary to law must be given.

An application under S. 609, Hyderabad Civil P. C, (corresponding to O. 44, R. 1, Indian Civil P. C) is a judicial proceeding and the order made thereon should be based upon the exercise of a judicial discretion on a proper consideration of the relevant material. Thus under S. 609 of the Hyderabad Civil P. C., reasonable opportunity of being heard must be given to the parties who will be affected by the order. The mere absence of an express provision for hearing the applicant is no justification for refusing to hear him. ILR (1952) Hyd 64 : AIR 1952 Hyd 157 (DB).

——O. 44, R. 1 — Order for the enquiry into the pauperism of the appellants directed to be made by the appellate Court — Court must be presumed to have admitted the petition and saw good reason to think that the decree was contrary to law : AIR 1929 Pat 27. Foll. ILR (1952) Hyd 64 : AIR 1952 Hyd 157 (DB).

——O. 44, Rr. 1, 2 ; App. G. ; Form No. 11 — Application for leave to appeal as pauper — Respondent is not entitled to notice — Notice to respondent issued — Respondent is not entitled to say that decree sought to be appealed against is not contrary to law —He can only contest the fact of pauperism of applicant.

Unless the Court sees reason to think that the decree is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust, it is bound to reject the application for leave to appeal as pauper. So the very issuance of notice to the respondent and the Government pleader after hearing the applicant's counsel tantamounts to a record that the conditions requisite for the issue of notice were present in the case. It is not open to the Court to reconsider the matter at a subsequent stage and say that the decree is correct and therefore no notice ought to have been issued.

The next stage in the consideration of the application is the enquiry into the pauperism of the applicant. An opportunity is given to both sides to represent their views and to offer their evidence. It is only a consideration of the status of the applicant that is contemplated in this notice. (App. G, Form No. 11). If no enquiry is to be held, no notice need be issued to the respondent before granting leave to appeal as pauper.

Order 44, does expressly provide for a notice to the respondent on an application for leave to appeal as a pauper. A notice is only implied in the expression 'inquiry' in R. 2. The form No. 11, App G can only refer to cases where notice is given with reference to the sections or the rules in the Code : AIR 1931 Pat 183 (FB) and AIR 1934 All 1004 (FB) and AIR 1937 Oudh 222 (FB) and AIR 1936 Mad 842, Dissented from ; AIR 1932 Mad 523 and AIR 1956 Cal 530, Rel. on. 1960 Ker L J 1177 : ILR (1960) Ker 1482 : 1961 Ker L T 38 : AIR 1961 Ker 309 (310) (Prs 3, 4, 5, 6).

——O. 44, R. 1, Proviso—Proviso mandatory—Pauper appeal.

The proviso to O. 44, R 1, Civil Procedure Code, is mandatory and is a necessary safeguard introduced by the Legislature for the benefit of the litigants who find themselves opposed by paupers. To provide a safeguard against the proviso being overlooked, the Judge admitting a pauper appeal should express and record briefly the reasons on which the leave proceeds. Though it will not be proper for the Court to express definitely the conclusions about this proviso there must be some mention about the same that the appellate Court has considered the proviso. 1960 M P L J (Notes) 29.

——O. 44, R. 1, clause (2) – Leave to appeal in forma pauperis - Order rejecting application and directing payment of court-fee without giving a hearing to the appellant – Validity.

O. 44, R. 1 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code provides that the appellate Court shall fix a day for hearing the applicant or his pleader before rejecting an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis It is not enough if the Court peruses the judgments of the lower Court in Chambers and passes an order. In the absence of a hearing as required by the rule, the order cannot be sustained. (1965) 2 Mad L J 517 : AIR 1966 Mad 52 (Pr 2).

——O. 44, R. 1 (2), S. 152 — Appeal filed in forma pauperis—Court issuing notice to respondent without complying with R. 1 (2) — Question under R. 1 (2) considered in presence of respondent—Court held has inherent jurisdiction to correct its error — Order held valid—AIR 1936 Mad 842, Rel. on. 74 Mad L W 766 : (1962) 1 Mad L J 420.

——O 44, R. 1, Proviso — Appellate Court, competency of, to reject pauper petition without assigning reason.

An appellate Court is bound to reject under the proviso to R. 1 an application to file an appeal in forma pauperis if upon a perusal thereof, and of the judgment and decree appealed from, it sees no reason to think that the decree is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust. When it hears the counsel for the petitioner and rejects the petition, it must be presumed to have applied its mind to the arguments of the counsel and the facts of the case before rejecting the petition. The fact that the points urged by the counsel who appeared for the petitioner are not set out or discussed or that no reasons have been given while rejecting the application is no reason for interfering in revision with the order of rejection. AIR 1923 Mad 519; AIR 1936 Mad 101 and AIR 1942 Mad 478, Foll. AIR 1931 Mad 198, Not foll. 1951 Mad W N 273 : AIR 1952 Mad 178 (Pr 4).

——O. 44, R. 1 — Notice to respondent after admission of application—Respondent cannot urge at that stage that case is not fit for admission.

Once the application to prefer an appeal in forma pauperis has been admitted, it is not open to the respondent who receives notice after admission to urge that the application should not have been admitted and the same should have been rejected in limine, on the ground that the decree of the Court below is not contrary to law or some usage having the force of law or otherwise not erroneous or unjust.

A duty is cast by O. 44, R. 1 (2) on the judge upon hearing the applicant or his pleader and upon the perusal of the judgment and decree appealed from to determine whether the case is one fit for admission or not. The matter entirely rests with the Court either to accept or to reject the application on the ground that the judgment and decree is not contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or is otherwise not erroneous and unjust. The wordings of the section clearly indicate that at that stage it was not in the contemplation of the Legislature that enacted this provision to give opportunity to the respondent to be heard before an order of accepting or rejecting the petition was passed.

There is no vested right in the respondent who has the benefit of a judgment in his favour as there is in the case of a successful party who has the benefit of the opposite party's claim being barred by limitation, and therefore, there is no force in the contention that he should be given an opportunity before his right is taken away. The very fact that an appeal is filed against the judgment indicates that the matter is sub judice and the merits of the case are yet to be decided by the superior Court.

Moreover, after the issue of pauperism is decided, the respondent will have an opportunity of contesting the whole matter at the final stage when the appeal is heard provided the appellant succeeds in proving that he can file the appeal in forma pauperis. Hence no prejudice is caused to the respondent, if he is not allowed an opportunity of being heard on the question at that stage of issue of notice.

To hold otherwise would mean that the order of admission itself is under reconsideration and that would be an untenable position. ('62) 40 Mys L J 423.

——O. 44, R. 1—Proviso — Scope - Strict compliance —Duty of Court.

In considering an application to prefer an appeal in forma pauperis the High Court can only look into the application filed by the petitioner and the judgment and decree and, on perusal of them, if the Court comes to the conclusion that the decree of the lower Court is not contrary to law or is not otherwise erroneous or unjust, then the Court is bound to reject the application.

The proviso to O. 44, R. 1 gives the Court no option. No injustice can result by such strict adherence to the terms of the proviso and consequent refusal of leave to appeal in forma pauperis, as it is open to an applicant to pay the court fee and ask the Court to examine the entire records and to come to a conclusion. I L R (1956) Mys 136 : AIR 1957 Mys 11 (12) (Prs 4, 7).

——O. 44, R. 1, O. 33, R. 1—Appeal filed along with application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis—Question whether decree sought to be appealed against was contrary to law etc. can be considered.

In an appeal filed along with an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, the respondents would be entitled after notice to come and raise the question whether or not the decree sought to be appealed against is contrary to law or some usage having the force of law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust. The amendment of Rule 1 of Order 44 has no bearing on the question whether or not, the Court, in not outright rejecting the appeal, is precluded from going further into the question whether the judgment sought to be appealed from is prima facie right or wrong, after the opposite party has appeared in response to notice. AIR 1934 Lah 72; AIR 1958 Punj 437, Foll. ('58) 67 Pun L R 1129.

——O. 44. R. 1—Scope of inquiry — Application for leave to appeal—Notice—Opposite party if can show that judgment sought to be appealed against is not prima facie contrary to law.

Both under the original proviso and the new sub-r. (2) it is clearly the duty of the Court to examine the judgment straightway and decide whether it is prima facie right or wrong. If the judgment is prima facie correct, then the application must be dismissed without any further ado. If the Court comes to the conclusion that the judgment is prima facie wrong it will issue notice to the opposite party, and it is quite wrong and unjustified to hold that the judgment has only to be considered after the question whether the applicant is a pauper or not has been decided.

Once the Court has perused the judgment and found it prima facie wrong and has issued notice, the respondent ought not to be heard at all on the merits of the case unless and until leave has been granted and the appeal is heard as such. ——O. 44, R. 1—Conditional leave to defend granted under O. 37, R. 2 — Condition not observed — Suit decreed—Leave to appeal in forma pauperis — It can be granted.

Where the judgment appealed against was simply a formal order to the effect that since the defendant had failed to deposit the sum in suit and costs in Court within the specified period, on which condition alone she was allowed to defend the suit under O. 37, R. 3, C. P. Code, the suit was decreed.

Held, that even if the order by which this condition of deposit of suit amount and cost was imposed on the defendant were to be treated as part of the judgment under appeal, there was nothing prima facie contrary to law or otherwise erroneous or unjust in it, in order to entitle the defendant to appeal in forma pauperis. ——O. 44, R. 1—Proviso—Decision contrary to law.

Where the decision sought to be appealed from proceeds upon questions of fact, the case does not satisfy the requirements of O. 44, R. 1, Proviso and the Court acts strictly in accordance with O. 44, R. 1, Proviso in rejecting an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis. 53 Pun L R 19 : AIR 1951 Punj 30 (DB).

——O. 44, R. 1—Proviso — Procedure—Rejection of application after issue of notice — Validity.

When an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis is presented, ordinarily the appellate court must make up its mind at once whether the decree is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust. The mere fact, however, that the application is not rejected at once and a notice is issued to the opposite party would not mean that the Court would be precluded from rejecting the application if the opposite party is able to satisfy the Court that the applicant's contention was wrong and that the decree is really not contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or that it is not otherwise erroneous or unjust. The Court should proceed to enquire into the pauperism of the applicant only after it has definitely come to the conclusion that the application is not fit to be rejected on the above grounds. ——O. 44, R. 1—Time given for payment of court-fee on rejection of leave to appeal as a pauper—Right of respondent to challenge admission of appeal.

When time is given for payment of court-fee on rejection of leave to appeal as a pauper, the appeal though deemed to have been filed when the appeal memo was filed along with the application for leave to sue as a pauper, it is subject to the right of the respondent to challenge the admission of the appeal where it is made ex parte. But it can be challenged only on the ground that the original application for leave to appeal as a pauper was itself mala fide or fraudulent, the burden of proving which is on the respondent. Limitation Act, Art. 182 (2), Art. 162 (2) of Trav. Lim. Act.

There is no provision in the Code to the effect that when permission to appeal as a pauper is refused the memorandum of appeal should be rejected. The Court may, as in the case of an application for permission to sue as a pauper, instead of rejecting the application, direct the applicant to pay the requisite court-fee within a time to be fixed by the Court and if the direction is complied with the memorandum of appeal filed along with the application will be numbered and registered as an appeal.

But that does not mean that there is already an appeal and that the Court merely allows it to proceed in the ordinary manner. The memorandum of appeal becomes an appeal by reason of the order of the Court although for purposes of limitation the appeal will be deemed to have been filed on the date of the presentation of the application. The mere presentation of a memorandum of appeal along with the application does not amount to filing an appeal and so long as the memorandum of appeal is not numbered or registered, it cannot be said that there has been an appeal in the case within the meaning of Art. 182 (2). ILR 6 All 438, AIR 1951 All 79 (FB), AIR 1934 Mad 303, AIR 1938 Cal 533 and A I R 1952 Trav-Co 493, Rel. on. ILR 16 Cal 250 and AIR 1931 Pat 422, Dissented from.

The position will, however, be different if after the appeal is admitted and registered it is rejected for non-payment of court-fee or on the ground that the appeal was filed out of time. Even if the appeal was wrongly admitted and registered it cannot be said that there has been no appeal. An appeal once admitted is an appeal for purposes of Art. 182 (2), Limitation Act, for whatever reason it may be subsequently dismissed. AIR 1932 P C 165, Ref. Travancore-Cochin State v. P. 8. Effect of allowing application for leave to appeal as pauper.

——O. 44, Rr. 1 and 2 — Leave to appeal in forma pauperis granted — Admission of appeal—Court's power to reject application later.

When once an application under O. 44, R. 2 is accepted, it is not competent for the Court to reject that application unless it be by way of review. The question, whether an application comes within the purview of O. 44, R. 2, or not, is one that has to be decided before the application under O. 44, R. 1 is allowed.

It is permissible for the High Court to issue notice before the application is allowed. But after the appellant is permitted to file the appeal in forma pauperis it is not open to the respondent who had received the notice after the admission of the appeal to reopen that question. 1960 Andh L T 772 : (1960) 2 Andh W R 303 : AIR 1961 Andh Pra 65 (65, 66) (Prs 6, 7) (DB).

——O. 44, R. 1—Appeal filed with application to appeal as pauper — Application rejected and time allowed under S. 149, to pay court-fee — Appeal admitted ex parte — Respondent if can challenge admission of appeal.

Where after the dismissal of the appellant's application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, time was granted to him under S. 149, to pay the court-fee, the appeal should be deemed to have been filed when the memo. of appeal was presented without the court-fees along with the application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis subject to the qualification that if the order of admission of appeal is passed ex parte it may be challenged by the respondent at the hearing if not before. But the only ground on which it can be successfully challenged is that the original application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis was mala fide or fraudulent. The burden of showing this is on the respondent. Where the appellant's original application was mala fide the appeal must be deemed to have been filed on the date when the court-fees were paid. 12. Revision.

——O. 44, R. 1 — Rejection of application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis—Power of Court—Revision, interference in.

A Court is bound to reject an application for leave to file on appeal in forma pauperis, if on a perusal thereof and of the judgment and decree appealed from, it sees no reason to think that the decree is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law or is otherwise erroneous or unjust. It is not even necessary for the appellate Court to hear the petitioner in a pauper appeal before rejecting the appeal or to grant appellant time for paying the court-fee. So, where the appellate Court hears the counsel for the petitioner and rejects the petition it must be presumed to have applied its mind to the arguments of the learned counsel and the facts of the case and the mere fact that no detailed reasons were given for rejection is no proof that the appellate Court did not apply its mind to the facts of the case or the arguments urged. Any interference in revision under S. 115 of the Civil P. C. with such an order would not be justified. ORDER 44, RULE 2

——O. 44, Rr. 2 and 1 — Applicatian accepted—Rejection—Power of Court.

When once an application under O. 44, R. 2, Civil P. C., is accepted, it is not competent for the Court, to reject that application unless it be by way of review. The question whether an application comes within the purview of O. 44, R. 2 or not is one that has to be decided before the application under O. 44, R. 1, is allowed. But when once an order has been passed finally, it is not open to impeach that order except by way of review.

In an application under O, 44, R. 2, it is permissible for the High Court to issue notice before the application is allowed. But that is not the same thing as saying that after the appellant is permitted to file an appeal in forma pauperis it is open to the respondent who had received the notice after the admission of the appeal to reopen the question. The two situations are different and distinct. (1960) 2 Andh W R 303 : 1960 Andh L T 772 : A I R 1961 Andh Pra 65 (65, 66) (Prs 6, 7) (DB).

——O. 45, Rr. 1, 13; S. 109—Final order—Meaning—Order quashing certain proceedings passed by High Court in writ petition — (Constitution of India, Art. 215.)

Per Desai, J.—A 'final order' within the meaning of O. 45, R. 1 must be an order as defined in S. 2 (14) of the Code, i. e., it must be a formal expression of a decision of a Civil Court. Where the High Court in a writ petition passes an order quashing certain orders of the consolidation authorities under U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act (5 of 1954), it is not an order of a civil Court, because a High Court is a Court of record created by the Constitution, and not a civil Court. Civil Courts are inferior Courts created by the States through their local Acts. A I R 1957 All 495, Rel. on.

The word "decree" includes a final order, but an order is not final if it does not bind parties. 1957 All W R (H C) 268 : A I R 1957 All 505 (517) (Pt K) (Pr 21) (DB).

ORDER 45, RULE 2

——O. 45, R. 2 and O. 47, R. 1 — Cancellation of leave to appeal to Supreme Court — Effect — Neither review of order nor fresh application for leave is competent. See Supreme Court Rules (1950), O. 12, R. 3. AIR 1962 Andh Pra 245 (DB).

——O. 45, R. 2 — Certificate cancelled under O. 12, R. 3, Supreme Court Rules — Whether fresh application under O. 45, maintainable.

When once leave to file an appeal to the Supreme Court has been granted, the further stages of the appeal are governed by the Supreme Court Rules except in relation to matters specifically mentioned in O. 45, Civil P. C. Thereafter the High Court is divested of jurisdiction to deal with anything connected with the appeal except as provided in O. 45. Order 38 of the Supreme Court Rules vests power of review only in the Supreme Court while O. 45 of these Rules clothes that Court with inherent jurisdiction. No such power is extended to the High Court under the Supreme Court Rules. There is nothing in the Civil P. C. which warrants the conclusion that a second application could be filed for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court after certificate was cancelled under O. 12, R. 3, Supreme Court Rules. Therefore, a second petition is inadmissible under O. 45. R. 2, Civil P. C. 1961 Andh L T 926 : (1962) 1 Andh W R 24 : AIR 1962 Andh Pra 245 (246, 247) (Prs 6, 12, 14, 16) (DB).

It is not permissible for a party to file an application asking for a review of judgment or leave to appeal against that judgment to the Supreme Court. If the applicant is advised that he has sufficient grounds to ask for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court he has to file a separate application therefor. Such leave has to be asked for on grounds which are altogether different from those on which a review can be sought. The two reliefs cannot be sought in one and the same application. ORDER 45, RULE 4

——O. 45, R. 4 — Writ petition dismissed on ground that petition is concluded by judgment in previous day's writ petition—Decision not by same judgment — No consolidation will be allowed.

Plaintiffs in the six suits filed six different writ petitions. They were numbered differently. The High Court dismissed one of them on 6-10-58. The other five petitions were dismissed on the next day by a short order. Each petition involved the same question for determination, but different petitioners, different respondents, different land, different leases granted in favour of the petitioners and different entries in the village papers in favour of the different respondents. The cause of action in each suit was different. Value of the subject-matter in each petition was below Rs. 20,000 but taken together it exceeded Rs. 20,000. In an application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court, it was sought to consolidate these petitions in one petition under O. 45, R. 4.

Held, it was not possible to hold that the six writ petitions were decided by the same judgment and it follows that these writ petitions could not be ordered to be consolidated under O. 45, R. 4, Civil P. C.

The appropriate meaning of the word 'same' in R. 4 seems to be 'one'. The identity of two separate judgments will not make them one and the same. 1959 All L J 594 : ILR (1959) 2 All 245 : AIR 1960 All 133 (134, 135, 136) (Prs 6, 7, 12, 15) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 4—Consolidation of suits — Entry in a Roznama—If proof of.

——O. 45, R. 4 — Involving substantially the same questions.

The expression 'involving substantially the same questions' means, not that the principal question is common or that the majority of the questions are so, but that all the questions are common and basically the same, raising the same issue of law and fact. The fact that there is a question common to all of a number of suits, would not entitle an appellant to an order for consolidation, if there are other questions which are not common.

Where three suits for setting aside three different sales were disposed of by a common judgment and the regularity of each sale was sought to be proved by separate evidence which had necessarily to be separately adjudged and each of the three proposed appeals to the Supreme Court related to the sufficiency and regularity of the service and validity of the sale.

Held, that the appeals did not involve substantially the same questions so as to allow consolidation under O. 45, R. 4. A I R 1939 Mad 734, Appl. 57 Cal W N 933 : AIR 1954 Cal 289 (291) (Pt B) (Pr 11) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 4—Consolidation of suits.

The power to order consolidation conferred by O. 45, R. 4 is only discretionary and when a petitioner has prayed for consolidation of appeals, which could not possibly be consolidated, and insisted on an order for consolidation by a lengthy argument when at last in the course of his reply offers to prune and edit his appeals, the Court will not permit him to do so, only to enable him to take appeals of small value to the Supreme Court which the Constitution does not intend ordinarily to be taken there. In such a case, therefore the prayer for consolidation must be rejected. 57 Cal W N 933 : A I R 1954 Cal 289 (291) (Pt C) (Pr 11) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 4—Applicability — 'Same judgment'—Consolidation—(Constitution of India, Art. 133).

If the judgments are substantially the same consolidation can be ordered. When a Judge writes a single statement of the grounds and makes those grounds applicable to different decrees, it is the same judgment for the purposes of the 4th Rule of the 45th Order of the Code. The word 'same' does not always mean 'identical' only. The emphasis in the rule is not on different cases or suits but on different judgments that is to say, the statement of the reasons for the decision. 1956 Nag L J 617 : 1956 M P L J 97 : AIR 1956 Nag 276 (277) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 4 - Consolidation of suits—Suits heard and decided by main judgment in one case in High Court in appeal — But by different judgments, in lower Courts — Though point decided similar, parties in suits different — Consolidation of suits not permissible.

Where the two suits involving different parties, belonging to different castes and different villages are tried by two different Courts in first instance on a common point whether a widow can inherit her husband's estate even herself remaining unchaste, those suits cannot be allowed to be consolidated under O. 45, R. 4, simply because those cases are heard together by the High Court delivering only one main judgment deciding both the appeals. ——O. 45, R. 4 — Has no application where appeals and not suits were consolidated.

Order 45, R. 4, applies only to those cases where the suits themselves have been determined and decided by a common judgment and involve substantially the same questions for determination. Where the two suits were different and separate and had been treated separately at all earlier stages, but it is only at the stage of appeals under S. 18 (1) of Rajasthan High Court Ordinance, against two judgments of two Single Judges, that the appeals were heard together and were disposed of by a single judgment, O. 45, R. 4 has no application. In such a case no leave to appeal can be granted under S. 110 read with O. 45, R. 4 against the judgment. 1961 Raj L W 490 : I L R (1961) 11 Raj 735.

ORDER 45, RULE 5

——O. 45, R. 5 and O. 26, R. 9 — Investigation as to value of subject-matter of suit by Court of first instance — Appointment of Commissioner — Whether permissible.

Order 45, R. 5 and O. 26. R. 9, show that it is permissible for the Court of first instance to appoint a Commissioner for the purpose of ascertaining the market value of the property under O. 45, R. 5 but it must determine the value of the property and should not leave it to another agency. Where the report of the Court shows that it considered the evidence of the witnesses examined by the Commissioner, the physical feature of the land in question, as also the value given by various witnesses, it cannot be said that the Court depended only on the report of the Commissioner. 1960 Andh L T 820 : AIR 1961 Andh Pra 407 (408) (Pr 6).

——O. 45, R. 5 –Misstatement as to valuation in plaint or memorandum of appeal — Not a bar to consideration of application for determination of value of subject-matter –Exceptions to rule—Value of subject-matter means real or market value. See Constitution of India, Art. 133 (1) (a). I L R (1965) Cut 623 : AIR 1966 Orissa 89.

——O. 45, R. 5 –Suit by trustees for declaration that temple and its properties were private and not public endowment—Plaint giving valuation of Rs. 5,000 for jurisdiction only as fixed court-fee was payable—Suit decreed by trial Court—Reversal of decree—Leave to appeal under Art. 133(1) of Constitution with application under O. 45, R. 5 for determining real value of subject-matter of dispute—Clause (a) and not Cl. (b) of Art. 133 (1) applies — Trial Court directed to determine value of beneficiary interest of plaintiff. See Constitution of India, Art. 133 (1) (a). A I R 1966 Orissa 89.

ORDER 45, RULE 7

SYNOPSIS

(Civil P. C. (1908), O. 45, R. 7.)

1. Scope of the rule.
2. "Date of the decree", meaning of.
3. Security and deposit.
4. Form of security – Proviso.
5. Extension of time.
6. Transmission of record.
7. Delay.

1. Scope of the rule.

——O. 45, R. 7 — Scope — Supreme Court appeal — Maintainability — (Supreme Court Rules, O. 12, R. 1 and O. 14) — (High Court Rules and Orders (All.), Chap. 23, R. 22). See Ibid, O. 44, R. 1. AIR 1953 All 115.

——O. 45, Rr. 7 and 8 — Grant of certificate for appeal to Supreme Court—Further petition of appeal — Form of — Procedure — (Constitution of India, Art. 132 (1)—(Supreme Court Rules, O. 12, R. 1).

The second petition made in a case under Art. 132 must make out to the Court, taking Supreme Court matters, that a certificate which entitles the intending appellant to appeal to the Supreme Court has been granted. The prayer in such petition should be for an order that a formal certificate be drawn up and be issued. The petition should not be an ex parte petition, because questions of limitation and of the proper constitution of the proposed appeal will be relevant questions and it is obviously necessary and proper that the respondents should be before the Court when the final order directing the issue of the certificate is made. But there can be no question of demanding or depositing the amount of security or the amount of costs for the preparation and transmission of the paper book. Order 45, R. 7 will have to be applied by reference to the date of the order made for the issue of a formal certificate as the date of the grant of the certificate and not the date on which the certificate was recorded by the trial Judge in his judgment. 61 Cal W N 600 : A I R 1957 Cal 528 (531) (Pt E) (Prs 14, 15) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 7—Reason of rule.

The reason of the rule appears to be to expedite Supreme Court appeals and to minimise the time occupied in satisfying the preliminary requirements. I L R (1953) Cut 649 : 19 Cut L T 520 : A I R 1954 Orissa 71 (74) (Pt C) (Pr 8) (DB).

2. "Date of the decree", meaning of.

——O. 45, R. 7—Date of decree.

There is no warrant for excluding the time occupied in getting a certified copy of the decree. I L R (1953) Cut 649 : 19 Cut L T 520 : A I R 1954 Orissa 71 (73) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

3. Security and deposit.

——O. 45, R. 7; O. 33, R. 1—Supreme Court appeal —Maintainability.

Leave to appeal to the Supreme Court under Art. 133 of the Constitution in forma pauperis is not maintainable. Order 45, R. 7 makes it obligatory on High Court to insist on deposit even if the applicant is found to be a pauper. 4 Moo Ind App 114 (PC), Not considered; 17 Cal L J 381; AIR 1918 Pat 303; AIR 1918 Mad 18 and AIR 1948 Lah 1, Ref. 1952 All L J 734: I L R (1954) 1 All 57 : 1953 All W R (HC) 374: AIR 1953 All 115 (116, 117) (Prs 2, 3, 6) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 7 — Security deposited not in accordance with O. 45, R. 7 — Effect — Supreme Court Rules (1950), O. 12, R. 3.

The High Court has no jurisdiction to extend the time for depositing the proper security under O. 45, R. 7 even though the bond was furnished in time but was found defective — In such cases the certificate granting leave to appeal must be cancelled under O 12, R. 3 of the Supreme Court Rules. ('50) 54 Cal W N 479 (DB).

[Overruled in AIR 1961 Cal 483 (FB).]

——O. 45, R. 7 and S. 145 — Money deposited in Court—Appeal preferred to Privy Council rejected — Loss to be borne by respondent.

The loss of money deposited in Court under the provisions of O. 45, R. 7 of the Code should be borne by the person for whose benefit the deposit was made, when he becomes entitled to it by the appeal preferred by the other party being rejected. If on account of the partition of the country the money has been lost or has ceased to become available to the person for whose benefit it was deposited the loss must be borne by him for there is no known principle of law or equity which would exempt him from liability to bear the loss, if any loss has in fact been sustained. ——O. 45, R. 7 and S. 145 — Money deposited in Court—Court holds it for successful party.

Money deposited by a party to an action under the provisions of a statute or in compliance with an order of the Court to await the outcome of litigation is deemed to be in the custody of the law and is not liable either to attachment or to execution. It ceases to be the property of the person by whom it was paid and is said to belong to the person who is found eventually to be entitled thereto. ——O. 45, R. 7—Security by deposit — Object of — Right of decree-holder to proceed against other property.

The security deposit under R. 7 of O. 45 of the Code is the property of the appellant and in case of the success of the appeal has to be returned to him. It is taken merely by way of security for liability for costs which might arise in case the appeal failed and hence it is open to the decree-holder to relinquish security and recover the costs of the appeal awarded to him under the order of His Majesty in Council from the judgment-debtor by proceeding against his person and property. AIR 1952 Punj 42 (43) (Pr 10).

4. Form of security—Proviso.

——O. 45, R. 7 (1) — Supreme Court Rules (1950), O. 12, R. 3 — Power to accept security other than cash or Government securities.

The High Court has power to accept security in immovable property instead of cash or Government securities, if that is tendered in time permitted by O. 45, R. 7 and if it is an order which the justice of the case requires, though no application was made to the Court for permission to deposit such security in accordance with the proviso to O. 45, R. 7 (1). 54 Cal W N 476 : ILR (1951) 1 Cal 472 : AIR 1950 Cal 318 (319) (Prs 5, 9, 6, 10) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 7, Proviso — Form of security for costs —Order as to—Time for passing.

An order under the first proviso to O. 45, R. 7, Civil P. C. can only be made at the time of passing the order for granting the certificate. If an appellant wishes to furnish a security in any other form than in cash or Government securities he must apply for an order to that effect and obtain it at the time of passing the order for granting the certificate. If he fails to apply at the time it cannot be granted afterwards. ——O. 45, R. 7 (1), Proviso — Form of security — Application to vary nature of security—Crucial date.

The crucial date for making an application to the Court to vary the nature of the security under O. 45, R. 7 (1), Proviso, is the date on which the order granting the certificate is passed, as distinguished from the date on which the actual certificate is signed. ——O. 45, R. 7, Proviso I — 'At the time of granting the certificate.'

The expression 'at the time of granting the certificate' in the proviso should be read as being limited to the time when the Court orders the issue of a certificate. ILR (1953) Cut 649 : 19 Cut L T 520 : AIR 1954 Orissa 71 (74) (Pt D) (Pr 8) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 7, Proviso I — Substitution of property security.

Obiter.—The averment that the applicant expected to raise money by mortgaging certain properties and the creditor declined to advance a loan at the last moment cannot be accepted as sufficient excuse for the delay in filing the application for substituting property security in place of cash security. ILR (1953) Cut 649 : 19 Cut L T 520 : AIR 1954 Orissa 71 (74) (Pt E) (Pr 9) (DB).

5. Extension of time.

●——O. 45, R. 7 — Security for costs — Failure to furnish—High Court's jusisdiction to extend time — Supreme Court Rules (1950), O. 12, R. 3.

The High Court has jurisdiction to extend time for furnishing security under O. 45, R. 7, Civil P. C. O. 12, R. 3 of the Supreme Court Rules also leads to the same conclusion. The last clause of R. 3 refers to such further or other order as the justice of the case requires, and that must necessarily mean an order other than, and different from, the order cancelling the certificate. Failure to furnish the security or to make the deposit in time does not in every csse lead to cancellation of certificate. Despite the said failure some further or other order may still be passed by the Court in its discretion and that must mean an order condoning the default and granting further time to furnish the security or to make the required deposit. 39 Cal W N 651 and 44 Cal W N 920, Overruled. ●——O. 45, R. 7 — Supreme Court Rules (1950), O. 12, R. 3—Order for cash security under O. 45, R. 7 — Subsequent application to alter form of security—Power of High Court.

Under O. 45, R. 7, Civil P. C., the High Court has no power to alter the form of security to be furnished after the certificate is issued. But the provisions of O. 45, R. 7 are only directory and not mandatory. No penalty is provided for failure to comply with their requirements. When read with O. 12, R. 3 of the Supreme Court Rules, it is clear that the High Court has power to permit an applicant, who obtained leave to appeal to the Supreme Court, to furnish security in immovable property when he did not ask for that relief at the time the certificate was issued. Thota Pitshaiah v. M. Suryanarayanacharyulu, 1956 Andh L T 160 : 1956 Andh W R 106 : 69 Mad L W (Andh) 72 : ILR (1956) Andh 55 : AIR 1956 Andh 120 (121, 122, 123) (Prs 7, 9, 22) (FB).

——O. 45, R. 7 — Time for furnishing security — Extension beyond 60 days—Power of Court.

When O. 45, R. 7 itself fixes a limit to the period by which the prescribed period of 90 days may be extended, it means that the Court has not the power to grant any further extension. The Court cannot extend the period by more than 60 days in any circumstance. 1961 All L J 60: 1961 All W R (H C) 117: AIR 1961 All 415 (416) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 7—Time prescribed under—Extension of — Supreme Court Rules O. 12, R. 3 — (Supreme Court Rules (1950), O. 12, R. 3).

Order 12, R. 3 of the Supreme Court Rules does not deal with the question of extension of time but it empowers the Court to cancel the certificate and to give such directions as to the costs of the appeal and the security given by the appellant as it thinks fit or to make such further or other order as the justice of the case requires. The last portion of the rule has relation to the earlier part in which it is said that directions are to be given as to the costs of the appeal etc. A rule of this kind cannot be interpreted as prevailing over the express provisions of O. 45, R. 7, Civil P. C. which limit the power of the Court to grant extension. AIR 1954 Orissa 71, Dissented from. ILR (1956) 2All 100 : AIR 1956 All 477 (Pr 2) (DB).

●——O. 45, R. 7 (as amended by Act 26 of 1920) — Power of Court to extend time. 39 Cal W N 651, ILR (1941) 1 Cal 299 and AIR 1950 Cal 229 and 54 Cal W N 479 and 62 Cal W N 658, Overruled.

Rule 9 of the Privy Council Rules (1920) as well as O. 12, R. 3 of the Supreme Court Rules (1950) control the provision of O. 45, R. 7 (as amended in 1920) of the Code of Civil Procedure. Whether the provision of O. 45, R. 7 be directory or mandatory it is in either case governed by O. 12, R. 3 of the Supreme Court Rules which is the successor of R. 9 of the Privy Council Rules. The true meaning of R. 9 of the Privy Council Rules is that on the failure of the appellant to furnish security within time, the Court may either cancel the security or make such further or other order as the justice of the case might require. This power includes the power to extend time for security upon good cause shown. Thus the Court has power under O. 12, R. 3 of the Supreme Court Rules to extend the time limited by O. 45, R. 7, Civil P. C. 39 Cal W N 651 and ILR (1941) 1 Cal 299 and AIR 1950 Cal 229 and 54 Cal W N 479 and 62 Cal W N 658, Overruled; ILR 10 Cal 557 (PC) and AIR 1927 Bom 217 (FB), Rel. on. Manickchand Durgaprasad v. ●——O. 45, R. 7 (as amended by Act 26 of 1920) — Power of Court to extend time—R. 5 of Chapter 33-A of Original Side Rules — Scope of.

The rules framed under Cl. 37 of the Letters Patent are not confined in their application to suits and proceedings on the Original Side only. An application for a certificate under Art. 133 of the Constitution is a proceeding in a civil case brought before the High Court and the High Court has power to frame rules relating to such an application. The restriction upon the power of the Court as contained in the proviso to Cl. 37 of the Letters Patent is that the rules framed under that clause should, 'as far as possible' be in conformity with the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. Consequently, if any rule framed by the High Court under Cl. 37 be inconsistent with or confers any additional power besides what is granted by the Code of Civil Procedure, the rule framed under Cl. 37 will prevail over the corresponding provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. The rules framed by the High Court under Chapter 33-A of the Original Side Rules are within the rule-making powers of the Calcutta High Court under Cl. 37 of the Letters Patent. R. 5 of Chapter 33-A of the Original Side Rules authorises the Appellate Court to extend time beyond the limits provided for by O. 45, R. 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure. AIR 1946 Bom 174 and AIR 1932 Cal 1, Rel. on. Manickchand Durgaprasad v. Pratabmull Rameswar, AIR 1961 Cal 483 (488, 489) (Pt B) (Prs 12, 13) (FB).

——O. 45, R. 7—Powers of Court—Failure to furnish security within time — Powers to extend time — Sufficient cause — Supreme Conrt Rules, O. 12, R. 13.

It is no doubt true that O. 45, R. 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure limits the discretion of the Court to grant extension of time to a maximum of sixty days beyond the ninety days time an applicant would have as of right to deposit the security ordered by Court in an application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court. But R. 3 of O. 12 of the Supreme Court Rules corresponding to the former R. 9 of the Privy Council Rules, enables the Court dealing with such an application to grant extension of time and pass such orders as the justice of the case requires. This rule of the Supreme Court will prevail over the provisions of O. 45, R. 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Hence the High Court has power to extend the time for furnishing security in such cases if sufficient cause is shown though such power will be exercised only in very proper cases. (1958) 2 Mad L J 534 : (1959) Cri L J 209 : A I R 1959 Mad 73 (75) (Prs 10, 11).

●——O. 45, R. 7 — Extension of time — Supreme Court Rules, O. 12, R. 3.

The time for furnishing security for costs can be extended beyond that which is prescribed in the second part of R. 7 of O. 45. But a sufficiently strong case will have to be made out before this indulgence can be granted. Ordinarily, the position in R. 7 must be adhered to; very cogent reasons will have to be given before the Court will enlarge the time prescribed by the Code. ILR 10 Cal 557 (PC), Rel. on. Gulam Hussain v. Mansurbeg Nanhubeg, ILR (1952) Nag 406 : 1952 Nag L J 438 : AIR 1952 Nag 302 (303) (Pr 4) (FB).

——O. 45, R. 7 — Extension of time — Supreme Court Rules (1950), O. 12, R. 3.

A rule of procedure fixing time should ordinarily be held to be obligatory and cannot, without strong reasons, be deemed to be directory unless the power of extending the time is given to the Courts. It would therefore appear that the Court has no discretion to extend the time beyond 150 days prescribed under O. 45, R. 7. But the Court is bound to give effect to the rule of the Supreme Court in preference to the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code when a conflict between the two arises. Therefore the Court has power to extend the time by virtue of the express provision in R. 3 of the Supreme Court Rules. But this power should be exercised with great caution only where there are cogent reasons for doing so. ILR (1953) Cut 649 : 19 Cut L T 520 : AIR 1954 Orissa 71 (73) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 6) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 7 — Scope — Certificate for leave to appeal to Supreme Court — Furnishing of security— Extension of time for.

Where sufficient cause is shown for condoning the delay, the High Court has the power to extend time for furnishing the security under O. 45, R. 7, Civil P. C., read with O. 12, R. 3, Supreme Court Rules. 63 Pun L R 627 : AIR 1961 Punj 475 (476) (Pr 4).

6. Transmission of record.

——O. 45, R. 7 — Rajasthan High Court Rules, R. 394 — Supreme Court Rules (1950), O. 12, R. 5 — Steps which appellant has to take after grant of certificate.

The steps which the appellant has to take after the certificate permitting a party to appeal to Supreme Court has been granted for the preparation of the record consist mainly of the deposit of the required amount and the submission of the lists as required by R. 394 of the Rajasthan High Court Rules. Once these lists have been submitted, and the required amount calculated, all that the appellant has to do is to deposit the amount.

Thereafter, the appeal is admitted, and it is the duty of the Court to prepare the record according to the lists. Therefore, the negligence that is contemplated under O. 12, R. 5 of the Supreme Court Rules is mainly negligence preceding the admission of the appeal. ILR (1956) 6 Raj 116 : 1956 Raj L W 400 : AIR 1956 Raj 98 (100) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——O. 45, Rr. 7 and 8 — Trasmission of record.

An appellant allowed to appeal to the Supreme Court can only take steps about the transmission of the record after the appeal has been admitted, but steps about the preparation of the record have to be taken immediately the certificate under O. 45, R. 7 is granted, and have not to wait for the admission of the appeal under O. 45. ——O. 45, R. 7 (1) (b) — "Suit" — Meaning of — Documents relevant for decision of case—Inclusion in printed record — (Supreme Court Rules, O. 15, Sch. 1.)

The term "suit" can be taken to include all proceedings from the time of the filing of the suit up to the stage of execution and the documents which formed part of the record of the High Court relating to the petition for leave to appeal can also be regarded to form part of the record of the suit, and if such documents are relevant for the decision of the case, even though they were prepared after the decision of the High Court, they should be included in the printed record of the case. 1952 Raj L W 507 : ILR (1952) 2 Raj 412 : AIR 1954 Raj 45 (DB).

The question of issuing a certificate contemplated under O. 12, R. 5 only arises when the appeal has been admitted for the effect of such a certificate is the dismissal of the appeal. No question of dismissal would arise unless the appeal has been admitted under O. 45, R. 8, Civil P. C. ILR (1956) 6 Raj 116 : 1956 Raj L W 400 : A I R 1956 Raj 98 (100) (Pt A) (Pr 7) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 13—Application by judgment-debtor appellant—High Court not approached under O. 45, R. 13, Civil P. C.—Respondent decree-holders put in possession by Court—Orders restraining them cannot be in the interest of justice — Occasion for exercise of inherent powers cannot arise. See Supreme Court Rules (1950), O. 45, R. 5. A I R 1965 S C 615.

——O. 45, R. 13 — Direction pending appeal to Supreme Court from decision under Art. 226 of the Constitution—Powers of High Court—Leave to appeal to Supreme Court granted to petitioner against order refusing to issue certiorari to quash certain notifications under S. 68-C Motor Vehicles Act and mandamus commanding State and other Transport Authorities not to interfere with his right to ply his stage carriage on certain route — High Court has no jurisdiction to grant interim relief to petitioner under O. 45, R. 13 or S. 151 to enable him to ply his stage carriage on route concerned during pendency of Supreme Court Appeal — Scope of O. 45, R. 13 (2) (c) and S. 151 ; A I R 1955 All 589. Overruled. See Ibid, S. 151. A I R 1961 All 619 (623, 625, 626, 629, 630) (Prs 12, 25, 26, 27, 29, 41, 48, 50) (FB).

——O. 45, Rr. 13 and 1—Final Order—Meaning—Order quashing certain proceedings passed by High Court in writ petition — It is not an order of Civil Court — High Court is a Court of record created by Constitution and not a Civil Court—(Constitution of India, Art. 215). See Ibid, O. 45, R. 1. A I R 1957 All 505 (DB).

——O. 45, R. 13 and S. 151 — Powers of Court — Order in writ petition declaring certain provisions of statute unconstitutional and quashing orders passed thereunder — Application for certificate for leave to appeal to Supreme Court pending—Power of High Court to grant interim relief in form of stay order—(Constitution of India, Arts. 226, 227.)

In a petition for a writ of certiorari the High Court held that certain provisions of the U. P. Consolidation of Holdings Act (5 of 1954), were unconstitutional and quashed certain orders of the consolidation authorities as a matter of course. The State filed an application under Art. 133 (1), Constitution of India, for certificate for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court. Pending that application, it asked for stay of the operation of the order passed by the High Court. The question was whether the High Court had any juridiction to stay the operation of the order either under O. 45, R. 13 or under any other law.

Held (Per Desai, J.) : that the operation of the impugned order cannot be stayed under Art. 226 or 227, Constitution of India, or under O. 45, R. 13 or under S. 151, Civil P. C.

(Per Beg, J., dissenting) : The High Court in a proper case had powers to issue a stay order. (On the merits, however, his Lordship held agreeing with Desai, J., that no case for grant of interim stay had been made out.)

Both from the point of view of the subject-matter as well as from the point of view of their object, the proceedings taken in the present case were clearly of a civil nature.

A proceeding, which deals with right of a civil nature and is otherwise civil, does not cease to be so just because a party chooses to resort to Art. 226 of the Constitution for the enforcement of such a right. 1957 All W R (HC) 268 : A I R 1957 All 505 (519, 521, 522, 526) (Pt H) (Prs 24, 27, 32, 33, 61) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 13 (2) (d) — Object of — Party unsuccessful in High Court—Right to apply for directions —Power to give direction.

Per Desai, J. — Under Cl. (d) of R. 13 (2) only a particular party can be placed under conditions, e.g., the party seeking the assistance of the Court. Only the party successful in the High Court could have an occasion for seeking its assistance through either execution (if a decree was passed in his favour) or enforcement (if an order was passed in his favour). The party which is unsuccessful in the High Court cannot apply under O. 45, R. 13 (2) (d). Moreover, the Court has to act only when the party seeks its assistance; so long as it does not do so, it cannot be placed under any condition. The power to give any other direction is exactly similar to that of placing him under conditions, so no direction also can be given if he does not seek its assistance. The direction can be only in respect of the subject-matter of the appeal. The subject-matter contemplated by the legislature seems to be tangible property; the reference to appointment of a receiver is indicative of this intention. Where the constitutionality of an Act was the only dispute sought to be raised in the appeal, it is not possible to give any direction respecting that subject-matter of appeal.

The object behind Cl. (d) was certainly not to stay execution or operation of an order completely but to allow it under certain conditions or to provide a substitute for it. 1957 All W R (HC) 268 : A I R 1957 All 505 (517) (Pt M) (Pr 20).

——O. 45, R. 13—Directions if can be given pending application for certificate.

There is nothing in O. 45, in general or in R. 13, in particular restricting the exercise of the powers under R. 13, to only where the certificate for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court has been granted. The filing of an application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court invests the Court with the jurisdiction to pass such orders as it may become necessary to pass in connection with such an application, including orders in exercise of powers pending appeal provided by R. 13. 1955 All L J 838 : I L R (1955) 2 All 743 : A I R 1955 All 589 (591) (Pt A) (Pr 9) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 13—Pendency of appeal from decision under Art. 226, Constitution of India—Applicability of Rule 13.

There is no warrant for the view that O. 45, R. 13 does not apply to cases where the appeal, during the pendency of which the Court is asked to exercise powers under that rule, is an appeal from a decision under Art. 226 of the Constitution. A final order is a decree within the special definition of that term in R. 1 of O. 45. That being so, the provisions of that order are applicable where the appeal contemplated is one from a decision under Art. 226 of the Constitution. The High Court is empowered under O. 45, R. 13 (2) (d), Civil P. Order 45, R. 13 (2), Cl. (d) consists of two parts under both of which the Court might pass such orders as it thinks fit respecting the subject-matter of the appeal but while the first part speaks of placing the party seeking the assistance of the Court under such conditions as the Court thinks fit, the other part, which is quite independent of the first does not speak of any such party but only generally of the Court giving such other direction as it thinks fit. ——O. 45, R. 13 — Supreme Court Rules, O. 13, R. 8— Power of High Court to grant stay after special leave to appeal has been granted by Supreme Court but interim stay had been refused.

The High Court has power to stay execution where special leave to appeal has been granted by the Supreme Court unless the Supreme Court's order contains special directions in that behalf. Where the applicant for special leave had also asked for interim stay and it had been refused it cannot be said that the Supreme Court intended to shut out once and for all the remedy under O. 45. ——O. 45, R. 13 (2) (d)—Applicability.

It does not enable a Court to give temporary relief to a party in respect of a matter which was not pressed and adjudicated upon. ILR (1955) Madh B 361 : Madh B L R 1956 Civil 638 : Madh B L J 1955 HCR 1364; AIR 1955 Madh B 210 (212) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

——O. 45, R. 13 (2) (d) —Powers of High Court pending appeal to Supreme Court.

Order 45, R. 13 (2) (d) only enables the High Court to place the party seeking the assistance of the Court under any conditions which the Court may think fit to impose. It also enables that Court to give such other direction, that is to say, direction other than a direction placing under any condition respecting the subject-matter of the appeal, such as for instance, by an order directing the appointment of a Receiver. But it does not enable the Court to give any direction to the successful party by way of restricting or preventing him from exercising the rights to which he has become entitled under its final order. 1952 Mad WN 823 : (1952) 2 Mad L J 732 : ILR (1952) Mad 980 : 65 Mad L W 1023 : AIR 1953 Mad 475 (475) (Pt A) (Pr 2) (DB).

However the inherent powers of the Court to stay execution should be sparingly used. The plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant but on appeal to the High Court the plaintiff's suit was dismissed. The plaintiff sought leave to appeal to the Supreme Court under Art. 133 of the Constitution and also an order restraining the defendant pending the decision of the Supreme Court from withdrawing the sum of Rs. 2,15,000 which he had deposited in the trial Court as a condition of stay of execution of the decree pending the appeal to the High Court.

Held, that the sum of money lying in deposit in the trial Court could not be considered to be the subject-matter of appeal to the Supreme Court within the meaning of O. 45. R. 13 (d), Civil P. The petitioner thereafter applied under O. 45, R. 13 praying that the operation of the order of the High Court be suspended and the opposite parties be restrained from alienating the property sold to them.

——O. 46, R. 1 — Reasonable doubt — Reference, when to be made.

A reference to the High Court under O. 46, R. 1 must only be in cases of exceptional nature where the question involved is beyond the normal capacity and resources of the subordinate Courts; for instance, where it raises a difficult constitutional point or a point of great public importance on which there is considerable conflict of opinion and so forth. This provision is not meant to relieve the subordinate Courts of their responsibility to apply their minds to and to come to their own conclusions on the questions of law that may ordinarily arise in any case. Any Court must decide a question of law that is presented before it to the best of its knowledge and ability and must leave the aggrieved party to their remedies by way of an appeal or revision. The High Court cannot be called upon to answer every doubt about a question of law which the subordinate judicial officers may feel. A question fairly covered by authority cannot be referred under O. 46, R. 1. AIR 1953 Orissa 51 (52) (Pt A) (Pr 2) (DB).

● ——O. 46, R. 1 — No reasonable doubt — Competency of reference—Constitution of India, Art. 228.

In a suit for pre-emption the plaintiff's objection to the plea of the defendant-vendee was that the Alienation of Land Act was void, inasmuch as it militated against the fundamental rights as enunciated in Art. 19 (1) (f) of the Constitution of India. The trial Sub-Judge held that the Act was void. The defendant vendee appealed to the Sub Judge 1st Class. Along with this the Deputy Commissioner, applied to the said Sub Judge 1st Class under S. 29 (1) of the Pre-emption Act alleging that the decision of the trial Sub Judge was contrary to the provisions of the Alienation of Land Act. The Sub Judge 1st Class was inclined to uphold the decision of the trial Sub Judge, but since he thought that the point raised in the case, viz., whether the Patiala Alienation of Land Act was void was of great importance and involved a substantial question of law as to the interpretation of clause (f) of Art. 19 of the Constitution of India, determination of which was necessary for the disposal of the appeal as well as the application of the Deputy Commissioner, he referred the case to the High Court.

Held that in this case if the Sub Judge had decided the appeal or the application of the Deputy Commissioner no appeal would have been competent to the High Court and accordingly the said Sub Judge was within his rights in making the reference to the High Court, but it could not be said that he had any reasonable doubt about the question of law. So strictly speaking, the reference was not covered by O. 46. In spite of this the reference was perfectly legal under Art. 228 of the Constitution. The Article does not say how the High Court is to be moved for the exercise of its powers but obviously it can be moved either by the parties or by the subordinate Court in which the case in question is pending. ——O. 46, R. 1 — Statement of facts and Court's opinion.

Under O. 46, R. 1, Civil P. C. it is the duty of the Court making a reference to record its own opinion on the point before making such reference. This does not mean that the Court should merely say that the case is one about the interpretation of the Constitution and of great public importance. It should record its own opinion on the point raised. 1951 Raj L W 322 : ILR (1951) 1 Raj 308 : A I R 1952 Raj 10 (11) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

It is not competent for the party or the counsel concerned to challenge a statement about the concession made by him contained in a judgment by means of evidence of the counsel. ——O. 47, R. 1—Ground for review—Order passed as result of erroneous interpretation of order of remand —Order granting review—Revision.

An erroneous interpretation of an order of remand resulting in a particular order passed by the Court to which the matter has been remanded, is not a ground for review within the meaning of O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. C. In granting a review application on this ground the Court acts outside the four corners of O. 47, R. 1 and therefore, acts illegally in the exercise of its jurisdiction. In that view, a revision application under S. 115, Civil P. C., is competent against the order granting review. I L R (1951) Assam 88 : A I R 1952 Assam 25 (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

——O. 47, R. 1 and S. 115 — Decision erroneous in law—If open to review—Proper remedy—Revision—S. 115.

It does not appear that the review of a judgment which proceeds upon an incorrect exposition of law is covered by any of the clauses in O. 47, R. 1. That a decision is erroneous in law is therefore no ground for ordering review. The case has to be dealt with within the frame-work of S. 115, Civil P. C.

Where the decision of the lower Court is not due to omission to take into account any provision of law, or any misconception regarding jurisdiction, but is arrived at with full knowledge of all the aspects of the case, it is not open to review even if it may be erroneous 1957 M P L J 476 (Nag) : 1957 M P C 456 : A I R 1957 Nag 97 (99) (Pt B) (Prs 15, 16) (DB).

——O. 47, R. 1 — Applicability — Suit by husband for restitution of conjugal rights and counter-suit by wife for separate maintenance and return of jewels, clothes, etc. — Joint trial — Common decree with inter-dependent conditions and inter-related terms — Husband directed to return jewels to wife on condition of her restoring to him the benefit of conjugal life — Effect — Right of wife to claim return of jewels without complying with condition as to restoration of conjugal life — Application by wife for review praying for direction for return of jewel — Competency — Proper remedy for giving effect to decree.

It is inconceivable that what a judgment-debtor has failed to carry out in pursuance of a decree could be enforced against him by means of a review application, instead of by way of execution of the decree itself.

A suit by the appellant against the respondent (his wife) for restitution of conjugal rights and a suit by the respondent against the appellant (her husband) for separate maintenance and for return of jewels and clothes, etc., given to her at the time of the marriage, were tried together and a common decree was passed governing both the suits with inter-related and inter-dependent conditions. The appellant was directed to return the jewels, etc., on condition that the respondent agreed to restore the benefit of conjugal life to the appellant.

The appellant in anticipation of the respondent complying with the terms of the decree returned all the jewels, etc., excepting one article. The appellant filed an application for review of the decree and prayed that the respondent be directed to return the remaining jewel. The Court allowed the application and granted the prayer. On appeal:

Held, (i) that reading the terms of the decree as they stood, it was difficult to separate the terms or to make them take effect or operate independently or irrespectively of each other. The two parts of the decree must be considered to be parts of one and the same whole and could not be separated so as to enable either party to claim the benefit of one part without complying with the obligation cast by the other part.

(ii) That it was open to the respondent to show that by reason of the conduct of the appellant she had been prevented from complying with the terms of the decree directing her to give the benefit of conjugal life to the appellant, it that was her case in which case alone she would be entitled to a return of the jewels by means of execution of the decree;

(iii) that this result could not be secured by way of any order in review, as there was no scope for such an order in review; and

(iv) that there was no justification for the review application, much less for its being ordered, the proper remedy of the respondent being only by way of execution of the decree. (1956) 1 Mad L J 378 : 1956 Mad W N 122 : 69 Mad L W 118.

—— O 47, R, 1, S. 151 — Review application — Requirements of — Inherent powers — When can be exercised — Setting aside ex parte decree by way of review, propriety of.

An application for review of a judgment must satisfy the tests laid down in O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. C. Where there is no allegation about discovery of any new or important matter nor about a mistake or error apparent on the face of the record, application for review is not maintainable. An error which has to be established by long drawn process of reasoning on points where there may be conceivably two opinions cannot be said to be an error apparent on the face of the record nor an error in appreciation of documentary evidence or in drawing inferences therefrom can be said to be errors of law and an application for review in such a case cannot be treated as an application under O. 47, R. 1. AIR 1960 S C 137 and AIR 1960 S C 1168, Rel. on. The reviewing authority is not acting as an appellate Court and as such has no jurisdiction to set aside an express decree by taking a different view of the case on merits. The inherent powers of the Court cannot be exercised for altering a judgment passed three years before simply because the Court finds that it is possible to come to a different conclusion on identical evidence. A decree which has reached finality cannot be assailed in any other manner except as provided in the Code. Setting aside of an ex parte decree merely on the ground that the Court passing the decree had failed to appreciate the import and significance of the documentary evidence, is without jurisdiction. When a party has another remedy open and the party does not adopt it or negligently fails to pursue it, the relief under Court's inherent powers under S. 151, may be granted only on proof of exceptional or peculiar circumstances. The inherent powers can never be invoked where the party pursued the other prescribed remedies for the same relief and failed to get the relief. AIR 1962 S C 527, Foll.

In a suit which had been decreed ex parte long after it had been instituted and in which the defendants had managed to prolong the proceedings for nearly two years on one pretext or the other, the defendant went up to the High Court in different proceedings and failed to get relief in Miscellaneous appeal and Civil Revision. Subsequently when nearly three years had elapsed since the ex parte decree the defendant presented an application to the Court of Subordinate Judge, which though worded as an application for review was argued as one under the inherent powers of the Court. The application did not satisfy the tests laid down in O. 47, R. 1 nor was court-fee for review application paid on it. The Subordinate Judge allowed the same solely on the ground that the trial Judge had failed to appreciate the import of documentary evidence. In revision against the order :

Held, that the order of the Subordinate Judge was without jurisdiction as in the circumstances of the case the Court could not have invoked the inherent powers in favour of the defendant. AIR 1964 Orissa 98 (100) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 5, 6).

——O. 47, R. 1 and S. 100—Mistake of record — Remedy of aggrieved party.

The statement of the trial Judge is conclusive as to what transpired in Court at the trial. The only remedy of a party aggrieved by a record made by a Court as to what transpired before it is to apply for review. He cannot challenge it by filing an affidavit in the appellate Court. AIR 1954 S C 526, Rel. on.

Held, on facts, that in view of the practice that appears to have been prevalent of presenting affidavits in appellate Courts challenging the record made by lower Courts as to what transpired before them and particularly in view of the fresh point raised in second appeal that the counsel was not competent to make such concession which may give a totally different turn to the case, the case should be sent back to that Court for fresh disposal after giving an opportunity to the appellant to raise the question of the competency of counsel. 1955 Ker L T 276: AIR 1955 Trav Co 193 (194, 195) (Prs 2, 3).

●—— O. 47, R. 1 (1) — Crucial date for determining whether terms of rule are satisfied— Order of High Court refusing to grant certificate under Art. 133 of the Constitution— Review — Subsequent rejection of special leave under Art. 136 on ground of limitation — Not a valid ground for rejecting review application by High Court.

The crucial date for determining whether or not the terms of O. 47, R. 1 (1), Civil P. C, are satisfied is the date when the application for review is filed. If on that date no appeal has been filed it is competent for the Court hearing the petition for review to dispose of the application on the merits notwithstanding the pendency of the appeal, subject only to this, that if before the application for review is finally decided the appeal itself has been disposed of, the jurisdiction of the Court hearing the review petition would come to an end.

During the pendency of an application for review of the order of the High Court refusing to grant a certificate under Art. 133 of the Constitution, the applicant also filed an application for special leave to appeal in respect of the same matter under Art. 136 along with an application for condonation of delay. The Supreme Court refused to condone the delay so that the petition for special leave never legally came on the file of the Supreme Court. The High Court rejected the application for review on the ground that the special leave petition had been dismissed.

Held, that in the circumstances the refusal of the Supreme Court to entertain the application for special leave did not bar the jurisdiction of the High Court to decide the review petitions nor could it be a relevant matter in deciding it. The High Court was therefore not justified in rejecting the application on this ground. Civil Misc. Petns. Nos. 4672 to 4674 of 1960 D/- 6-1-1961 (Andh Pra), Reversed. Thungabhadra Industries Ltd v. A Court granting review on the grounds of discovery of new and important evidence has to be satisfied that the said evidence would show the fact alleged but held not proved in the judgment under review. For that purpose the Court has to decide whether the evidence ought to be produced is prima facie proved. On the allegation that the original is lost a copy could be made admissible provided it is shown that it is the true copy of the original. But there must be prima facie proof of the original. If the original was a document thirty years old, presumption about its due execution could be made. But such presumption cannot be made when original is not produced and a copy is produced as secondary evidence. ——O. 47. R. 1 — Kutch (Courts) Order, 1948 — Discovery of new evidence – Second appeals.

In Kutch second appeals are permitted under S. 32. Kutch (Courts) Order, 1948 also on questions of fact if the value of the suit is Rs. 1,000 or upwards or the decree of the District Court directly involves a question respecting property of like value and this decree varies or reverses the lower Court's decree and in such cases the Court can allow a review on the ground of discovery of new evidence. If the second appeal being outside the scope of S. 32 is nevertheless heard as an appeal under the section, the whole appeal will have to be re-opened if the review is allowed and that can result in confirmation of the District Court's decree that appeal being entirely on findings of fact. The new, evidence will not, therefore, have the result of altering the existing judgment of confirmation and review on the ground of discovery of new evidence cannot be allowed unless the Court is satisfied that the new evidence if admitted might alter the judgment. AIR 1951 Kutch 59 (60, 61) (Prs 5, 11).

——O. 47, R. 1—Grounds for.

Where an application under O. 47, R. 1 was based on the ground that the parties were governed by the Jain Law :

Held, that there is no such thing as Jain Law. There may be custom prevalent among the Jains which is not followed by the Hindus but as the custom pleaded was not proved in the trial Court and in appeal no question regarding this special custom was raised the point could neither be said to be a discovery of a new and important matter nor could it be said to be a mistake or an error apparent on the face of the record. In the circumstances, the review application was not competent. 1956 M B L J 183 : AIR 1957 Madh B 19 (20) (Pr 1) (DB).

——O. 47, R. 1 — Review when will be granted on ground of discovery of new evidence — Need for caution by Court.

In order that an application for review may be granted on account of the discovery of new and important matter three things must be shown : 1. That there was no remissness on the part of the applicant, 2. That the new evidence must be such as is presumably to be believed; and 3. That such evidence would practically be conclusive. These are the limitations with which the rule has been fenced. Greatest care ought to be exercised by the Court in granting a review on the ground of discovery of fresh evidence. 1961 Jab L J 558 : 1962 M P L J 48 : 1962 M P C 114.

——O. 47, R. 1 (1) —Scope and object of—Review on ground of discovesy of new evidence — When allowed.

It is now well settled that when a review is sought on the ground of the discovery of new evidence, the evidence must be (1) relevant and (2) of such a character that it it had been given in the suit it might possibly have altered the judgment. It is not only the discovery of new and important evidence that entitles a party to apply for review, but the discovery of any new and imporatant matter which was not within the knowledge of the party when the decree was made. Thus, an application under O. 47, R. 1, C. P. Code, must be treated with considerable measure of caution. That is a matter of public policy as it is obviously necessary that save in exceptional circumstances, finality in litigation should be achieved at some point. Where therefore the object of the petitioner is nothing more than adding of additional and supplementary evidence in the pious hope that trying his luck once again, he may prove successful, the application will not fall under the clause 'discovery of new and important matter of evidence'. 7. Exercise of due diligence.

——O. 47, R. 1 — Review on ground that evidence was not available after exercise of due diligence — Exercise of due diligence not proved — Review, on ground of other sufficient reason — Power of Court to grant.

When a party comes to the Court and asks for review on the ground that after exercise of the diligence he was not able to discover an important evidence which he later on discovered and it is found that he has failed to prove that he was diligent, it would be arbitrary to say that even then the Court might give him relief on the basis of other sufficient reason. If some other reason had been alleged, the question would have arisen whether that was sufficient reason within the meaning of O. 47, R. 1. Where what has been alleged was discovery of new and important matter after the exercise of due diligence, and that has not been proved, to fall back on the residuary words, 'other sufficient reason', is, entirely capricious and arbitrary. I L R (1959) 1 Cal 443 : 63 Cal W N 201 : 1958 Cal L J 356 : AIR 1959 Cal 150 (153) (Pt C) (Pr 11) (DB).

——O. 47, R. 1 — New evidence — Discovery of — When a ground—Proof of diligence—Nature of new evidence.

The application under O. 47, R. 1, C. P. Code, must be treated with considerable measure of caution. That is a matter of public policy as it is obviously necessary that, save in exceptional circumstances, finality in litigation should be achieved at some point. The person who wants a review should at least prove strictly the diligence he claims to have exercised and also that the matter or evidence which he wishes to have access to is, if not absolutely conclusive, at any rate, nearly conclusive of the matter. It is not the proper function of a review application merely to supplement evidence or to make it serve the purpose merely of introducing evidence which might possibly have had some effect on the result. Case-law, Referred. AIR 1955 Manipur 17 (Pr 4).

——O. 47, R. 1 — Exercise of diligenee — Degree of diligence—Power of Court.

Order 47, R. 1, C. P. Code requires a high degree of diligence on the part of the petitioner and also that there should be finality at some stage or the other in the long process of litigation.

Plaintiff had not filed his money-lending licence for the relevant year either in the suit or in the first appeal or in the second appeal. When the adverse order was passed he applied for review of the order on the ground that he had a licence for that period but the fact of its existence had escaped his mind. He had not stated the circumstances under which he lost sight of the existence of licence :

Held, that the affidavit before the Court was laconic in materials explaining the failure of the petitioner in placing the licence before the Court at the earliest stage. Lack of diligence and the delay on his part disentitled him to seek relief at the hands of the Court. AIR 1960 Mys 214 (215) (Pr 3).

——O. 47, R. 1 — Discovery of new and important evidence—Exercise of due diligence.

Order 47, R. 1 requires a high standard of diligence. Justice demands that there should be an end to litigation at some stage or the other.

The provisions for review under O. 47, R. 1 require the petitioner to exercise due diligence and if in spite of the exercise of such diligence the matter in evidence was not within her knowledge or could not be produced by her at the time when the decree was passed, only then can she succeed in her review application. Where the petitioner has not been as diligent as she should be, she cannot succeed in her review application : 24 Ind App 115 (PC); A I R 1915 P C 78; AIR 1933 Oudh 328; AIR 1928 Mad 56; AIR 1942 All 82, Ref. ('59) 37 Mys L J 470 (DB).

● ——O. 47, R. 1 — Mistake apparent on face of record — Question as to how error occurred — Relevancy.

Where there is an error apparent on the face of the record, whether the error occurred by reason of the counsel's mistake or it crept in by reason of an oversight on the part of the Court, is not a circumstance which can affect the exercise of jurisdiction of the Court to review its decision. Mt. Jamna Kuer v. Lal Bahadur 1949 F C R 662 : 1950 S C J 117 : 1950 Raj L W 158 : A I R 1950 F C 131 (132, 133) (Pr 8).

● —O. 47, R 1 — 'Error apparent on the face of the record' - Judgment pronounced based on law as it existed—Amendment made in law — Amendment brought into force retrospectively—Effect of amendment is to make judgment erroneous — Application for review made in light of altered law — Law as it stands in such case as on day of review application to be considered — Review granted (Per Majority — Beg, J., dissenting).

Per Desai, C. J. and Katju, J. — A judgment based on the law as it stood on the day the judgment was pronounced may be correct. But where that law is altered subsequently by an amending Act, which is brought into force with retrospective effect, the judgment pronounced is rendered 'erroneous on the face of the record'. In such a circumstance an application for review under O. 47, R. 1, C. P. Code. made within the period of limitation may be entertained and the judgment may be reviewed. The application is to be decided in accordance with the law that exists on the day the application is made.

The judgment pronounced before the amendment cannot be said to be erroneous merely because the law is amended subsequently. AIR 1944 Mad 238 Disting.

Beg J. (dissenting), — The fact that the Act which makes the amendment is a retrospective Act does not mean that the judgment which was perfectly correct on the date on which it was delivered became erroneous as a result of the subsequent legislation. The defect, if any, was not in the judgment but in the principal Act itself.

The Amending Act was not even in existence on the date of the judgment. An amending legislation passed subsequent to the date of judgment would obviously be an extraneous matter. It would, therefore, not be justifiable to say that the Amending Act which came into force subsequently had the result of creating any mistake or error which would be apparent from the record of the case as it existed on the date of judgment. 27 Ind App 197 (P C) and AIR 1944 Mad 238 and AIR 1928 Bom 308, Rel. on; AIR 1934 Oudh 445, Disting. ——O. 47, R 1—New point.

The mere fact that a point was not argued in the original case and is raised for the first time in an application for review would be no ground for review, unless an 'error apparent on the face of the record' is held to have been committed. 1950 All L J 653 : 1950 All W R 617: AIR 1950 All 450 (451) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

——O. 47, R. 1 (1) — 'Error apparent on face of record' - Failure to give proper effect to decision cited — Writ petition — Power of High Court to interfere- (Constitution of India, Art. 226.)

An error justifying a review may either be an error of fact or error of law.

Failure to notice and give effect to binding authority because of failure of counsel to draw the attention of a judge to such an authority can be said to constitute an error apparent on the face of the record. A failure to give proper effect to decisions cited because the Court had overlooked (it may be for the reason that counsel did not draw its attention to it) certain material passeges in the authorities cited is equally an error. In any case, it is difficult to contend that it is not a ground at least analogous to such an error. AIR 1924 Mad 98; AIR 1941 Mad 918, Rel. on.

Further, if the Tribunal has the necessary jurisdiction and if in the exercise of that jurisdiction it has to decide for itself whether there is such an error as calls for its exercise, then the High Court will not, in the exercise of its jurisdiction under Art. 226 of the Constitution, which is not that of an appellate Court. decide whether there is such an error or not. But if it is found that in reality there is no controversy at all between the parties and it is apparent from the affidavits of advocates on both sides, as in the present case, that the learned Judge who wrote the judgment fell into an accidental error and if that Judge has been also transferred in the meanwhile, the matter may be set right in revision. 64 Mad L W 281 : 1951 Mad W N 327 : (1951) 1 Mad L J 244 : AIR 1951 Mad 796 (798) (Prs 4, 9).

The Court has ample power under S. 151, Civil Procedure Code to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of process of Court. It is true that the power cannot be exercised when there are express provisions dealing with the matter. There is an abuse of the process of Court where a Court employs a procedure in doing something which it never intended to do and there is miscarriage of justice. The injustice so done must be remedied on the principle that an act of Court shall not prejudice any person.

Plaintiffs 1 and 2 transferred during suit a part of their interest to plaintiff 3. On a date of hearing plaintiffs 1 and 2 were absent and the Court passed an order dismissing the suit under Order 9, Rule 3, Civil Procedure Code so far as plaintiffs 1 and 2 were concerned. Plaintiff 1 applied for restoration on the ground that he thought his presence was not necessary and plaintiff 3 made an application supported by affidavit that plaintiff 2 was not traceable. The Court passed an order stating that its previous order was obviously wrong and that the provisions of Order 9, Rule 10 which applied to the case had escaped its notice. The Court reviewed the previous order, restored the suit on behalf of plaintiff 1 and ordered it to proceed in favour of plaintiffs 1 and 3 only.

Held, that the Court had power under S. 151, Civil Procedure Code to correct its mistake that any mistake or error apparent on the face of the record could be rectified under Order 47, Rule 1 and that in the circumstances the Court acted rightly in setting aside its previous order. ——O. 47, R. 1 — "Mistake or error apparent on the face of the record".

The error justifying a review is most often an error of fact, and may in certain cases be one of law also. But in all cases it should be an error of inadvertency; in the case of an error of law it should not have been arrived at by a process of conscious reasoning. Further, if it is an error of law, the correction suggested should be absolutely non-controversial, and should be such that the bare statement carries conviction without further reasoning on extraneous matter. (Wrong view of the applicability of S. 53A of the Transfer of Property Act held not a mistake apparent on the face of the record). Case law discussed. AIR 1951 Vindh-Pra 44 (2) (46) (Prs 11, 12).

Held, that the order of the High Court refusing to grant a certificate under Art. 133 of the Constitution on the ground that no substantial question of law was involved in the case was vitiated by error apparent from the face of the record within the meaning of O. 47, R. 1, because no questions of fact were involved but the entire controversy turned upon the interpretation of R. 18 (1) of the Madras Turnover and Assessment Rules and other pieces of legislation referred to by the High Court in its order dismissing tax revision cases against which certificate under Art. 133 was sought. Held, further that the High Court was in error in rejecting the application for review of its order rejecting the application for certificate under Art. 133 when they held that the fact that a certificate under Art. 133 had been granted in similar circumstances with respect to their order regarding previous assessment year was not a sufficient ground for review. ——O 47, R. 1—Order without jurisdiction — Power of Court to review—(Constitution of India, Art. 226).

An order or a decision which is erroneous because it overlooks a clear want of jurisdiction is one which can be corrected in review. The fact that no objection was taken as to the jurisdiction of the Board of Revenue when the revision petition was heard, does not invest the Board with authority to entertain the revision petition if under the law none existed. Similarly, the Board cannot assume jurisdiction forbidden by law merely because the question of jurisdiction is controversial :

Held, on the facts of the case, that the question which the petitioner put forward in the review petition did not involve any investigation into facts. It rested on the construction and application of certain provisions of Kanoon Mal and the Gwalior Civil Procedure Code. It was, therefore, incumbent on the Board to consider the question and express a concluded opinion on it. The point could not be summarily dismissed by a statement that it was debatable. A representative suit had originally been brought on behalf of all the members of the Shamlat Committee. An amendment of the plaint had been asked for under O. 6, R. 17, to amend the plaint so as to sue on behalf of all the khewatdars of Thok Maliyan as well. The application was allowed by the trial Court. The appellate Court somehow failed to take notice of the application for amendment of the plaint and the order passed thereon by the trial Court, and dismissed the appeal only on the ground that the representative suit that had been brought had not been brought on behalf of the khewatdars of Thok Maliyan.

——O. 47, R. 1 (1) — Mistake or error apparent on face of record.

Where a judgment proceeds on an erroneous assumption as to the material facts, that amounts to a mistake or an error apparent on the face of the record. Thus, where the judgment of the Industrial Tribunal clearly stated that the payments for 1947-48 were not cash payments, but the Appellate Tribunal proceeded on the footing that cash bonus was paid for those years, the mistake is apparent on the face of the record and cannot be said to be a mistaken appraisal of facts. 58 Cal W N 791 : AIR 1955 Cal 92 (96, 97) (Pt B) (Prs 19, 21).

A brought a suit for redemption of a house against B and C. B was the original mortgagee while C was the person in possession of the house sought to be redeemed. The defence was that the house had been sold to B and thereafter B had transferred the house to C. As such C claimed to be the owner of the house. The trial Court found that A had not sold the house to B. It also found that A had paid interest after the alleged sale. Eventually it decreed the suit. On appeal, the Court came to the conclusion that the sale in favour of B was proved. Therefore the appeal was allowed and the suit dismissed. No finding was given on the issue whether interest had been paid. In review :

Held, that there was something like an error apparent on the face of the record inasmuch as it had been held by the appellate Court that there was a sale in favour of B without the appellate Court saying anything about the finding of the trial Court as to payment of interest. ——O. 47, R. 1—Power of review — Error must be patent on face of record —'Record'. See Ibid, S. 114. AIR 1959 All 214 (DB).

——O. 47, R. 1—Mistake apparent on the face of the record.

The expression "mistake or error apparent on the face of the record" used in Rule 1 of Order 47 obviously means that the alleged mistake or error must appear upon the face of the record and it should not be necessary to enter into any elaborate discussion to establish that the view expressed in the judgment under review is mistaken or erroneous. The mistake or error may relate to a point of law or fact. If any mistake or error relating to a point of law is alleged it must appear that the view expressed in the judgment is contrary to any well-established rule or any relevant provision of law and it would not be sufficient to show on a different set of reasoning or interpretation of a provision of law another view was possible. If the view taken is contrary to any well-settled rule or provision of law, it would be possible to say, on a perusal of the record, that there is a mistake or error apparent on the face of the record. On the other hand, if the point is debatable, and two views are possible, it would not be possible to say, on a perusal of the record only, that there is a mistake or error apparent on the face of the record. Similarly if any mistake or error on the point of fact is alleged it must appear on a perusal of the record and it should not be necessary to take into consideration other extraneous matters. If there is a mistake or error apparent on the face of the record the Court is not concerned with the fact whether the decision is based upon conscious or unconscious reasoning or on account of something else.

Where the clear provisions of the U. P. Held, that such mistakes and errors had crept in as were evident on the face of the record. Case law discussed. 1952 All L J 287 : AIR 1952 All 318 (319, 323) (Prs 10, 28) (DB).

——O. 47, R. 1—'Mistake or error apparent on face of record' —Interpretation of.

The words 'mistake or error apparent on the face of the record' include an apparent mistake on question of law on which there can be no two opinions. In case the law can be interpreted in two ways it is open for the Court to follow one view and not the other. Thus, where the Court follows an opinion without giving its reasons it cannot be said that it has committed a mistake or error in following law. But where the wordings of the enactment are clear and they can be interpreted in only one manner if a contrary view is taken, it will be deemed to be a mistake which can be rectified by that Court itself if a review application is moved. AIR 1956 Bhopal 7 (8) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——O. 47, R. 1—"Mistake or error apparent on the face of the record" —Scope of the expression.

The expression "mistake or error apparent on the face of the record" in R. 1 of O. 47, C P Code, is not limited to mere errors of act but also includes errors of law which of course must be patent upon the face of the record. So either an erroneous view on a debatable point of law, or a failure to interpret the law correctly would not be an error of law apparent on the face of the record. Case-law reviewed. AIR 1951 Him Pra 67 (68) (Pt B) (Prs 5, 6).

——O. 47, R. 1—Error apparent on face of record — Meaning of.

A review does not lie even if the decision of a Single Bench is erroneous, if that Bench is aware of what it was doing. Secondly, if a point is arguable and has not been argued by the parties and the Court has taken a view in agreement with the actual wording, no review lies simply because the actual wording may not be quite correct or the appearances have to be qualified by explanation or some other evidence. Thirdly a mistake to be apparent, should be one which has only to be pointed out to be corrected immediately without any argument. If the Court has entered into a discussion of the pros and cons and has justified one of the two alternative views then certainly the mistake, if any, is not apparent or patent. 1959 M P C 193 : (1959) Jab L J 464 : (1959) M P L J 925 : A I R 1959 Madh Pra 217 (218) (Pr 4) (DB).

——O. 47, R. 1—Error or mistake apparent on face of record —Meaning of.

It is well settled that the mistake or error justifying a review under O. 47, R. 1, C. P. Code is most often an error of fact and may in certain cases be one of law also. But in all cases it should be an error of inadvertence; in the case of an error of law it should not have been arrived at by a process of conscious reasoning. The test in such matters is whether the Court itself would have made the correction if it was aware of the particular fact or circumstance while writing the judgment. In other words, whether it is an inadvertent mistake or error of a conscious application of mind leading to a result which one party may consider to be erroneous or a mistake. (1959) 2 Mad L J 201.

——O. 47, R. 1—Power to review —Mistake or error apparent on face of record must be one of inadvertence and not of judgment — Valuation of land — Arbitrator omitting to notice certain part of settlement report and holding it as inadmissible evidence —Error is of inadvertence apparent on record, and review lies —High Court can interfere in writ jurisdiction to set aside order rejecting review — Constitution of India, Art. 226.

The jurisdiction for interference under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India would arise when there is a mistake or error of law apparent on the face of the record and not of fact. But O. 47, R. 1 covers both cases of review on grounds of mistake or error of fact as well as of law provided it is apparent on the face of the record. If the Court applies its mind to a particular fact or law and then comes to a wrong conclusion after conscious reasoning, it can never be contended that the error is one apparent on the face of the record and can be corrected by it. Correction of such mistaken conclusion does not come within the ambit or purview of review. But an error which does not require any extraneous matter to show its incorrectness is one apparent on the face of record and therefore an error of fact or law justifying a review under O. 47, R. 1 must in all cases be an error of inadvertence. ——O. 47, R. 1—Error on face of record — Test to determine—Reliance on inadmissible evidence—Error not vitiating judgment as such— No interference in review.

No error could be said to be apparent on the face of the record if it was not self-evident, and if it required an examination or argument to establish it. The fact is that what is an error apparent on the face of the record cannot be defined precisely, or exhaustively, there being an element of indefiniteness inherent in its very nature, and it must be left to be determined judicially on the facts of each case. AIR 1955 S C 233, Rel. on.

Thus admitting the accounts which are not proved to have been kept in the regular course of business and relying on them for passing a decree in favour of the plaintiff would be an error apparent on the face of record, if the Court had not relied on other evidence and circumstances to support the decree.

But even in such cases if the error did not vitiate the decision as such, the Court would not be justified in interfering with the judgment which on the whole appears to be correct. 1960 Raj L W 254 : ILR (1960) 10 Raj 615.

——O. 47, R. 1— Error apparent on face of record—Erroneous assumption of law.

The 'error apparent on the face of the record' as contemplated by O. 47, R. 1 may be an error of law. What is an error apparent on the face of the record cannot be described precisely or exhaustively there being an element of indefiniteness inherent in its very nature and it must be left to be determined judicially of the facts of each case. AIR 1955 S C 233, Rel. on.

Where the previous judgment of the Court was based on an erroneous assumption that the State of Vindhya Pradesh was not a legal entity capable of holding property and of entering into contract, it is a sufficient reason for review as the ground for it is at any rate analogous to an error apparent on face of record. AIR 1956 Vin Pra 1 (5) (Pt C) (Pr 17).

——O. 47, R. 1 — Mistake or error apparent on face of record.

The basic principle in case of review is that the mistake should be a mistake of inadvertency, a mistake that the Court itself would correct if apprised of it without any need to hear arguments—But where a matter has been discussed and the Court has arrived at a decision after applying its mind, and after considering the pros and cons there cannot be a review on the ground of apparent mistake. A I R 1951 Vin Pra 44 (1) (44) (Pr 2).

——O. 47, R. 1—"Mistake or error apparent on the face of the record" - Meaning— Review — Grant of —Test — Wrong view of applicability of provision of law to facts of the case.

The mistake or error justifying a review under O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. C., is most often an error on fact and may in certain cases be one of law also — But in all cases it should be an error of inadvertency; in the case of an error of law it should not have been arrived at by a process of conscious reasoning. Further, if it is an error of law, the correction suggested or asked for should be such that the bare statement carries conviction without further reasoning or extraneous matter.

The test in all matters is whether the Court itself would have made the correction, if it was aware of the particular fact or circumstance while writing the judgment. In other words, whether it is an inadvertent mistake or error or a conscious application of mind leading to a result which one party may consider to be erroneons or a mistake.

Where the ground alleged for a review is a wrong view of the applicability of a provision of law, e. g., S. 53-A, T. P. Act, to a set of circumstances, and there is nothing to indicate that the Judge has come to his conclusion without considering the pros and cons, there cannot be said to be any mistake or error apparent on the face of the record within the meaning of O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. A review lies under O. 47, R. 1 (1), Civil P. C. if the Court had omitted to take notice of certain undisputed facts or had failed to apply the law of which two interpretations were not possible either on the wording of the enactment or in view of the pronouncements of the various High Courts or the pronouncement of the highest judicial authority. It is only when the facts not taken notice of were disputed and were not material, or the erroneous view of law was on a debatable point and the incorrect interpretation of law was on a complicated point, that the mistake or error cannot be deemed to be one apparent on the face of the record. Case law fully discussed.

A Court can take judicial notice of the fact that the Supreme Court would not have granted special leave, unless there was some force in the appeal to be preferred in that Court. Consequently, it will be wrong for the High Court or for the other Courts to regard a decree from which an appeal is pending before the Supreme Court to be final between the parties and to act as res judicata, under S. 11, Civil

P. C. But when these facts are not noticed by the Court and the issue of res judicata is erroneously decided on the basis that the judgment had become final, there is an error of law apparent on the face of the record and review application is maintainable. 1956 Madh Bha L J (Bhopal) 92.

——O. 47, R. 1—Court not considering material undisputed fact — It is error apparent on face of record.

The mere fact that a Judge has not in terms referred to certain evidence in favour of one party or the other was not a sufficient reason for granting a review. If, however, certain undisputed facts, which were on the record, had not been taken into consideration review would be granted.

"Facts on record" mean facts on the face of the record having a direct relation to the order the Court was about to make, facts which were actually within the Court's own knowledge and which momentarily escaped its memory — These are facts on the face of the record and not embedded in the record and only to be brought to light by a discussion and appreciation of the evidence. 1950 Raj L W 243 : AIR 1951 Raj 85 (86) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

9 (i). Omission to determine issue or point.

——O. 47, R. 1—'Error apparent on the face of the record"—AIR 1952 Trav-Co 120 (FB), Reversed.

A judgment is defective on the face of it, if it does not effectively deal with and determine an important issue in the case on which depended the title of the plaintiffs and the maintainability of the suit. This is certainly an error apparent on the face of the record. Moran Mar Basselios Catholicos v. Most Rev. Mar Poulose Athanasius, 1955 S C A 1354 : I L R (1954) Trav Co 867 : 1955 S C R 520 : 1954 Ker L T 385 : 1954 S C J 736 : A I R 1954 S C 526 (540) (Pt F) (Pr 34).

——O. 47, R. 1 — Error apparent on face of record — Omission to determine important point — If ground for review.

If a judgment or order does not effectively deal with and determine an important point on which the decision in the case is to depend and the omission appears on the face of the judgment or order the judgment or order, could well be reviewed. A I R 1954 S C 526, Foll. AIR 1960 J & K 125 (127) (Pt E) (Pr 10).

——O. 47, R. 1 and S. 100 — Error by reason of counsel's mistake or oversight on part of Court — Ground valid for review—Ground is effective even though not urged before the Court.

Held, on facts that the omission to consider certain questions in the appeal must be accepted as a valid ground for granting a review of the decision. Further if there was an error apparent on the face of the record, then whether the error occurred by reason of the counsel's mistake or it crept in by reason of an oversight on the part of the Court, was not a circumstance which could affect the exercise of the jurisdiction of the Court to review its decision. AIR 1950 FC 131, Rel. on. 1962 MPLJ (Notes) 25.

——O. 47, R. 1—Error apparent on face of record — What is—Absence of formal finding by High Court —Not an error calling for review—Question raised but abandoned—Review not permissible.

The absence of a formal finding on an issue tried and decided by a High Court is not an error calling for review of judgment in the High Court; a party who not only had an opportunity of raising a question but who did raise it in appeal and on argument abandoned it, cannot under ordinary circumstances, be allowed to agitate the question on review. Indeed, where an error, if any, which has to be established by a long drawn process of reasoning on points where there may conceivably be two opinions, [Question regarding legal position of Hindu female under S. 14 of the Hindu Succession Act (1956)] can hardly be said to be an error apparent on the face of the record. 10 (a). Meaning of.

● — O. 47, R. 1—'Any other sufficient reason.'

The words 'any other sufficient reason' must mean a reason sufficient on grounds, at least analogous to those specified in the rule. AIR 1922 P C 112; AIR 1934 P C 213; AIR 1949 F C 106, Rel on. Moran Mar Basselios Catholicos v Most. Rev Mar Poulose Athanasius, 1955 SCA 1354 : ILR (1954) Trav-Co 867 : 1955 SCR 520 : 1954 Ker L T 385 : 1954 SCJ 736 : AIR 1954 SC 526 (538) (Pt B) (Pr 32).

——O. 47, R. 1—'Any other sufficient cause.'

The words 'any other sufficient cause' are ejusdem generis, having reference to grounds analogous to those previously mentioned in the rule. 1950 All L J 653 : 1950 All W R 617 : AIR 1950 All 450 (453) (Pt F) (Pr 24).

——O. 47, R. 1—'Sufficient reason'—Meaning of.

Sufficient reason in the context of O. 47, R. 1 means any reason similar to or ejusdem generis with the reasons covered by all or any of the three clauses mentioned in O. 47, R. 1. Therefore the court should be satisfied that any such reason existed before allowing the application for review. The fact that no proper issue was framed in the original suit cannot be a ground coming within any of the three clauses. For any error or mistake if a review has to be allowed, the mistake must be apparent on the face of the record and not as a consequence of a wrong judgment or a wrong inference. The fact that there was no material on the record entitling the Court to draw an inference against the party for non-production of certain evidence cannot be a valid ground for review though it can be a good ground for appeal. AIR 1961 Assam 124 (125, 126) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 6).

——O. 47, R. 1 (1) (c)—'Sufficient reason.'

The words "for any other sufficient reason," cannot be given a very wide meaning and must be given the meaning in the context of this special provision, namely that the reasons are analogous to those preceding these words. 1956 Madh BLJ (Bhopal) 152 : AIR 1956 Bhopal 48 (Pt B) (Pr 2).

——O. 47, R. 1—'Sufficient reason'—Meaning of.

The reason referred to in O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. C, must be sufficient on grounds analogous to those specified in the Rule. AIR 1954 SC 526, Rel. on. 1957 MPLJ 476 (Nag) : 1957 MPC 456 : AIR 1957 Nag 97 (99) (Pt A) (Pr 14) (DB).

—— O. 47, R. 1, O. 9, R. 13—'For any other sufficient reason'—Expression means grounds analogous to those mentioned earlier — Expression 'ejusdem generis' is more restricted Ex parte decree on Original Side—Name of wrong solicitor given in Prospective, Warning and Peremptory Lists — Non-appearance—Ex parte decree — Review application — Decree set aside — High Court Rules and Orders—Calcutta High Court Original Side Rules, Ch. 10, Rr. 19, 20, 21 and 22.

A decree may be reviewed under O 47, R. 1 either on the ground of discovery of new and important matter or evidence or on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record or 'for any other sufficient reason.' The expression 'any other sufficient reason' means a reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately previously. AIR 1922 P C 112 and AIR 1934 P C 213 and AIR 1949 FC 106 and AIR 1954 S C 526, Relied on. The phrase 'ejusdem generis' is more restricted than word 'analogous. AIR 1928 Rang 31, Relied on.

Where a suit has been dismissed for non-appearance of the plaintiff or an ex parte decree has been passed for non-appearance of the defendant an application for review for an order to set aside the dismissal or to set aside the ex parte decree is maintainable provided that it can be brought within the scope or ambit of O. 47, R. 1. The mistake or error contemplated by O. 47, R. 1 is not confined to the judgment itself. It cannot be said that no case for review lies if the judgment cannot be challenged on the ground that there is a mistake or error apparent on the face of it. Order 47, R. 1 speaks of the record and the judgment is a part of the records of the suit. If, therefore, the mistake or error is apparent on any document other than the judgment but constituting the records of the suit, an application for review cannot be thrown out. AIR 1950 Assam 47 and AIR 1929 Rang 70, Rel. on.

The Prospective, Warning and Peremptory Lists are prepared in accordance with the provisions of Rr 19, 20, 21 and 22 of Chap. 10 of the Original Side Rules. Apart from the names of the parties the names of their respective solicitors or Supreme Court Advocates should, if at all be correctly set out. Where the name of the defendant's solicitor did not appear either in the Lists prepared by the private agency or in the Lists prepared by the department, instead the name of the solicitor who at no stage, had to do anything with the suit had appeared, with the result that the defendant's solicitor had no knowledge that the suit was in Peremptory List and as such took no steps on behalf of the defendants and that the suit was decreed ex parte the Court on an application for review will set aside the ex parte decree.

In an application under O. 47, R. 1, the Court is not concerned with the evidence bearing on the cause of non-appearance. The grounds for such an application are restricted to the terms of O. 47, R. 1 in the context of judicial interpretation thereof. But the facts (as in the above case) may be relevant for considering whether or not an application for review of the ex parte decree should be granted 'on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record' or any ground analogous thereto. AIR 1963 Cal 100 (101, 102, 103, 104) (Prs 3, 4, 5, 6, 10, 12, 13, 14).

——O. 47, R. 1—"Any other sufficient reason" — Must be on grounds analogous to those specified—Production of authority not brought to notice of Judge at the time of decision—Not a sufficient reason.

"Any other sufficient reason" for obtaining a review must be on ground analogous to those specified previously. Production of an authority or ruling which was not brought to the notice of the Judge at the first hearing and which lays down a view of the law contrary to that taken by the Judge, is not a sufficient ground for granting a review. AIR 1935 Rang 32 and ILR 1 Cal 184, Foll. AIR 1962 Cal 346 (348) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

——O. 47, R. 1 — "Any other sufficient reason" — Meaning of — Excusable failure to bring to Court's notice relevant material.

The words "Sufficient reason" in O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. C., have been construed to mean reason sufficient on grounds, at least analogous to those specified previously. It is loosely said that this means that the sufficient reason must be ejusdem generis to the reasons previously stated. The words "analogous reason" however are wider and mean a reason having some resemblance to or "similar" in certain circumstances to the reasons previously stated. An excusable failure to bring to the notice of the Court the relevant material is covered by the terms of O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. C. AIR 1951 Cal 469 (470) (Pr 9).

——O. 47, R. 1—"Any other sufficient reason"—Scope of expression—Ejusdem generis interpretation, has to be given.

The words "any other sufficient reason" contained in R. 1 of O. 47 cannot be given a general meaning so as to grant the review on any ground, but these words are to be interpreted as meaning a reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately previously. In other words, a review lies only on two grounds, either from the discovery of new and important matter or evidence which, after exercise of the due diligence, was not within the knowledge of the party or could not be produced at the time when the decree was passed or order made, or on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record. It will also lie if there exist reasons analogous to the above conditions. The words, "on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record" are of a very general nature and do not differentiate between the mistakes committed by the Court itself or by the party or its counsel, provided that the mistake or error is apparent on the face of the record. Similarly, no restrictions have been laid down as to the nature of the mistake or error. It can be one of fact or of law. In other words, therefore, the only interpretation which can be given to this Rule is that a review can be granted irrespective of whether the mistake or error apparent on the face of the record occurred by reason of the counsel's mistake or if crept in by reason of an oversight on the part of the Court. AIR 1950 F C 131, Rel. on.

If while passing the judgment or order, an important document or evidence which conclusively established the case to the contrary was overlooked, it would be a mistake entitling a review of the judgment or order. Of course, if only some of the documents were overlooked and they were not of conclusive nature, a review would not be permissible, considering that to the most it could be urged on behalf of the aggrieved party that the Court might have drawn a contrary conclusion if those documents or evidence had been taken into consideration. On similar reasoning the same rule can be applied where a mistake was committed in the application of clear provisions of the law or a well-established rule of the Courts about which two opinions were not possible.

A review is permissible, where the mistake or error was committed either by the counsel's mistake or crept in by reason of an oversight on the part of the Court on a question of law when it is not of a controversial or debatable nature and the enactment is so clear as to be given only one interpretation or the particular provision of the law had been the subject of a ruling by the highest judicial authority of the country. Case law reviewed. 1956 M B L J (Bhopal) 92.

——O. 47, R. 1—'Any other sufficient reason'—Meaning of.

While it is true that the expression 'for any other sufficient reason' in Order 47, R. 1, Civil Procedure Code, should be construed ejusdem generis with the other provisions of the rule laying down the limits of the exercise of the power of review, a too narrow interpretation of the words will not be in accord with equitable principles. (1960) 2 M L J 327 : 73 Mad L W 533.

—— O. 47, R. 1—Other sufficient reason — Meaning of.

It is well settled that the words "any other sufficient reason" in O. 47, R. 1, C P. Code should be interpreted as amounting to a reason sufficient on grounds, at least analogous to those specified immediately previously. Thus an excusable failure to bring to the notice of the Court the relevant material is covered by the terms of O 47, R. 1, C. P. Code. The mistake of the counsel would be a sufficient ground for granting review as "any other sufficient cause". (1959) 2 Mad L J 201.

——O. 47, R. 1 — Construction — "Any other sufficient reason" – Meaning of – Default in appearance if amounts to "sufficient reason" for grant of review.

The words 'any other sufficient reason' in O. 47, R. 1, C. P. Code, mean a reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately before those words. Absence either of the party or of his counsel does not come within the purview of the expression 'any other sufficient reason" in O. 47, R. 1, C. P. Code. ——O. 47, R, 1 — 'Any other sufficient reason' — Interpretation of.

It is now settled that though the strict rule of 'ejusdem generis' does not apply, the expression "any other sufficient reason', in O. 47, R. 1 must be interpreted to mean a reason sufficiently analogous to the other two grounds specified in the rule, namely discovery of new and important matter or some error or mistake apparent on the face of the record. ——O. 47, R. 1—'Any other sufficient reason.'

The phrase "any other sufficient reason" cannot be construed in an absolute sense but must be construed in the context and the setting of the language of Order 47, Rule 1 to mean "reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified in the rule". 10 (b). Misconception of Court.

● ——O. 47, R. 1—"Error apparent on the face of the record"—Misconception of Court.

A misconception by the Court of a concession made by the advocate or of the attitude taken up by the party appears to be a ground analogous to the grounds set forth in the first part of the review section and and affords a good and cogent ground for review. There is no reason to construe the word record' in a very restricted sense and include within that term only the document which initiates the proceedings. the pleadings and the adjudication and exclude the evidence and other parts of the record.

Further, when the error complained of is that the Court assumed that a concession had been made when none had in fact been made or that the Court misconceived the terms of the concession or the scope and extent of it, it will not generally appear on the record but will have to be brought before the Court by way of an affidavit and this can only be done by way of review. The misconception of the Court must be regarded as sufficient reason analogous to an error on the face of the record. It is permissible to rely on the affidavit as an additional ground for review of the judgment. Moran Mar Basselios Catholicos v. Most Rev. The omission to consider a vital point as to the applicability of O. 41, R. 33 will constitute a sufficient ground analogous to those mentioned in O. 47, R. 1 and it would be competent to reconsider the matter by way of review. It would be a case of a mistake or error apparent on the face of the record so as to attract the provisions of O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. C. A I R 1952 Sau 32 (35) (Pr 9).

It is always desirable that the highest Court of law should give reasons in support of the decision or order to be passed but where reasons are not indicated it cannot be said that the order passed is illegal and should be upset by that very Court if a review application is moved. O. 47, R. 1 Review—Grounds for—Court taking different view of law subsequently—No ground.

The fact that questions of law have been wrongly decided is not sufficient ground for granting a review of the order. Similarly a different view of law subsequently taken by the same Court is no ground for review. A I R 1948 Oudh 136. Ref. I L R (1952) Hyd 244 : A I R 1953 Hyd 239 (240) (Pr 3).

——O. 47, R. 1 (1)—Judgment based on two grounds — One erroneous apparent on the face of the record — Later decision in a cross suit — Inconsistent with the result of the decision sought to be reviewed—If 'other sufficient cause'.

Where the judgment in a Civil Revision Petition was sought to be reviewed on the grounds; (1) that there was an error apparent on the face of the record; (2) that the result of the decision is inconsistent with the judgment in another Civil Revision Petition in a cross suit decided later.

Held : The judgment based on two grounds, each of which is sufficient to sustain it independently of the other, is not liable to be reviewed even though one of the said grounds on which the judgment is based is erroneous and the error is apparent on the face of the record.

The fact that the result of the later decision of a Civil Revision Petition in a cross suit is inconsistent with the result of the decision sought to be reviewed will not be a ground of "other sufficient cause" under O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. C. A I R 1959 Kutch 45 (46) (Pts A, B) (Prs 4, 5).

O. 47, R. 1—Review — Omission to notice previous single Judge decision.

● —O. 47, R. 1 and S 98—Mysore High Court Act, S. 15 (3) — Reference to Full Bench — Entire case referred — Failure to formulate questions if ground for review.

Under S 15 (3) it is not necessary that a material question or questions about which there is a difference of opinion should always be formulated before a reference is made to the Full Bench though a specific question or questions may be formulated and referred. In the event of differences of opinion on all the material questions which are necessary for the disposal of the case the entire case will have to be referred to the Full Bench with the opinions of the differing Judges on the entire matter and the formulation of any question or questions becomes unnecessary.

An objection that the reference to a Full Bench under S. 15 (3) is irregular for want of formulating the questions must be raised before the Bench decides the case and even if it be deemed an irregularity it cannot form a ground for review of a judgment on merits. —O. 47, R. 1 — "Any other sufficient reason" — Failure to refer to certain documents in judgment.

"Any other sufficient reason" in O. 47 R. 1 should be interpreted as meaning a reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately previously. The fact, therefore, that certain documents are not referred to in a judgment is no reason for granting a review, and it would be very difficult to draw a distinction between important documentary evidence and documentary evidence which is not important : AIR 1922 P C 112; AIR 1924 Pat 258; AIR 1933 Mad 290; AIR 1939 All 619, Rel on; AIR 1933 Nag 177, Disting. 11. Review on ground of subsequent events.

—O 47, R. 1 — Subsequent change in law — No ground for review.

Once the decision on an issue is given, the court cannot change it by reviewing it merely because subsequent to the decision, the law on the point has been changed either by statute or by a decision of a superior Court. 1961 M P L J 767 : 1958 M P C 246 : 1958 Jab L J 642 : AIR 1959 Madh Pra 10 (11) (Pr 2).

Where the Court passes a peremptory order on 22-9-1954 directing that deficit Court-fee on the memorandum of appeal should be paid by 22-10-1954, failing which the second appeal would stand rejected without further reference to a Bench, and there is default on the part of the appellants to pay the deficit court-fee within the time specified, the date of the decree within the meaning of S. 2 (2) read with O. 7, R. 11, is 22-9-1954 and not 21-10-1954, when the second appeal stood dismissed because of the default and an application for review of the decree does not lie on the ground that although the appellants had sent the required money on 10-10-1954, the lawyer had failed to deposit the amount in the High Court, and as such they were not responsible. AIR 1956 Pat 20 and AIR 1955 Pat 370 (FB), held correctly decided, Ramautar Tiwari v. Jagdish Singh, 1957 B L J R 374 : I L R 36 Pat 951 : AIR 1957 Pat 430 (430, 431) (Pr 3) (FB).

— O. 47, R. 1 — Application for review on ground that applicant was taken ill subsequent to date of decree.

The ground for review under O. 47, R. 1, must be something which existed on the date of the decision or decree. The rule does not authorise the review of a decree or decision which was right when it was made on the ground of the happening of some subsequent event. Hence, an application for review of the decree on the ground that the applicant was taken ill subsequent to the date of the decree will not lie 10 Mad L J 221 (P C), Rel. on. 1955 B L J R 621 : AIR 1956 Pat 20 (21-22) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

[Reversed on another point in AIR 1961 S C 882.]

— O. 47, R. 1 — Review on ground of subsequent events—Passing of another decision.

Once a case is decided, it is hardly permissible to review that decision on the mere ground that, subsequent to its date, another decision has been given, the ratio of which may induce the Court to change its previous view. 61 Punj L R 808 : AIR 1960 Punj 43 (45) (Pt C) (Pr 4).

12. No review on ground of decision, being erroneous on merits.

— O. 47, R. 1 — Erroneous view of law — Wrong decision — If a ground.

A review cannot be granted only because the Court might take a different view of the same facts or because the judgment has taken an erroneous view on a debatable point of law or even on the ground that the judgment is wrong. But if the Court has exceeded its jurisdiction a review should be granted.

Where the decree of the Court of the District Judge, Ajmer, allowed, the Hindu widow decree-holder only a right to reside in the family dwelling house in which she had lived with her husband :

Held, that if the Judicial Commissioner's Court in appeal conferred the right of residence on the Hindu widow because of the general right possessed by widows, then certainly a question of jurisdiction arose. But if the Court merely interpreted what the decree had granted to the decree-holder then that would be a case of interpretation and not conferment of new right even if it be a case of misinterpretation. (Held, on facts that the Court was only interpreting what had been granted to the decree-holder in the decree and not granting her any new rights). AIR 1955 Ajmer 2 (2) (3) (Prs 3, 7).

Held, on facts, that there was no error in the order passed by the Tribunal rejecting the application under O. 47, R. 1 and S. 151: AIR 1963 S C 1566, Rel. on. It could not be said that there was any error legal, factual or clerical in the order passed by the tribunal dismissing the election petition upon its being withdrawn by the election petitioner under O. 23, R. 1, without giving notice of such withdrawal to other parties to apply for transposition. There was no provision either in the Panchayat Act or in the Civil Procedure Code requiring the tribunal not to dismiss the election petition before giving an opportunity to the other parties to apply for transposition. 17. Review petition by minor.

——O, 47, R. 1; O. 32, R, 7, S. 151 - Compromise recorded when one of parties was minor — No leave obtained—Application under S. 151 to set aside order recording compromise can be treated as application for review.

The question whether an application made under S. 151 of C. P. Code could or could not be converted into an application for review under O. 47 R. 1 of the Code depends upon the circumstance of each case. Where the order recording the compromise was obviously erroneous as it contravened the provisions of O. 32, R. 7 of the Code and application to set aside the compromise was made within one month of the order recording the compromise, in other words within the period of limitation allowed for an application for review, the application should be treated as one under O. 47, R. 1, even though it was in terms under S. 151. Order 47, R. 1 is wide enough to cover a case of correction of this nature. The only impediment in treating this application as an application for review is the lack of payment of necessary court fee which can be demanded and made good at any stage of the proceedings. 12 J and K L R 50 : AIR 1954 J & K 31 (31, 32) (Pt B) (Pr 7).

24. Appeal by one party—Review application by another—Cl. (2).

—— O. 47, R. 1, sub-rr. (1) and (2)—Scope of—Plaintiff's suit partly decreed and partly dismissed —

Defendant's appeal in so far as decree against him — Review application by plaintiff after appeal is disposed of – Whether maintainable.

Sub-rule (1) of R. 1 of O. 47, Civil P. C., confers a right upon a litigant to present an application for review. Sub-rule (2) applies to a case where a party has not himself appealed against any portion of the judgment of the trial Court. Such a party is not precluded from seeking the remedy provided under sub-rule (2) by the pendency of an appeal by one of the parties except where the ground of such appeal is common to the appeal and the review petition or when being the respondent in that appeal he could present to the appellate Court the case on which he seeks review. If the two latter conditions are satisfied the pendency of an appeal preferred by one of the parties does not disable him from invoking sub-r. (2).

This rule does not set any time-limit for the disposal of the application under sub-r. (2) A party who has not filed an appeal (against a portion of the judgment) could file a review petition notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal preferred by one of the parties and could pursue it though the appeal filed by the other party has been disposed of and the judgment of the appellate Court has become final so far as it bears on that part of the decree under appeal. The instant case falls within the purview of sub-r. (2). AIR 1917 Cal 418, Rel. on.

The ruling based on the wording of Cl. (2) of column 3 of the present Art. 182 of the Limitation Act has no analogy in the instant case. (1902) I L R 26 Mad 81 (FB), Disting.

Two courses are open to the Court which grants review, either to rehear the case at once or to make such orders in regard to the rehearing as the circumstances require. I L R (1960) 1 Andh Pra 25 : (1959) 2 Andh W R 541 : A I R 1960 Andh Pra 81 (82, 83) (Prs 5, 12) (DB).

——O. 47, Rr. 2, 4, 7, S. 115 and O. 43, R 1 (w)—Composite order granting review and rehearing case—Legality—Appeal—Revision.

The provisions of O. 43, R. 1 (w), C. P. Code are to be read subject to the provisions of O. 47 and an order granting a review can be appealed against only on one of the grounds set out in O. 47, R. 7.

Where in a review petition the requirements of R. 2 are satisfied and the mandatory provisions of proviso (a) to R. 4 of giving notice are complied with, mere omission to pass a formal order making the rule absolute would not attract the provisions of R. 7 for the simple reason that there was no contravention of Cls. (a) and (b) of R. 7. No appeal is therefore competent from the order under O. 43, R. 1 (w), C. P. Code.

The passing of a composite order, of granting the review and forthwith rehearing the case is a mere irregularity and cannot be said to be an illegality or material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction. There is therefore no scope for treating the appeal as a revision. 1958 Andh L T 822 : AIR 1959 Andh Pra 305 (306) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

——O. 47, R. 2—Applicability to Revenue Courts—Effect of special provisions — (Hyderabad Land Revenue Act (8 of 1317 F), S. 166)—(Hyderabad Office Order No. 24 of 1354-F)—(Hyderabad Office Order No. 29 of 1357-F).

Under S. 5, C. P. Code the C. P. Code applies only when the Rent, i. e., Revenue Acts are silent and if the C. P. Code is to be excluded further, the Government should notify in the Government Gazette the subjects which it desires to be excluded. 38 Cal 832 and 9 Cal 295 (PC), Rel. on.

Thus when definite provisions like the Office Orders, Nos. 24 and 29 and S. 166, Land Revenue Act, 1317-F, make specific provisions on the subject of review, evidently they will have to be given effect to and O. 47, R. 2, C. P. Code, will not apply.

Held, on facts that on the abolition of the post of the D. G. ——O. 47, R. 2 — Decision in appeal by the Judge of the Chief Court of the State of Manipur — Application for review by the L Rs. of the respondent made to the J. C of the new Court — Maintainability — Ground of decree being against a dead respondent.

The appeal was decided by a Judge of the then Chief Court of the State of Manipur which was abolished and the pending cases therefrom transferred to the Court of J. C. of Manipur constituted by the Governor General.

Held, that (1) the Judicial Commissioner was not the successor to the Judge of the former Chief Court of Manipur State in the said circumstances.

(2) The petitioners are not aggrieved persons under O. 47, R. 2, C. P. ——O. 47, R. 2 — Scope — Review by successor-in-office—When permissible—Mistake of law apparent on face of record — Review by successor — Permissibility.

Order 47, R. 1 read with R. 2 leads to the following conclusion, viz., where a decree is passed by a Judge of the High Court the application for review of the decree may be made to that Judge or to the successor-in-office whatever may be the ground on which the review is sought for. But where a decree is passed by a Judge other than a High Court Judge, the application for review of a decree may be made to the Judge who delivered the judgment or to the successor-in-office, provided the review is sought on the following two grounds, viz., (1) discovery of a new and important matter or evidence; (2) some clerical or arithmetical mistake or error apparent on the face of the decree.

Where the Court passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff by applying law which was not in force on the date of the transaction and the error was apparent on the face of the record, Held, that the successor of Judge who passed the decree could review the judgment under O. 47, R. 2 read with R. 1. 23 Cut L T 425 : AIR 1957 Orissa 230 (231) (Pr 5).

——O. 47, Rr. 2, 7 (1) (a)—Contravention of R. 2.

It cannot be contended that an application for review contravenes provisions of O. 47, R. 2, simply because each one of the facts on which the review is granted by the successor was not stated in the application which was presented to the Judge who ordered the notice under Rule 4, sub-r. (2), proviso (a) of O. 47 to be issued I L R (1953) Patiala 180 : A I R 1954 Pepsu 27 (28) (Pt A) (Pr 2).

——O. 47, R. 2 — Application for review—Issue of notice under O. 47, R. 4 (2), Proviso (a) in presence of pleader—Presumption — Refusal to consider application on merits by successor on ground of improper notice — Revision — Evidence Act (1872), S. 114. See Ibid, S. 115. AIR 1954 Raj 23.

——O. 47, R. 2—"Disposed of"—Meaning of—Abrogation of Rule by Ordinance 40 of 1949—Review of order of Ijlas-i-Khas—No notice issued—Disposal by High Court—(Rajasthan Appeals and Petitions (Discontinuance Ordinance (40 of 1949), (as amended by Ordinance 12 of 1950), Ss. 3 & 4).

The words "disposed of" in O. 47, R. 2 obviously mean disposal on the merits. But S. 4 of Ordinance 40 of 1949 does not mean that the disposal in every case shall be on merits; it only means that the disposal shall be according to law. Further, in view of S. 3 of the Ordinance, it cannot be said that S. 4 has abrogated the provisions of O. 47, R. 2.

Where, therefore, an application for review of an order of the Ijlas-i-Khas remained pending and no notice was issued on this application by His Highness before Ordinance 40 of 1949 came into force, Held, that the High Court, as the successor to Ijlas-i-Khas, could not dispose of the application as no notice was issued. M. C. No. 7 of 1950 decided on 8-2-1952 explained and applied. 1952 Raj L W 172 : ILR (1952) 2 Raj 314 : AIR 1952 Raj 178 (179) (Ft A) (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

——O. 47, R. 2—Application for review filed before Ijlas-i Khas — Notice under O. 47, R. 4 (2) issued by Rajasthan High Court — High Court as successor to Ijlas-i-Khas cannot dispose of application.

Where an application for review was made to the Ijlas i Khas (His Highness the Maharaja) of the former State of Jodhpur, to which O. 47, R. 2 applied, but notice under O. 47, R. 4 (2) proviso (a) was not issued by His Highness the Maharaja but was issued by the new High Court of Rajasthan which was the successor to the Ijlas-i-Khas.

Held, that the application must be disposed of subject to the provisions of O. 47, R. 2 and the fact that the successor Court was a High Court would not affect the application of O. 47, R. 2.

As the notice was not issued by His Highness the Maharaja (the Ijlas-i Khas) who passed the decree, the High Court which was the successor to the Ijlas-i-Khas could not dispose of this application for review in view of O. 47, R. 2. 1952 Raj L W 169 : I L R (1952) 2 Raj 309 : A I R 1952 Raj 134 (135) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——O. 47, R. 2—Review by successor in office.

If an application for review is presented before the Judge who made the order or passed the decree sought to be reviewed and notice is issued by him, it is competent for his successor to deal with that application and it is unnecessary in such a case that the ground which should alone justify the presentation of an application to a succeeding Judge should exist. 1954 Ker L T 941 : I L R (1953) Trav-Co 905 : A I R 1954 Trav-Co 226 (229) (Pt E) (Pr 10) (DB).

——O. 47, R. 3—Application for review — Copies of judgment, decree or order—Filing of, if necessary.

It depends on the practice of the High Courts whether copies of the judgment and decree or order are to be filed along with the application for review.

No copies of the judgment and decree or order need be filed along with the application for review as it is not the practice of the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Bhopal and the petition for review filed within time is perfectly competent.

The provision of S. 12 (2) and (3) are not of any help in deciding whether the filing of copies are necessary along with the petition as they are attracted only when the copies are required by law to be so filed. 17 All 213 (FB) and A I R 1938 Lah 295 Foll.; I L R 4 Bom 414, Ref. ORDER 47, RULE 4

(Civil P. C. (1908), O. 47, R. 4.)

1. Rejection of review application.
2. Grant of review.
3. Review without notice to the opposite party.
4. "Discovery of new matter or evidence".
5. "Strict proof".
6. Appeal and revision.

1. Rejection of review application.

——O. 47, R. 4 — Application for review rejected under O. 47, R. 4—Art. 182 (3), Limitation Act is not available. See Limitation Act (1908), Art. 182 (3). A I R 1955 N U C (Cal) 1421 (DB).

——O. 47, R. 4 — Rejection of review — Refund of court-fee.

The fact that a review petition is found to be not maintainable will not justify a refund of the deficit court-fee paid on it. 1949-2 Mad L J 145 : 1949 Mad W N 576 : A I R 1950 Mad 50 (52) (Pt D) (Pr 5).

——O. 47, R. 4 (1) — Applicability — Court holding that there was good ground for allowing application for review — Order on face of it cannot fall under sub-rule (1). A I R 1953 Pat 208 (209) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

2. Grant of review.

——O. 47, R. 4 (1) — Grant of application for review —No sufficient ground —Provision if contravened.

Sub-rule (1) of R. 4 cannot be interpreted to mean that its provision is contravened if the Court grants the application though there is no sufficient ground for a review. Whether there is no such ground must appear to the Court which hears the application. If the Court considers that the application should be granted the case falls under sub-rule (2). 1951 R D 169 : 1951 All W R (Rev) 149.

——O. 47, R. 4 — Power of review is creature of statute and is not within power of an officer or Court. See Houses and Rents — Orissa House Rent Control Act (31 of 1958), S. 7 (1) (iv). I L R (1965) Cut 574.

3. Review without notice to the opposite party.

——O. 47, R. 4, O. 20, R. 3, O. 41, R. 30, S. 152—U. P. Revenue Court Manual, R. 170 — Power to alter order.

M, a member of Board of Revenue purporting to dismiss appeal before him by his own judgment but referring case to his colleague R only with object to overrule previous decision of the Board—R, however, differing with M and agreeing with previous decision of the Board — Thereupon M, instead of dismissing appeal, allowing it without giving any party opportunity to be heard again — Held, that M did not purport to act either under S. 152 or under O. 47, R. 4— O. 20, R. 3 therefore took away from him jurisdiction to alter his previous order of dismissal—O. 41, R. 30 also did not permit him to alter judgment — His subsequent order allowing appeal was therefore without jurisdiction and liable to be quashed.

(Provisions of O. 20, R. 3 and O. 41, R. 30 compared). A I R 1947 All 211, Rel. on. A I R 1955 N U C (All) 3553.

——O. 47, R. 4 and O. 41, R. 11 — Common judgment in two connected suits — Admission of on second appeal and dismissal of another — Admission of review application without notice — Scope and effect.

On a reading of the provisions of O. 47, R. 4 of the Civil P C. (5 of 1908), it seems that the issue of previous notice to the opposite party, namely the person interested in upholding the order sought to be reviewed is a condition for the exercise of jurisdiction by the Court to grant review. But non-compliance with Proviso to R. 4 regarding notice would be a jurisdictional error and not a defect of utter lack of jurisdiction or total absence of initial jurisdiction, which alone would render the order passed a nullity. Whatever phraseology is adopted to describe an order granting review without notice to the opposite party —whether it is called illegal, or irregular or null and void—the position of the person affected by the order is clear. He need not file any independent application of his own to have the order in the review application set aside. The order would not, of course, bind him. He can either prefer an appeal from that order or object to it at the subsequent stages of the proceedings as provided for under O. 47, R. 7. That enacts that an order granting an application may be objected to on the ground that the order was in contravention of R. 4. On such objection being raised, the order granting review cannot be relied upon by the person who succeeded in getting that order. Therefore, the order granting review of the previous order of dismissal under O. 41, R. 11 of the Code, would not bind the respondents in this appeal and they must succeed in the objection raised by them that the said order being repugnant to R. 4 should not be treated as valid and operative. I L R (1964) 1 Mad 422 : (1964) 2 Mad L J 339.

——O. 47, R. 4 — Review without notice to opposite party.

It is necessary that notice of application for review should be given to the opposite party before granting review application, otherwise the order granting review will be a nullity. Case law relied on. A I R 1953 Manipur 1 (Pt A) (Pr 3).

——O. 47, R. 4, Cl. 2 (a) and O. 50, R. 1—Small Cause Court allowing application for review when no notice was given to opposite party— Requirement of notice under O. 47, R. 4 is mandatory and O. 47, R. 4 is applicable to Court of Small Causes—Opposite party can move High Court against such illegal review order even after final order in suit is passed by Small Cause Court — Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (1887), S. 25.

Where the Small Cause Court granted the application for review of its order without notice to the opposite party :

Held, that the requirement of O. 47, R. 4 of the Code is mandatory and this provision of law is applicable to Court of Small Causes. There is no bar to the opposite party agitating this question as against the final order passed in the suit itself. The whole record of the case is before the High Court, and if it is found that the order granting review was not in accordance with law, the High Court can set aside that order, acting under S. 25 of the Small Cause Courts Act. AIR 1965 Pat 219 (219, 220) (Pr 2).

——O. 47, R. 4— Review without notice to the opposite party.

Pauper application dismissed—Restoration—Even if Court thought that the application was not for an order allowing the applicant to pay court-fee but for the review of the previous order it was incumbent upon him under the law to issue notice before passing any final order on that application for review. 4. "Discovery of new matter or evidence."

● ——O. 47, Rr. 4, 7 and 1—Order granting review on grounds other than those mentioned in provisos to O. 47, R. 4 (2)—No appeal lies. 69 Mad L W (Andhra) 50, Overruled M. Agaiah v. Mohd. Abdul Kareem, 1960 Andh L T 835 : (1960) 2 Andh W R 416 ; AIR 1961 Andh Pra 201 (204, 205, 208) (Pt E) (Prs 22, 26, 27, 28, 57) (FB).

——O. 47, Rr. 4 and 7— Appeal—Right of — If confined to ground of discovery of new material or evidence.

Clause (b) of O. 47, R. 4 (2) is in general terms and is not limited only to the matters mentioned in the proviso. The only import of the proviso is that if the ground put forward for review is that mentioned in Cl. (b) of the proviso unless the conditions stated therein are satisfied, review should not be granted. Hence an appeal lies against every order allowing an application for review under O. 47, and is not confined only to the ground of discovery of new material or evidence. 69 Mad L W (Andhra) 50.

[Overruled in AIR 1961 Andh Pra 201 (FB).]

——O. 47, R. 4 (2) (b)—Construction — Proof of due diligence—Necessity.

It is true that Cl. (b) of O. 47, R. 4 sub-r. (2) does not mention the words, 'after the exercise of due diligence.' But this does not justify the conclusion that the bar of the proviso in Cl. (b) disappears as soon as it is proved that the new matter was not within the party's knowledge or could not be produced without proof that this was so in spite of the exercise of due diligence. Although the words, 'after the exercise of due diligence' appearing in R. 1 of O. 47, have not been repeated in Cl. (b) of sub-r. (2) of R. 4 of O. 47, they have to be read into Cl. (b) by implication as otherwise the requirement of the exercise of due diligence in R. 1 becomes nugatory. A I R 1920 Cal 467, Rel. on. 5. "Strict proof."

——O. 47, R. 4, (2) (b)—"Strict proof"—Meaning of.

The phrase "staict proof" does not refer to the sufficiency of proof, but only to the fact that formal proof is required derived from anything which may serve directly to convince a Court and has been brought before the Court in legal form and in compliance with the requirement of the law of evidence. Where S, who was a Judicial Member of the Board of Revenue, was relieved of his duties of a Judicial Member before the application for review of an order passed by him was filed and he was appointed as Administrative Member of the Board and after the appointment as Administrative Member he had no judicial work to perform.

Held, that after the appointment as Administrative Member, it could not be said that S continued to be attached to the Court as such and, that being the position, the provisions of O. 47, R. 5 did not make it obligatory that S should himself deal with the application for review. 1959 All L J 611 : 1959 All W R (HC) 432: ILR (1959) 2 All 173 : AIR 1960 All 93 (95) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

(Civil P. C. (1908), O. 47, R. 7.)

1. Scope.
2. Order rejecting review not appealable.
3. Order granting review, appeal against.
4. "In contravention of the provisions of rule 4."
5. Letters Patent appeal.
6. Restoration of review application.
7. Revision.

1. Scope.

——O. 47, R. 7 — Review application allowed by Insolvency Judge — Appeal before District Judge — Although S. 75 Provincial Insolvency Act, provides for appeals of this kind, disposal of such appeals will be governed by O. 47, R. 7, Civil P. C. See Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 75. 1964 All L J 812.

——O. 47, R. 7 — S. 622, Hyd. Civil P. C. — Scope— Order allowing review—Appealability—Conditions— S. 605 — Scope — If controlled by S. 622. See Ibid, O. 43, R. 1 (w). AIR 1951 Hyd 37 (DB).

2. Order rejecting review not appealable.

——O 47, R. 7 – Decree by lower Court—Application for review by aggrieved party dismissed by Court — Appeal against decree by such party – Order refusing review cannot affect powers of appellate Court. AIR 1963 All 119 (120) (Pt E) (Pr 18).

● ——O. 47. R. 7 — Decree under S. 14, U. P. Encumbered Estates Act – Application to amend decree after determining liability of co-debtor—Application dismissed—Appeal –Debt Laws—U. P. Encumbered Estates Act (25 of 1934), S. 9 (5).

Where the landlord applicant is a joint debtor along with certain others who have not applied under the Encumbered Estates Act it becomes necessary for a final determination of the liability that the Court should consider, in the presence of the other joint debtors, what is the total amount due and then determine how that liability is to be apportioned between the various debtors. If the liability of the landlord applicant is not in question then the Special Judge is not really concerned with the other debtors who are not before him. It is only because the other debtors are joint debtors with the landlord applicant that the apportionment becomes necessary.

One R having filed a suit on a mortgage against L and K. L filed an application under S. 4 of the Encumbered Estates Act and the suit was stayed. In the proceedings before the Special Judge, a decree under S. 14 of the Act was passed in favour of R and the debt due from L was eventually liquidated. While the proceedings, after the passing of the decree, were pending before the Collector, R filed an application under S. 151 and O. 47, R. 1 of the Civil P. C. before the Special Judge to get the decree amended after determining the liability of his co-debtor K. The application was dismissed and the question was whether the order of dismissal was appealable.

Held, that having regard to the provisions of Sec. 9 (5) of the Encumbered Estates Act, the application by R was clearly an application for review and therefore, no appeal lay against the order dismissing the application. Khurshed Ali Khan v. Ram Saran, AIR 1950 All 378 (380) (Pr 6) (FB).

——O. 47, R. 7 — Order granting review — Appeal against confined to order passed in review—Appellate Court has jurisdiction to interfere with earlier order which was not subject matter of appeal. (1960) 1 Assam L R 82 : AIR 1960 Assam 204 (205) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

——O. 47, R. 7; O. 43, R. 1 (w)—Appeal from order granting review on ground of apparent error.

Order 43, R. 1, Cl. (w) which confers a right to appeal against an order granting review has to be read with R. 7, of O. 47, and so reading it the conclusions are irresistible that an order granting a review on the ground that there is an error apparent on the face of the record or on the ground that there are other sufficient reasons to justify it, is not appealable under O. 43, R. 1 and the only way in which it can be assailed is by way of an appeal from the eventual decree that may be passed in the case. Case law referred. ILR (1955) Hyd 98 : AIR 1955 Hyd 112 (113) (Pr 2) (DB).

● ——O. 47, R. 7 — No appeal will lie from an order granting review in cases other than those specified in R. 7 (a), (b) and (c). See Ibid, O. 43, R. 1 (w). AIR 1954 Hyd 166 (FB).

——O. 47, R. 7 (1) (b) — Review allowed on wrong conception—Appeal.

Order 47, R. 7 (1) (b), C. P. Code, provides an appeal when a review is admitted in contravention of R. 4 of the said order. Rule 4 (1) states that where it appears to the Court that there is no sufficient ground for a review, it shall reject the application. Where the Court having said that the decree holder was negligent admits the review on a wrong conception as to the necessity for notice before dismissal of execution, the order is appealable. 1958 Ker L T 830 : 1959 Ker L J 508 : AIR 1959 Ker 154 (Pt B) (Pr 2) (DB).

——O. 47, R. 7 — Appeal — Review granted on ground of error apparent on face of record — Order is not appealable and is not covered by provisions of R. 7. See Ibid, O. 43, R. 1 (w). AIR 1953 Pat 208.

—— O. 47, R. 7—Appeal from order granting review.

Where an order grants a review and modifies the decree at the same time, it is not necessary to prefer an appeal from the modified decree. An appeal from the order granting review is competent and if the order granting a review is set aside, all subsequent proceedings taken under that order are also to be regarded as having been "set aside." 5. Letters Patent appeal.

● ——O. 47, R. 7 — Letters Patent (Mad), Cl. 15 — Scope — Clause prevails over O. 47, R. 7 and other provisions of Civil P. C. — Refusal to review an order is judgment. See Letters Patent (Mad), Cl. 15. AIR 1964 Andh Pra 162 (FB).

——O. 47, R. 7 — Order dismissing review — No appeal lies — [Letters Patent (Mad.), Cl. 15].

An order rejecting an application for review under O. 47, R. 1 is not appealable. Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent is controlled by O. 47, R. 7 and therefore an appeal under Cl. 15 also is not maintainable against an order rejecting an application for review of judgment. 6. Restoration of review application.

——O. 47, R. 7 (2) — Advocate's negligence — No ground for restoration of review application.

It is, an extremely legalistic view to say that the petitioner's Advocate's negligence was not a ground for the restoration of the review applications dismissed for default. ('62) 40 Mys L J 986 (DB).

7. Revision.

——O. 47, R. 7, O. 43, R. 1 (w), S. 115 — Order rejecting review — Appeal — Remedy — Revision.

The Code does not provide for an appeal against refusal of a review. An order rejecting the review may, however, be brought into question in revision; but the scope of revision lies within a very narrow compass, for in such a case the applicant has got to justify his contention that in the exercise of its jurisdiction the Court of first instance in refusing review acted illegally or with material irregularity. AIR 1957 All 400 (401, 402) (Pt B) (Pr 5).

——O. 47, R. 7 and S. 115—Revision.

Review passed not sought on the ground that there was an error apparent on the face of the record, or in any event not granted on that ground but allowed on ground that there was sufficient cause — Opposite party's appeal based on ground of incorrectness of the order and also on the ground of limitation urged by him in the first Court is competent—Consequently order by appellate Court being one passed with jurisdiction will not be interfered with in revision only for the reasons that it is erroneous on facts or law and that there is no second appeal. 1953 All W R (H C) 704 : 1953 All L J 613 : AIR 1954 All 209 (209 210) (Prs 3, 5).

——O. 47, R. 7 - Error on face of record — Lower Court rejecting application for review — Power of High Court to interfere.

The power of reviewing a judgment on the ground of an apparent error on the face of the record, vests in the Court which has passed the order and not in a superior Court. Therefore, the High Court cannot review a judgment of an inferior Court on the ground of an error apparent on the face of the record where the inferior Court has decided that there was no such error and refused to review. (a), (b) or (c) of O. 47, R. 7 (1) — Held, further that the appellate order in such a case will not be interfered with in revision merely on the ground that the Court of appeal had no jurisdiction and particularly so when no objection to jurisdiction was taken before the appellate Court. ORDER 47, RULE 8

● ——O. 47, R. 8—Effect of review.

The judgment of the Court cannot be regarded as having any bearing after that judgment was set aside in review subject to the points which were taken as binding. Moran Mar Basselios Catholicos v. Most. Rev. Mar Poulose Athanasius, 1954 Ker L T 385 : 1954 S C J 736 : I L R (1954) Trav-Co 867 : 1955 S C R 520 : 1955 S C A 1351 : A I R 1954 S C 526 (544) (Pt H) (Pr 38).

——O. 47, R. 8 and S. 115 — Review granted on particular ground — Court may order rehearing of whole case.

While granting an application for review of a judgment, the Court has jurisdiction to direct rehearing of the entire case or part of it. The power of the Court under O. 47, R. 8, is not restricted to the particular ground on which the review is granted. The matter thus being entirely left to the discretion of the Court, failure to give better reasons for passing such an order (though the Court would be well advised to give these) would not amount to an error in procedure, justifying interference with it in revision by the High Court. 24 Suth W R 427, Disting. 11 Moo Ind App 487 (P C) and (1873) 10 Bom H C R 360 and AIR 1914 Cal 146 and AIR 1918 Cal 879 and I L R 32 Bom 111 (F B) and A I R 1943 Mad 235, Rel. on. 1963 All L J 527 : AIR 1964 All 359 (360-361) (Prs 3, 5).

——O. 47, R. 8—Scope — Review granted — Whole case if can be re-opened.

The words of O. 47, R. 8, namely, "may at once rehear the case or make such order in regard to the rehearing as it thinks fit" are rather wide. The Court may, in exercise of the powers conferred under that section, not only give directions in regard to procedural matters but also can define the scope of the enquiry. It may, for instance, confine the scope of rehearing to that part of the appeal or suit which was vitiated by the defect found or affected by the new evidence discovered. The discretion is vested in the Court directing rehearing, as otherwise on the pretext of an error on the face of the record affecting an insignificant part of the decree the entire trial sometimes covering a wide field and involving an examination of innumerable witnesses and a scrutiny of countless documents will have to be reheard, though the trial was otherwise free from any effect. It is unnecessary to attribute that intention to the Legislature, unless the clear words compel the conclusion. The aforesaid words have been designedly used by the Legislature conferring a discretionary jurisdiction on a Court directing a rehearing of a concluded trial. Of course, if the Court allowing a review petition does not restrict the scope of the enquiry, it may reasonably be held that it intended to re-open the entire case.

Where a learned Judge after allowing a review petition definitely stated that since the actual working out involved arguments the appeal itself would be re-opened and reheard under O. 47, R. 8, Civil P. C., there is no limit restricting the scope of the inquiry and the whole case can be re-opened. (1952) 2 Mad L J 180 : 65 Mad L W 700 : 1952 Mad W N 562 : AIR 1953 Mad 826 (827) (Pr 5).

SCHEDULE 2

——Sch. 2 — Gwalior Civil P. C., Chap. 35 — Repeal of Gwalior Code and adaptation of Indian Civil P. C., by Act 70 of 1949 — Effect on pending arbitration proceedings — Indian Civil P. C., together with its Second Schedule if adapted.

After the repeal of the Gwalior Civil P. C., by Act No. 70 of 1949 and the adaptation by same Act of the Indian Civil P. C., from 22-1-1950 until the extension of the Indian Arbitration Act to Madhya Bharat on 1-4-1951, there was no law of arbitration in the area of Madhya Bharat comprising the former Gwalior State. By Act 70 of 1949, the Indian Civil P. C., was not adapted in the Madhya Bharat together with Second Schedule as it stood before the enactment of the Arbitration Act, 1940.

In the case of pending arbitration proceedings, the case must be tried and decided by the Court in the ordinary manner. It is not enough that the Court had jurisdiction to make an order of reference to arbitration and pass a decree on the basis of the award at the time the parties applied to the Court for arbitration. It is essential that the arbitrators and the Court must possess the jurisdiction at the time of making the award and of passing the decree thereon. Therefore, if the Court and arbitrators lose this jurisdiction during the pendency of any arbitration proceedings they cannot be continued. AIR 1951 Madh B 162 (164, 165) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——Sch. 2—Whether repealed in Palitana State.

The Civil Procedure Code of 1908 was applied to and was in force in the Palitana State. Then with a view to specify which particular laws and subject to what amendments therein were in force in the Palitana State, Hazur Order No. 88 dated 21st January 1939 was issued. Item I of Sch. A was the Civil Procedure Code of 1908.

By Hazur Order No. 215 dated 23rd April 1941 the final notification was issued which was almost in identical terms as the previous notification. Between the dates of these two Hazur Orders the Arbitration Act of 1940 came to be enacted and put into operation on 1st July 1940 and Sch. 2, Civil P. C., together with two other provisions were repealed by S. 49 of the said Act. The Arbitration Act was not made applicable to Palitana :

Held, the necessary implication was that so far as Palitana State was concerned Sch. 2, Civil P. C., had not been repealed. Further as the expression used in Cl. 2 of the Hazur Order was 'amendments' it did not mean repeal in which event the repeal of Sch. 2, Civil P. C. would not amount to an 'amendment'. The Civil Procedure Code applicable in the Palitana State at the date of the suit and at all material dates subsequent thereto must, therefore, be taken to be the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 together with the Second Schedule thereof. SCHEDULE 3, PARA. 2

——Sch. 3, Paras. 2 to 7 — Power of Collector to lease property.

Paragraphs 2 to 7 of Sch. 3, Civil P. C., do not speak of attachment; all that is necessary is that there should be a liability (paragraph 2) and "a decree for the payment of money .... capable of execution by sale of his (the judgment-debtor's) immovable property" (paragraph 3). The moment these conditions are fulfilled and the decree-holder, that is to say, a decree-holder other than the one whose decree is sent for execution under form C, applies under paragraph 4 in pursuance of the notice issued under paragraph 3 the Collector is bound to make an enquiry and draw up a statement. If on drawing up this statement the Collector thinks it is not possible to satisfy all the judgment-debtor's debts without selling he must sell forthwith under paragraph 7 (1) (a) It is only if he thinks all the liabilities can be satisfied without a sale that he can lease, etc. ILR (1950) Nag 928 : AIR 1951 Nag 218 (220, 221, 222, 223, 224) (Pt A) (Prs 20, 26, 27, 29, 44) (DB).

——Sch. 3, Paras. 2, 3, 4 and 7 — Rights and duties of Collector—Procedure not followed—Irregularity, if curable.

It is evident from paras 2 to 7, Sch. 3, Civil P. C. that the Collector has the right, and indeed is bound, to draw up a scheme for satisfying all existing decrees and claims which are capable of being executed by sale of the judgment-debtor's immovable property if he considers an immediate sale is not necessary for the reasons set out in para 2. His duty is not confined to execution of the decree sent to him unless he intends to effect an immediate sale. The moment a decree is sent to him he has first to determine whether all the liabilities of the judgment-debtor can be discharged without a sale of all his available property. If he thinks this is possible then he has to ascertain all claims against the judgment-debtor which are capable of being satisfied out of his property and then either to draw up a scheme for the satisfaction of them all and determine their priority or, in the event of a dispute, to get the Civil Court to do it. The omission to follow the above procedure is an irregularity which could be cured if it does not occasion prejudice. ILR (1950) Nag 928 : AIR 1951 Nag 218 (220, 221) (Pt C) (Prs 18, 23) (DB).

They cannot be any the less bound because they agree to the proposals of the Collector and so make the decision of a Civil Court unnecessary. ILR (1950) Nag 928 : AIR 1951 Nag 218 (DB).

SCHEDULE 3, PARA. 7

——Sch. 3, Para. 7—Duty to ascertain all liabilities of judgment-debtor.

(Obiter.)—Under Para. 7 the Collector's duty is not confined to the decree sent to him for execution. He has to ascertain whether all the liabilities of the judgment-debtor can be satisfied without a sale of his immovable property. It is only when this is possible that the property may be leased instead of being sold. But where the property is leased without complying with the above requirement the defect is only a curable irregularity. ILR (1950) Nag 928 : AIR 1951 Nag 218 (220, 221) (Pt C) (Prs 18, 23) (DB).

SCHEDULE 3, PARA. 8

——Sch. 3, Paras, 8 and 11 — Sale of property pending lease in execution of another decree — Power of Collector.

The Collector granted a lease of the judgment-debtor's property for a term of years for satisfying A's decree. Pending the lease, and with A's consent the Collector sold the reversion to B another decree holder of the same judgment-debtor for satisfying B's decree. As only a portion of the rents under the lease were realised, A's decree was not satisfied from the rents and A sought to have the property sold to realise the balance due to him.

Held that (1) A having consented to the sale in favour of B could not resile from his position;

(2) The Collector having already sold the property to B could not re-sell it and what the Collector could not do. the financial Commissioner, (the Collector's superior) also could not do;

(3) Where the arrangement was made with the consent of all the parties concerned, the absence of strict compliance with the provisions of Sch. 3 as to notice, etc., was merely an immaterial irregularity ;

(4) Para. 8, Sch. 3 did not apply to the case;

(5) Para 11 (2) did not preclude the issue of process for execution of B's decree by the civil Court during the currency of the lease.

Schedule 3, Para. 8 applies only where the Collector has not already parted with the whole of the reversion, either because of an agreement between the parties or because the civil Court has so directed.

Para. 11 only prohibits the issue of any further process in respect of the decree which the Collector is executing and for the satisfaction of which he has granted a lease or is in the process of selling the property. It has no reference to a process in respect of other decrees which have not yet been sent to him for execution. ILR (1950) Nag 928 : AIR 1951 Nag 218 (220, 221, 222, 224) (Pt A) (Prs 20, 26, 27, 29, 44) (DB).

——Sch. 3, Para. 8 — Power to terminate lease.

(Obiter).—The Collector has power under the para to terminate a lease for a term before the expiry of the term, by availing himself of a forfeiture clause in the lease. ILR (1950) Nag 928 : AIR 1951 Nag 218 (219) (Pt B) (Pr 6) (DB).

SCHEDULE 3, PARA. 11

——Sch. 3, Para. 11 — Mortgage bonds executed during Collector's regime — Collector's permission not taken — Bond executed in lieu of earlier bonds after Collector's regime had ended — Validity — (Contract Act (1872), Ss. 25 and 65).

The mortgage bond which was the basis of a suit by the mortgagee for sale of the mortgaged property was executed on 13th April, 1931 in lieu of two earlier mortgage bonds of 27th August, 1914 When those earlier bonds were executed, the loans under them were advanced for the satisfaction of a decree which was under execution and in which this very property was under attachment and sale before the Collector, the property having been ancestral property of the executants. The written permission of the Collector had not been taken when the earlier bonds were executed. But the Collector's regime had ended when the mortgage bond in suit was executed.

Held, that the two earlier mortgages of 27th August, 1914, although made fully for consideration were void as mortgage deeds because of the incapacity imposed on the executants by Para. 11 of Sch. 3, Civil P. C., that there was no general incapacity in the executants to contract and the covenant to repay was not made void by the operation of Para. 11; that in view of, and within terms of S. 65 of the Contract Act the borrower was bound to restore to the lender the advantage received by him; that no invalidity attached to the renewed mortgage deed of 13th April, 1931 and it was fully for consideration and was valid as a contract by virtue of S. 25 of the Indian Contract Act and that the suit ought to be decreed : AIR 1918 P C 168 and AIR 1943 P C 29, Foll. 1959 All L J 498 : 1959 All W R (HC) 383 : AIR 1959 All 788 (789) (Pr 7) (DB).

——Sch. 3, Para. 11 (1) — Sale without permission of Collector — Effect — Contract Act (1872), S. 65.

The provision of Sch. 3, Para. 11 (1) is positive and mandatory and a sale taking place without the written permission of the Collector is void and the fact that after the execution of the sale deed the decretal amount was paid to the decree-holder and the Collector set aside the auction sale on the decree holders certifying satisfaction of the decree cannot amount to an implied permission of the Collector. Section 65 of the Contract Act applies to such a case and the vendee is entitled to compensation : AIR 1937 Nag 330 held Overruled by AIR 1943 P C 29. AIR 1951 All 630 (631, 632) (Prs 13, 15) (DB).

——Sch. 3, Para. 11 (2) — Applicability of Para. 11 (2) — Attachment of agricultural land in execution of money decree — Case transferred under S. 68 to Collector for its sale — Collector proceeding under Para. 1 (c) and reporting non-satisfaction — Subsequent execution after 12 years of date of decree — Paras 11 (2) and 11 (3) not applicable — Execution held barred by S. 48 except as regards the land in prior execution. See Ibid, S. 68. AIR 1964 Bom 157.

——Sch. 3, Para. 11 (2) — "Same period," meaning of.

The expression 'same period' means the period during which the Collector can exercise or perform the powers or duties under Paras. 1 to 10 of Sch. 3. 56 Bom L R 633 : AIR 1955 Bom 145 (146) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

——Sch. 3 Para. 11 (3) — Applicability.

Schedule 3, Para. 11, Cl. (3), applies only to cases in which a decree-holder holding a decree for money is prohibited from applying for execution under Cl. (1). It does not apply to cases in which a mortgage decree instalments have fallen due subsequent to the date on which the proceedings were transferred to the Collector and attempt is made to enforce liability through the Collector for those instalments by sale of the mortgaged property. 56 Bom L R 633 : AIR 1955 Bom 145 (146, 147) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

——Sch. 3, Para. 11 Scope — Executing Court making order for sale of mortgaged lands— Private sale by judgment-debtor of that land after sale proclamation is void. See Ibid, S. 68. AIR 1965 Mys 250 (DB).

——Sch 3, Para. 11 — Execution transferred to Collector — Application to set aside sale under R. 90 lies in executing Court and not to Collector — Bombay rules under S 68. See Ibid, O. 21, R. 90. AIR 1965 Mys 179 (DB).

——Sch. 3, Para. 11 - Applicability — Execution not pending before Collector — Effect.

The bar under Para. 11 in Sch. 3 to the Civil Court taking action in respect of the judgment-debtor's property does not arise where the execution proceedings are no longer pending before the Collector and he cannot therefore exercise any of the powers under Paras. 1 to 10 in respect of the properties of the judgment-debtors. AIR 1924 All 704 and 37 Mys L J 129, Disting. 38 Mys L J 783: AIR 1961 Mys 54 (56) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

——Sch. 3, Para. 11 (1) and (2) — Matter coming within either clause — Civil Court's jurisdiction to issue process for execution.

Whether a matter comes within Cl. (1) or Cl. (2) of Para. 11 in either case the civil Court will have no jurisdiction to issue any process for execution. Clause (2) relates to a case where the civil Court has to issue process of execution in its own Court. But Cl. (1) covers all cases and the civil Court is debarred from issuing any process in respect of such property or part in execution of a decree for payment of money. ILR (1958) Mys 432.

——Sch. 3, Para. 11 and Ss. 70 and 151 and O. 21, R. 57—Powers of Collector — Execution proceeding dismissed for default by Collector — Power of Collector to resume proceedings.

Where a Collector dismisses an execution proceeding in default of the decree-holder and orders that the transferor Civil Court should be informed of the dismissal but actually that Court is not so informed, in such a case there is nothing to prevent the Collector from resuming the proceedings before he has reported the matter to the Civil Court. The termination of the proceedings by him has not the result in law which O. 21, R. 57 contemplates, and his restoration of the proceedings to the file is permissible under his inherent powers which he derives from S. 151. ——Sch. 3, Para. 11 — Incompetency to transfer — Burden of proof.

Where a party seeks to have transfer of property declared void under Sch. 3, Paragraph 11, he is bound to show that on the date of such transfer the Collector was exercising or performing in respect of such property some power or duty conferred upon him by the Code for the purpose of executing a decree which was still unsatisfied on that date. For this purpose the date on which a transfer by sale takes effect is the date of execution of the deed and not the date of registration of the instrument. 8 Nag L R 182; AIR 1938 Nag 253, Foll. ——Sch. 3, Para. 11 and S. 70 — Jurisdiction of Collector to permit sale.

Rule 83 of O. 21, Civil Procedure Code empowers the executing Court to permit the judgment-debtor to sell the property under attachment after satisfying the Court with respect to certain conditions. This power of an executing Court is conferred on the Collector by R. 12 of the Rules framed under S. 70. The Collector, therefore, has no jurisdiction to grant permission to effect any proposed sale unless the sale price is deposited with him, to be transferred to the Civil Court for rateable distribution amongst the several decree holders. ILR (1955) Nag 598 : 1955 Nag L J 569 : AIR 1955 Nag 41 (44) (Pt D) (Pr 10) (DB).

● ——Sch. 3, Para. 11 and S. 48—"Incompetency of judgment-debtor", extent of — Period for which decree was pending before Collector for execution, if can be deducted in computing limitation for fresh execution.

One has to look to the whole scheme of the Third Schedule as well as the rules of procedure framed by the State Government under S. 70, to find out the extent of the incompetence of the judgment-debtor under Para. 11 of Sch. 3 in a particular case.

Incompetency of the judgment-debtor created by paragraph 11, is not a general incompetency to contract, but affects only that property against which the Collector is proceeding under the Third Schedule and does not affect all the immovable property of the Judgment-debtor. When he proceeds under paragraph 1 he can exercise power or perform duties only in respect of the judgment-debtor's immovable property ordered to be sold which may be the whole or part of such property. When he proceeds under paragraph 2 the whole of the available immovable property may be dealt with in accordance with paragraphs 3 to 8. Where the Collector is not exercising powers or performing the duties under paragraphs 2 to 8 but has chosen to take action only in respect of individual property under the first paragraph, the words "immovable property of the judgment-debtor" can have no other meaning than the immovable property in respect of which the Collector is as a matter of fact exercising powers or performing duties.

On 2-3-1929 G had obtained against S a decree for Rs. 558-0-0. The decree was transferred to the Collector for execution after attachment of survey No. 10. The proceedings dragged on before the Collector and finally terminated on the 23rd September 1943 because in another Miscellaneous Judicial Case the survey No. 10 was released from attachment. G thereafter presented another execution petition on the 21st December 1943 to execute the decree by attachment and sale of survey No. 781. A question arose whether this later execution application could be treated as within time, regard being had to the provisions of S. 48.

Held, that the later application for attachment and sale of fresh properties was a fresh application and not a continuation of the old execution. ILR 1947 Nag 497; ILR 1948 Nag 230; Misc. App. No. 86 of 1938, D/- 30th July 1941, Rel. on.

Held, further that the period during which the proceedings before the Collector were pending could not be deducted in computing the period of limitation, the decree-holder not having been deprived of his remedy against other properties of the judgment debtor during the period the decree was being executed by the Collector. Consequently the latter application was barred by limitation. Case law ref. Shrikisandas v. ——Sch. 3, Para. 11 (2)—Scope of prohibition.

What para. 11 (2), Sch. 3, C. P. Code, prohibits is the issue of any further process in respect of the decree which the Collector is executing and for the satisfaction of which he has granted a lease or is in the process of selling the property. It has no reference to a process in respect of other decrees which have not yet been sent to him for execution. ILR (1950)

CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE (AMENDMENT) ACT (2 of 1951).

——Ss. 2 and 20 — Scope of — Pending proceedings under Hyderabad Civil Procedure Code — Whether saved—Hyderabad Civil Procedure Code (3 of 1323-F), S. 602 — Right of Second Appeal on question of fact — States Reorganisation Act (37 of 1956), Ss. 3, 65, 119 and 120—Scope of—Continuance of operation of prevailing laws —Vested right of appeal.

By reason of S. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act of 1951, the Hyderabad Civil Procedure Code was repealed and the C. P. Code of 1908 was extended to the Hyderabad State subject to certain limitations under S. 20 in respect of pending proceedings. The provisions of S. 602 of Hyderabad Civil Procedure Code continued to govern the pending proceedings under that section. Except in case of money suits whose original valuation was less than Rs. 1,000, a second appeal lay to the High Court as of right both on questions of fact and on questions of law without any limitations. The corresponding law in the Andhra State is circumcribed by limitation in S. 100 to S. 102 of C. P. Code (1908).

Under S. 3 of the States Reorganisation Act, that part of the existing State of Hyderabad which was popularly known as Telangana area, ceased to be part of Hyderabad State and became part of the State of Andhra which was renamed as Andhra Pradesh. Section 65 renamed the High Court of Andhra as the High Court of Andhra Pradesh and extended its jurisdiction to the whole of the territories transferred to the Andhra State from the existing State of Hyderabad. Section 119 prescribed the territorial extent of laws. It preserved the different laws prevailing in different areas till otherwise provided for. The law governing second appeals in Telangana continued to be in force. It follows that second appeals arising out of the Telengana area continued to be governed by the provisions of S. 602 of Hyderabad Civil Procedure Code.

The appellant who has a vested right to file a second appeal both on questions of fact as well as on questions of law to the High Court of Hyderabad, therefore continues to have such right to this High Court of Andhra Pradesh which is substituted for the High Court of Hyderabad. SECTION 12

——S. 12—Validity—Constitution of India, Art. 14.

The Act is not discriminatory and does not violate Art. 14 of the Constitution and as such is not invalid.

The Act requires all persons intending to sue ex-Ruling Chief to obtain the consent prior to the institution of the suit. It does not create two classes. It does confer a discretion on the executive. A I R 1953 Ajmer 56 (58) (Pt B) (Pr 8).

——S. 20—Retrospective effect—Rights not affected —Right to resist execution of decree — (Adaptation of Laws Order (1950), S. 20).

The right of a non-resident foreigner to ignore a decree on the ground that it was a nullity, to refuse to obey it and see that his properties were in no way proceeded against in execution must be held to be a substantive right. If that remained to a person at the time the decree was passed it remained unaffected in view of S. 20 of the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1950 and in view of S. 20 of the C P. Code (Amendment) Act, 1951.

It is not correct to say that that right of the judgment-debtors had been taken away by the absorption of the State of Madhya Bharat into the territory of India which was an act of State and therefore the decree became executable. As an act of State the absorption could affect only the rights of the inhabitants of the absorbed State. The rights and immunities which the non-resident foreigner, who was an inhabitant of the absorbing State had from execution of the decree in the territories of his State remained entirely unaffected by the fact of his State having absorbed within its territory the State in which the decree was passed. ——S. 20 — By reason of S. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act of 1951 the Hyderabad Civil Procedure Code was repealed and the Civil P. C. (1908) was extended to the Hyderabad State subject to certain limitations under S. 20 in respect of pending proceedings. See Ibid, S. 2. I L R (1958) Andh-Pra 106.

——S. 20—Applicability—Second appeal filed under S. 602, Hyderabad C. P. Code, when that was in force — Subsequent coming into force of C. P. Code (Amendment) Act (2 of 1951)—Effect — Administration on questions of fact in second appeal—Right to.

The institution of a suit carries with it the right to appeal according to the law prevailing at the time of the institution and the right to appeal is preserved unless the legislature has either abolished the Court to which the appeal then lay or has expressly or by necessary implication or intendment given the Abolishing Act a retrospective operation.

Where the right to a second appeal under S. 603, Hyderabad C. P. Code, had accrued to the appellant, such right is not taken away by the coming into force of the Indian C. P. Code (Amendment) Act 2 of 1951 in Hyderabad during the pendency of such appeal and therefore questions of fact can be adjudicated upon in such second appeal. There is nothing in Act 2 of 1951, taking away either expressly or by necessary intendment the vested right of an appellant to have his second appeal adjudicated on questions of fact under S. 602, Hyderabad C. P. Code. I L R (1951) Hyd 621; AIR 1952 Hyd 34 (34, 35) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 8) (DB).

——S. 20—Execution of decree passed by Court in Part A State by Court in Part B State.

Executability of a binding judgment within a certain territory is a matter not affecting vested right of a judgment-debtor. It is a settled principle of law that the rights of the parties to an action are to be governed by the law in force when the action was commenced and that a change in the law would not affect pending actions, unless there is a clear provision to that effect in the new enactment. Not only is there nothing in C. P. Code (Amendment) Act (2 of 1951) to indicate that the Indian C. P. Code, which was brought into force in Travancore State on 1st April, 1951, was intended to affect the rights already accrued and proceedings initiated under the Travancore C. P. Code, but all such rights and proceedings have been expressly saved by S. 20 of that Act.

Under S. 31 (1), Travancore C. P. Code, the Court could not decree by way of interest up to the date of the suit anything in excess of a moiety of the principal sum. Such an immunity from liability for any excess amount by way of interest, was undoubtedly a valuable right which the defendants had acquired under S. 31.

It could not be taken away as a consequence of the subsequent replacement of the Travancore C. P. Code by the Indian Code. 1956 Ker L T 333 : AIR 1956 Trav-Co 236 (237, 238) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 20—Effect on Travancore Civil P. C. (1100), S. 8—(Travancore Civil P. C. (1100), S. 8).

It cannot be argued that a right was conferred on defendants by S. 8, Travancore Civil P. C. and that such right was left intact by the repeal of the Code of 1100. The effect of the repeal of the Travancore Code of Civil Procedure is that the said Code must be considered as having never existed except for the purpose of those actions which were commenced, prosecuted and concluded while the said Code was in force. The procedure prescribed for under S. 8 having been repealed during the trial of the suit, retrospective effect must be given to the present Civil P. C. so far as actions pending on the date it came into force are concerned. It must therefore be held that the failure to produce the permission of the Government under S. 8 of the repealed Code cannot entail dismissal of the suit. 1955 Ker L T 553 : ILR (1955) Trav-Co 625 : AIR 1955 Trav-Co 275 (277) (P. ● ——S. 20 (2)—'Rules made' — Meaning of—(Civil Procedure Code (1908), Ss. 121, 122 and 127).

It is clear from Ss. 121, 122 and 127 that the Code contemplates two classes of rules, i. e., rules contained in the First Schedule which may be annulled, altered or added to by the High Court and other rules which do not form part of the First Schedule but will have the same force and effect as if they had been contained in the First Schedule. The rules mentioned in sub-s. (2) of S. 20 of Act 2 of 1951 are of the latter class and not those contained in the First Schedule of the Code. Pappathi Ammal v. Sivagaonam, 1954 Ker L T 827 : ILR (1954) Trav-Co 929 : A I R 1954 Trav-Co 526 (531) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (FB).

● ——S. 20 (1) and 2)—Effect of extension of C. P. Code to Travancore-Cochin Repeal of Travancore Rules — (Travancore Code of Civil Procedure, O. 9, R. 9 (3)).

(Majority view, Subramania Iyer, J., dissenting):— The Amendment Act of 1951, introduced in the State of Travancore-Cochin not only the sections in the Indian C. P. Code, but also the Orders and Rules contained in that Code, and it was not only the sections of the Travancore Code of Civil Procedure that were repealed by S. 20, sub-s. (1) of that Act but also the Orders and Rules contained in that Code and the rules preserved by sub-s (2) of that section so far as the Travancore area of the State is concerned are only those rules made under the Travancore Code of Civil Procedure which did not form part of that Code. Consequently, it was the Orders and Rules of the Indian Code of Civil Procedure and not those of the Travancore Code of Civil Procedure that were in force in the Travancore area of the State between 1st April, 1951 and 14th August, 1952.

It also followed that sub-r. 3 of R. 9 of O. 9 of the Travancore C. P. Code making the provisions of S. 5 of the Limitation Act applicable to applications under that Rule which was not consistent with the Indian Code of Civil Procedure, stood repealed and was not in force in the State between 1st April, 1951 and 14th May, 1952.

CIVIL SERVICE REGULATIONS (1920)

——Art. 193 (b)—Applicability—Suspension because of charges in criminal Court—Arrears of salary during period of suspension on acquittal by Criminal Court—Right to.

The provision contained in Art. 193 (b) of the Civil Service Regulation is intended only to apply to cases of departmental inquiries into the misconduct of a Government servant. Where the Government servant was placed under suspension because there were charges pending against him in a criminal Court, once he was acquitted and in the absence of any further disciplinary proceedings launched by the Government, the Government servant would be entitled to continue in the employment and should be reinstated. Under the general law he would be entitled to arrears of salary for the period of suspension 73 M L W 95 : (1960) 1 M L J 410 : ILR (1960) Mad 392 : (1960) 2 Lab L J 212 : A I R 1960 Mad 325 (326) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

ARTICLE 351-A

——Art. 351-A—Interpretation of—Powers of President under — Civil servant not found guilty of any grave misconduct or negligence in any judicial proceedings—His pension cannot be withheld.

The President has not an unqualified and unlimited power and right to withhold or withdraw a pension without any reasons and without any limitation. Art. 351-A of the Civil Service Regulations has to be read as one whole Article. The first part giving the President the right to withhold or withdraw a pension is joined with the word "and" with the succeeding portion relating to the order of recovery of the pension and therefore, the words 'pecuniary loss' and the words 'if the pensioner is found in departmental or judicial proceeding to have been guilty of grave misconduct or negligence, during his service including service rendered on re-employment after retirement' are words which qualify the opening words of Art. 351-A of the Civil Service Regulations giving the President the right to withhold or withdraw a pension. Reading Art. 351-A of the Civil Service Regulations as a whole the interpretation is that the President's right to withhold or withdraw a pension and his right to order the recovery can be exercised only when the pensioner is found guilty and not otherwise. (1964) 9 Fac L R 265 (Cal).

——Art. 351-A — Liberalised Pension Rules, R. 10 —Recoveries from Death-cum-Retirement gratuity granted to pensioner cannot be made after a lapse of four years from the event which amounted to his negligence.

The petitioner, at the time of his retirement from the services of Posts and Telegraphs Department in the year 1956, was informed that a case was pending against him and later on by a memo dated 7th April, 1958 he was called upon to accept his liability to make good the loss sustained by the Government. Finally on 29th June, 1959 he was served with a show cause notice why he should not be required to make good a portion of loss sustained by the Government due to his contributory negligence during the year 1952, 1953 and 1954. The order sanctioning pension and D. C. R. gratuity to the petitioner was passed on 20th July 1959 and as a part of that order the amount of said loss was directed to be recovered by way of deduction from the D. C. R. gratuity where as the final order holding the petitioner liable for contributory negligence was passed on 22nd August 1959.

Held, that the order of recovery being in complete definance of R. 10 of the Liberalised Pension Rules and Art. 351-A of the Civil Service Regulation was liable to be quashed.

The grant of Death-cum Retirement gratuity benefit is not a gift. The framing of elaborate rules governing the payment of this gratuity is a clear indication that this is a benefit which is conferred upon the retiring or deceased members of the service on the basis of the length of their service. Rule 10 of the Liberalised Pension Rules speaks of recoveries from a gratuity sanctioned but it does not contemplate any recovery at the arbitrary will of the Government. Any recoveries from the gratuity can be effected only as specified that is according to Article 351-A which provides that the right to withhold or recover any portion of the gratuity can stem only from departmental proceedings in which the pensioner is found to have been guilty of negligence and to have caused pecuniary loss to the Government by such negligence and such departmental proceedings shall not be undertaken in respect of an incident which took place four years prior to the institution of those proceedings

It is true that the petitioner was informed at the time of his retirement that a case was pending against him and further by memo dated 7-4-1958 he was called upon to accept his liability and to make good the loss but this memo inviting the petitioner to shoulder the liability was not the result of any departmental enquiry in consequence of which he was found guilty of negligence leading to the pecuniary loss of Government moneys and hence this date 7-4-1958 cannot be said to be the operative date for the purpose of computing the four-year period mentioned in the article. According to the explanation to the rule the departmental proceedings shall be deemed to have been instituted when the charges framed against the petitioner were issued to him, i. e., on 29th June 1959 and it was after more than five years from the date on which the petitioner is alleged to have neglected the observance of the departmental rules. 77 Mad L W 598.

● —Art. 465, (as adapted in U. P.) — Scope and object—Police Act (1861), S. 2.

Article 465 provides that a Government servant is entitled to a retiring pension when he is permitted to retire after completing qualifying service for 25 years on attaining the age of 50 years or is compulsorily retired by the Government after completing 25 years of qualifying service. It does not lay down that a Government servant may be permitted to retire after completing qualifying service for 25 years on attaining the age of 50 years or may be compulsorily retired after completing 25 years of qualifying service or on what conditions this may be done. The object behind Note 1 of Art. 465 was to make it clear that a Government servant compulsorily retired is not entitled to any special compensation on the ground of compulsory retirement and that the Government is not bound to give any reasons for compelling him to retire. The right to require compulsory retirement is derived from another source and the note emphasises that the exercise of this right does not impose upon the Government any obligation to give reasons or to give special compensation. There is no rule which imposes this obligation upon the Government and the intention behind the note is to state this fact expressly. If the Government had a right before the article was inserted in the Regulation to require compulsory retirement of a Government servant it was without any obligation on its part and this is all that is made clear by the note : A I R 1954 S C 369, Foll. ARTICLE 465-A ● —Art. 465-A, Note 1 (inserted by Resolution No. 714—C. S. R. dated 10-5-1920)—Applicability to officer employed by Secretary of State for India — [Government of India Act (1919), S. 96-B (4)—Constitution of India, Art. 311].

The Resolution No. 715, C. S. R., dated the 10th May, 1920 and Resolution No. 1003-C. S. R did not and could not affect the validity or force of the new rules announced on the 15th November, 1919. The purpose of publishing the new rules in the form of amendments to the Civil Service Regulations was only to clarify the exact scope of those new rules and not to bring them into force for the first time. The new rules came into operation ex proprio vigore on their publication in the official Gazette on the 15th November 1919 and their subsequent publication for general information in the form of amendment to the Civil Service Regulations only served to make their exact scope clear. The purpose of Note 1 is not to confer on the Government any new right to compulsorily retire an officer on completion by him of twenty five years' service but it is intended to serve as a remainder that the Government already has such right which it means to 'retain'. The language of Note 1 to Art. 465-A makes it abundantly clear that the Government's right to compulsorily retire an officer is not derived from Note 1. Note 1 only assumes its existence aliunde and indicates when that existing right is to be exercised and what consequences are to follow if that right is exercised. That right is obviously derived from new R. 4 which was announced by Resolution No. 1054, E. A. on the 15th November, 1919. Being in operation at the date of the passing of the Government of India Act, 1919 that rule, by virtue of sub-s. (4) of S. 96-B of that Act, will become binding on an officer although he was employed by the Secretary of State for India and consequently Art. 465-A is applicable to such officer. Shyamlal v. State of Uttar Pradesh. (1954) S C J 493 : (1954) 1 M L J 730 : 1954 All L J 324 : 1954 S C A 476 : 1955 S C R 26 : A I R 1954 S C 369 (372, 373) (Pt A) (Pr 10).

● —Art. 465-A, Note 1—Compulsory retirement—Applicability of Art. 311 of Constitution—Note 1, if repugnant to Art. 311 — (Constitution of India, Art. 311) — (Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, Rr. 49 and 55).

There can be no doubt that removal (using the term synonymously with dismissal) generally implies that the officer is regarded as in some manner blameworthy or deficient, that is to say, that he has been guilty of some misconduct or is lacking in ability or capacity or the will to discharge his duties as he should do. The action of removal taken against him in such circumstances is thus founded and justified on some ground personal to the officer. Such grounds, therefore, involve the levelling of some imputation or charge against the officer which may conceivably be controverted or explained by the officer. There is no such element of charge or imputation in the case of compulsory retirement. Further R. 49 of the Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules clearly indicates that dismissal or removal is a punishment. This is imposed on an officer as a penalty. It involves loss of benefit already earned. But an officer who is compulsorily retired does not lose any part of the benefit that he has earned. On compulsory retirement he will be entitled to the pension, etc., that he has actually earned. There is no diminution of the accrued benefit.

A compulsory retirement therefore does not amount to dismissal or removal and, therefore, does not attract the provisions of Art. 311 of the Constitution or of R. 55 and Note 1 to Art. 465-A of the Civil Service Regulations is not repugnant to Art. 311.

The order of the President of India compulsorily retiring an officer cannot therefore be challenged on the ground that he had not been afforded full opportunity of showing cause against the action sought to be taken in regard to him. Shyamlal v. State of Uttar Pradesh, (1954) 1 M L J 730 : (1954) S C J 493 : 1954 All L J 324 : 1954 S C A 476 : 1955 S C R 26 : AIR 1954 SC 369 (374, 375) (Pt C) (Prs 17, 18).

——Art. 465-A — Validity of—(Civil Service (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules (1930), R. 7) — (Government of India Act (1935), Ss. 247, 250).

Rule 7 of the Civil Service (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, 1930, impressed the stamp of validity upon the Civil Service Regulations applicable to the all India services in respect of conditions of services, pay allowances and pensions that were in force in 1930. This would include R. 465 A of the Civil Service Regulations. It follows, therefore, that R. 465-A of the Civil Service Regulations had become a valid rule as if it were made by the Secretary of State in Council.

Further the effect of Ss. 247 and 250 of the Government of India Act, 1935, is merely to apply rules, made by the Secretary of State in Council after the commencement of the Act of 1935 to persons appointed by the Secretary of State in Council both before and after the commencement of the Act, 1935. Rule 465-A which was made before the commencement of the Act of 1935, and which had been taken by the Secretary of State in Council as a rule having been made by himself and validated as such by R. 7 of the Civil Service (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules cannot, therefore, be said to be invalid, or not applicable to the applicant by reason of its not having been made by the Secretary of the State in Council. ILR (1954) 2 All 163 : AIR 1954 All 235 (242) (Pt B) (Prs 24, 28) (DB).

——Art. 465-A—Scope—Rule not abrogated by R. 55 of the Fundamental Rules — (Fundamental Rules (1949), R. 55).

Rule 55 of the Fundamental Rules does not deal with the subject-matter which is dealt with in R. 465 A and it cannot, therefore, be said that by reason of R. 55, R. 465-A should be deemed to have been cancelled or abrogated. ILR (1954) 2 All 163 : AIR 1954 All 235 (243, 244) (Pt D) (Prs 34, 35) (DB).

——Art. 470—Decision to reduce pension — Nature of enquiry contemplated.

Art. 470 of the Civil Service Regulations presupposes an enquiry of some nature into the satisfactory nature of a Government servant's service before a decision as to reduction in his pension is taken. The enquiry will, in some cases, be made before retirement but there is no prohibition against its being held before the date of retirement. Again it is not necessary that the sanctioning authority should confine itself to the personal confidential record of the Government servant which may or may not be complete with regard to the fag end of the period of service. There is nothing whatever in any of the rules to limit the scope of enquiry. 54 Pun L R 236 : AIR 1952 Punj 351 (352, 353) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 7) (DB).

——Art. 486—'Emoluments'—Computation of pension —Acting allowance to be excluded.

The definition of 'emoluments' as given in Art. 486 of the Civil Service Regulations has reference to 'emoluments' which were being received immediately before the retirement for the purpose for gratuity only. It does not apply to 'average emoluments' for computing the pension admissible to an officer. The acting allowance is to be excluded from consideration in determining the average emoluments for computing the pension admissible to a person. 1959 M P L J (Notes) 206.

ARTICLE 561

Art. 561 does not apply to the member of Provincial Judicial Service who was appointed to the post of Civil and Sessions Judge in the matter of pension. AIR 1959 All 393 (401) (Pt K) (Pr 65) (DB).

——Arts. 649 and 465-A—Scope of.

Rule 649 deals with compulsory and premature retirement for a special cause 'unfitness for further advancement' which is dealt with in R. 353-A. R. 465-A, on the other hand, is a rule of retirement after completion of 25 years of service, when it is considered that his retention in the service is not in the public interest. The two rules deal with different matters though both of them may apply in the case of a particular individual at one and the same time R. 465-A is not, therefore, at all affected by R. 649 in the case of Civil Service of Engineers. The rule that a special rule should be preferred to a general rule on the same subject does not apply to the case. I L R (1954) 2 All 163 : AIR 1954 All 235 (242, 243) (Pt C) (Prs 30, 31) (DB).

——Art. 930— Construction of - Claim for pension from date of retirement is subject to special orders.

Under Art. 930 of the Civil Service Regulations pension is ordinarily payable from the date of the retirement if an application has been made before that date but the grant is subject to special orders.

It is doubtful whether any article of the Civil Service Regulations would apply to the Nawanagar State which was constituted under completely different conditions and governed by different rules but assuming that the principle of the above article applies to a retired servant of Nawanagar State and can be incorporated in the Pension Rules of the State, the claim of such servant to receive pension from the date of his retirement would be subject to special orders of His Highness the Jamsaheb.

Hence, if in the case of a retired servant special orders have been passed from time to time and he has been granted the full pension only from a particular date the payment of pension to him would be governed by those orders and he would not be entitled to claim the full pension retrospectively from the date of his retirement in contravention of those special orders. A I R 1953 Sau 21 (23, 24) (Pt B) (Prs 5, 6) (DB).

RULE 11

——R. 11 (a)— Applicability — Railway servant appearing in Court in answer to summons and released on bail—If deemed to have been placed under arrest—Order of suspension — Legality Constitution of India, Art. 226— Cr. P. Code, Ss. 68 and 496.

Where a railway servant in compliance with a summons issued under S. 68, Cr. P. Code directing that his attendance is necessary to answer a charge of an offence, appears in Court, and the Court grants him bail for the purpose of securing his future attendance before it, he cannot be deemed to be under arrest or committed to prison at any stage, and the railway authorities have therefore, no power to issue an order of suspension under R. 11 (a) of the Civil Service Regulations. S. 496, Cr. P. Code which sets out various circumstances under which a bail can be granted, makes it quite clear that appearance in answer to a summons and appearance under arrest are not the same thing. An order of suspension in such circumstances not being passed in compliance with R. 11 (a) of the Regulations, is bad, and is liable to be cancelled on an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution. 89 C L J 241 : 57 C W N 201 : A I R 1953 Cal 45 (46, 47) (Pt A) (Pr 14).

Where the order abolishing the post was passed about a year after the last offer of the Government and on that date the incumbent was not offered any alternative employment, the discharge of the incumbent upon the abolition of the post is illegal, even though earlier the Government had repeatedly made offers to the incumbent, to employ him on similar posts, in none of which it was definitely indicated that the post was going to be abolished, which offers had been refused by the incumbent. AIR 1965 All 406 (408) (Pt B) (Prs 17, 18).

——Suspension of probationer — Effect — (Constitution of India, Art. 311 (2)).

The discharge of a probationer during the period of probation, does not amount to "removal" or "dismissal" within the meaning of the Rules. A fortiori it would follow that his suspension does not amount to reduction in rank, either to a lower post or to a lower time-scale, or to a lower stage in the same time scale. I L R (1953) Cut 517 : 20 Cut L T 354 : AIR 1953 Orissa 329 (332) (Pt C) (Pr 14) (DB).

——Effect.

Per Das, C. J. — These rules have no statutory force and when an officer was dismissed from service without complying with the provisions of these rules, he had right of action against the Crown. In other words, the rules, which were not incorporated in a statute, did not impose any legal restriction upon the right of the Crown to dismiss its servants at pleasure. RULE 3

——Rr. 3 (a) and 55B - Probationer—Termination of service in accordance with terms in letter of appointment — Term not inserted by virtue of any law for time being in force — R. 55B, applies and is not excluded by R. 3 (a).

Rule 3 (a) excludes the application of the Rules only in case of persons for whose appointment and conditions of employment special provision is made by or under any law for the time being in force. Therefore, where the letter of appointment of a probationer in the All India Radio service expressly stated that his services might be terminated during the probationary period without any notice and without any reasons being assigned, and such term was not inserted by or under any law for the time being in force, R. 55 B will apply to his case when it is proposed to terminate his services and will not be excluded by R. 3 (a) Ranendra Chandra Banerjee v. ——R. 3 — Applicability of rules to departmental trials under S. 7, Police Act — (Police Act (1861), S. 7).

It has been expressly mentioned in R. 3 that the rules would not apply to persons of whose appointment and conditions of employment special provision is made by or under any law for the time being in force. The procedure provided in the Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules would not therefore apply to departmental trials of police officers under S 7 of the Police Act. 1954 All W R (HC) 246 : 1954 All L J 308 : AIR 1954 All 487 (489) (Pt C) (Pr 10) (DB).

[Reversed on another point in AIR 1964 S C 787.]

——Rr. 49, 56-A — Recovery from pay — Adequate opportunity—Duty to afford.

The Government servant is to be given an adequate opportunity of making a representation against the proposed recovery from his pay of the whole or part of the pecuniary loss caused to Government by his negligence. No recovery can be proposed under R. 49 till the punishing authority has come to a tentative conclusion on the following three points: (1) that there has been a pecuniary loss to Government; (2) that the loss is attributable to the Government servant's negligence or breach of orders; and (3) the extent of the loss in terms of money and the part of it which should be recovered from the Government servant. In order that the opportunity may be adequate, it is necessary that the grounds on which the tentative conclusions are based should be disclosed to the civil servant, and all reasonable facilities for making a representation should be afforded. The final order of recovery can be passed only after taking into consideration the representation of the officer. Where there is no finding of Government on any of the above points, the order passed by Government is bad and is liable to be set aside.

Unless otherwise provided by Statute or agreed between the parties, no deduction can be made from wages of unliquidated damages (e g., damages for negligence or breach of contract which are at large) payable by a servant to a master. Only a Court of law may set off the one against the other. If therefore the Civil Services (C. C. and A.) Rules are not statutory rules having the force of law the State has no power to make any deduction from the salary of a civil servant. It is not open to the State to contend that the Civil Services (C. C. and A.) Rules are merely administrative directions which are not binding on it. AIR 1955 V P 21 (24) (Pt A) (Prs 10, 11, 13).

——R. 52 (As amended in 1956) —Scope—Dismissal of Civil servants by President in exercise of powers under Art. 310 read with Art. 311 (2), Proviso (c)—Validity of—(Constitution of India, Arts. 310 and 311 (2), Proviso (c)).

The substitution of new R. 52, framed under S. R. O. 1129, Government of India, Notification, dated 9th May, 1956, in place of the old R. 52 existing in the Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules which existed at the commencement of the Constitution and which are now continued in force by Art. 313 of the Constitution, does not give any new power to the President. The new R. 52 can be considered as enacted ex majore cautela—a mere reproduction of the power contained in Art. 310.

Previously the Governor General in Council could exercise his powers relating to central services only subject to the Rules; new R. 52 left the President free to exercise the power without any limitations of the Rules. Therefore, impugned order of dismissal passed against a Civil servant by the President without referring to the provision under which it is passed can be attributed only to the power of the President which he enjoys under Art. 310 of the Constitution. The absence of express mention of the provision of law cannot render the action invalid.

By substitution of new R. 52 in place of the old R. 52, the President has not created any fetters on his power under Art. 310 of the Constitution.

It follows that the President having passed the impugned order by virtue of his powers under Art. 310 read with Proviso (c) to cl. (2) of Art. 311, the said order cannot be challenged by applying to it the provisions of Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules. ILR (1958) Bom 514: 1958 Nag L J 50: 60 Bom L R 2417: AIR 1958 Bom 283 (288, 289) (Pt B) (Prs 17, 19, 22, 23) (DB).

——R. 55 — Scope — Non-compliance — Effect — Waiver.

Rule 55 requires that in any departmental proceeding definite charges should be framed and they should be communicated to the public servant concerned together with (i) a statement of the allegations on which each charge is based and (ii) any other circumstance which it is proposed to take into consideration in passing orders on the same. The public servant should then be required within a reasonable time to put in a written statement of his defence and to state whether he desires to be heard in person.

If so desired, by the public servant, or else if the authority concerned so directs, an oral enquiry shall be held, and in such enquiry oral evidence shall be heard as to such of the allegations as are not admitted and the person charged shall be entitled to cross examine the witnesses, to give his own evidence in person, and also to examine witnesses on his behalf.

The rules of natural justice also require that a person who has the right to cross-examine the witnesses who may depose against him, must be made aware, prior to the date of the enquiry, of the names of such witnesses together with some indication as to the nature of the evidence that they would give. It is true that departmental proceedings are not regular criminal trials. The nature of the evidence likely to be given by them need not necessarily be of the type recorded by a criminal Court before framing a charge in a warrant case.

But in the copies of the charges and other particulars, forwarded to the public servant concerned there should be clear indication about the names of persons who would appear before the enquiring officer against him and the nature of the evidence that they would give. When there is such indication, it is clearly the duty of the public servant to appear at the enquiry and be ready to cross-examine those witnesses.

Held, that the examination of an important witness during the ex parte departmental inquiry without giving previous intimation to the petitioner that he would be a witness was a serious irregularity but the conduct of the petitioner in not asking for an opportunity to cross-examine such witness after being made aware that such witness had been examined at the enquiry amounted to a waiver of his right to cross-examine him and therefore it would not be proper to interfere with the order of dismissal in the writ proceedings. 25 Cut L T 493 : AIR 1957 Orissa 21 (23, 24) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 9) (DB).

——R. 55 –Definite conclusion and actual punishment under R. 55 is necessary before action under Art. 311 is proposed. See Constitution of India, Art. 311 (2). AIR 1953 Orissa 329 (DB).

——R 55—Rules have no statutory force—Procedure under Public Servants (Inquiries) Act followed — Compliance with Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, is not essential — Constitutional guarantee is satisfied — (Public Servants (Inquiries) Act (1850), Ss. 2, 3, 4) — Constitution of India, Art. 311 (2)).

The Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules are mere administrative rules and have no statutory force and their infringement per se does not give the officer accused a right of action against the Government. They provide a measure to interpret the provisions of Art. 311 and to give effect to the right thereunder. Whether the equiry is under R. 55 or under Public Servants (Inquiries) Act (37 of 1850) or in any other manner is of little consequence, so long as consistent with the principles of natural justice, the officer concerned has been informed in writing, of the charges against him and has been afforded adequate opportunity of defending himself. What is justiciable is the constitutional guarantee under Art. 311. The constitutional requirement is only this that there should be first a preliminary enquiry into the charges levelled against the civil servant and he should have adequate opportunity at this stage also to defend himself by cross-examining the witnesses called against him and showing that it is not worthy of credence and by examining himself or any other witness in support of his case. If, on such enquiry, the charges have been established and the punishment to be inflicted has been provisionally determined by the Government, he should be given another opportunity to make representation against the action proposed to be taken in regard to him. This is all that is necessary. If he has already gone through an enquiry under R. 55 or under Act 37 of 1850 or under any other provision, it is sufficient compliance of the statutory provision. Promotion is not a question of right. Even if the preparation of the list of persons considered fit for promotion was governed by any statutory rules neither the amendment of the list nor deletions of names therefrom will make that a justiciable issue, because both continuance in office and preferment in due course or otherwise are still within the pleasure of the executive. ——R. 55—'Dismissal' and 'Removal' from service— Distinction—'Removal' with a bar of future employment amount to 'dismissal' — Order at most is irregular.

The words 'dismissal' and 'removal' are not merely tautologous but are technical words, 'words of art', and have acquired special significance. According to the service rules, dismissal from service disqualifies a civil servant from future employment, whereas removal from service ordinarily does not. Where, however, removal from service was accompanied with a bar against future employment, it cannot be said that the entire order was null and void. The order of the Government, may be interpreted to be an order of dismissal. It cannot be said that the whole order is illegal and invalid. At best, it is a mere irregularity for which no action lies in a Court of law 1955 S C J 221 : (1955) 1 Andh W R (SC) 134 : (1955) 1 Mad L J (SC) 134 : AIR 1955 S C 60, Relied on. If a proper enquiry was instituted by the Government, either under R. 55 or Act 37 of 1850 or any other analogous rules, and if the Government servant was afforded opportunity to defend himself by cross-examining the witnesses called against him and to examine himself or any other witness, and if he was also given reasonable opportunity to show cause against the punishment which is eventually determined on by the Government, and if the enquiry has been conducted fairly without bias and without infringing the principles of natural justice, there is the end of the matter, and the High Court cannot set aside the order of the enquiry officer, even if on the evidence a different conclusion is possible. AIR 1960 Pat 116 (124) (Pt D) (Pr 16) (DB).

5. Probationer.

● ——Rr. 55 and 55-B— Probationer — Termination of service not by way of punishment—Procedure in R. 55 does not apply — Compliance with R. 55-B—What constitutes.

Rule 55 deals with cases of removal, dismissal or reduction in rank, which are specifically covered by Art. 311 (2) of the Constitution and the procedure prescribed therein is meant for these three major punishments. That procedure is not meant to be applicable under R. 55-B which deals with the discharge of a probationer which is not a punishment at all. Therefore, in a case covered by R. 55-B all that is required is that the defects noticed in the work which make a probationer unsuitable for retention in the service should be pointed out to him and he should be given an opportunity to show cause against the notice, enabling him to give an explanation as to the faults pointed out to him and show any reason why the proposal to terminate his services because of his unsuitability should not be given effect to. If such opportunity is given there is sufficient compliance of R. 55-B. Ranendra Chandra Banerjee v. The Union of India, (1963) 2 S C W R 344 : (1964) 1 S C J 578 : (1964) 2 S C R 135 : AIR 1963 S C 1552 (1555, 1556) (Pt C) (Pr 10).

——R. 55 (3) — Probationer — Person appointed on trial and observation for two years—Prospective confirmation in substantive vacancy—Person held a probationer — Reversion without compliance with R. 55 (3) held invalid. See Constitution of India, Art. 309. AIR 1964 All 346 (DB).

——Rr. 55 (3) and 3 (Proviso) (as amended in 1953) —U. P. Agricultural Services Rules, R. 21 — R. 21 silent on manner of disciplinary proceedings—Disciplinary proceedings will be governed by R. 55 (3) by reason of proviso to R. 3 — Probationer's services cannot be terminated without giving show cause notice.

Rules regulating appointment to and the conditions of service of the Uttar Pradesh Agricultural Service, Class II only provide for the recruitment of the members of the service and lay down their qualifications. They do not make any provision as to how and in what manner disciplinary proceedings can be taken against them. Rule 21 of the aforesaid Agricultural Service Rules only says that the Government may dispense with the services of a probationer after giving him one month's notice without entitling him to any compensation. Therefore, in view of the proviso to R. 3 of the Civil Services Rules, R. 55 is applicable even to the members of Agricultural Service, Class II. U. P. Agricultural Service Rules framed under the Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules have no statutory force. Rule 21 of these Rules is not inconsistent with R. 55 of the Civil Services Rules and tney can be read together. Even if it is held to be inconsistent with R. 55, it being only in the nature of departmental rule cannot override the provisions of R. 55 which had been made in exercise of the powers conferred by the proviso of Art. 309 of the Constitution and which is applicable to all Government servants.

Where therefore the probationer in the U. P. Agricultural Service, Class II was neither appraised of the grounds of the termination of his services nor given an opportunity to show cause against the proposed action and his explanation in that behalf was not taken by the State Government before issuing the order of termination the statutory provisions of R. 55 (3) had been infringed and the order terminating the appointment of the probationer could not be sustained in law. ——R. 55 (3) — Scope — Reversion of probationer to substantive post for unsatisfactory work—Notice to show cause not mentioning instances or adverse entries—Effect—(Constitution of India, Art. 311).

The petitioner who held the post of a Naib Tahsildar was thereafter appointed by the Board of Revenue in the post of Tahsildar and placed on probation for a period of two years. This period expired on 30th April, 1953, but on 15th June, 1953, he was informed that the probationary period had been extended by one year which carried it to 30th April, 1954. During all this period he continued to work as Tahsildar and also earned one increment after one year of service as Tahsildar. In July, 1955, nearly 15 months after the expiry of the extended period of probation, he was served with a notice, at the instance of the Land Reforms Commissioner, U. P. to the effect that his record of service as Tahsildar during the period of probation from 30th April, 1953, was unsatisfactory and that he had further deteriorated in 1954. By the same notice he was also asked to show cause why his probation should not be terminated and he be reverted to his substantive post of Naib Tahsildar.

Held, that on the facts, petitioner's case was governed by R. 55 (3) of the Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules. It was clear that sub r. (3) of R. 55 was not complied in its essential details. As such the order terminating his employment as probationer ought to be quashed. AIR 1959 All 437 (439) (Prs 8, 9).

Under R. 55 of the Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules, a civil servant who is charge-sheeted is entitled to an enquiry to be held in his presence and to be heard in person. At such an enquiry evidence has to be taken not only on behalf of the opposite parties but on behalf of the civil servant and he is entitled to cross-examine all the witnesses upon whose evidence the opposite parties intended to rely. This is also the procedure which is warranted by virtue of Art. 311 (2) of the Constitution.

Where the enquiry against the civil servant pursuant to the charge-sheet was ex parte and the enquiring officer relied on evidence of persons not given at the enquiry and without confronting the civil servant with these persons and without giving him an opportunity to cross-examining them,

Held, that the entire procedure was arbitrary and not in accordance with the law. 59 Cal W N 929 : AIR 1956 Cal 114 (115, 116) (Prs 8, 9).

——R. 55—Procedure to be followed indicated.

It is true that department enquiries are not to be conducted with the strictness of a judicial trial, but they are never-the-less enquiries in which certain formalities must be observed.

The rules of natural justice cannot be dispensed with and a man cannot be found guilty upon evidence which he had no opportunity of meeting. Where R. 55 of the Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules applies, the oral evidence that has to be used must be adduced at the time of the enquiry. Where documents have to be used, it may not be necessary to prove them under the Evidence Act as in a judicial trial, but they must be made available to the delinquent and he must have an opportunity of inspecting them and meeting them. Documents which are kept back beyond his knowledge ought not to be used in order to find him guilty. Where the documents and statements of witnesses which the petitioner had never an opportunity of either seeing or challenging are used, the departmental proceedings are in violation of the rules of natural justice and R. 55 cannot be supported. 58 Cal W N 492 : AIR 1955 Cal 166 (168, 169) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

——R. 55—Scope and object — Evidence in preliminary investigation resiled from in departmental enquiry — Admissibility of previous statement — Principles of natural justice.

Rule 55 of the Civil Services (Classification, Control and Appeal) Rules was expressly made with a view to ensure that the principles of natural justice are complied with before any public servant is held guilty of misconduct.

Rule 55 refers to evidence and though that expression need not be given the same narrow meaning as is given to it in the Evidence Act, it is clear that it refers to documents and statements of witnesses proved during the enquiry.

Where, during the preliminary investigation of a Government servant on a charge of accepting illegal gratification, a witness spoke about the actual payment by him but in the subsequent departmental enquiry he denied the same and the Government preferred his earlier statement to the subsequent one without asking the witness to reconcile his two contradictory statements and without informing the delinquent public servant that the earlier statement of the witness would be used against him, and found him guilty.

Held, that the Government committed a serious illegality and offended the well-known principles of natural justice by basing their finding on inadmissible evidence. The charge which the Government servant was called upon to meet during the enquiry under R. 55 must be supported by evidence adduced during that enquiry and tested by cross-examination at the said enquiry. 60 C W N 933 : (S) AIR 1956 Cal 662, Rel. on. ILR (1958) Cut 1 : 24 Cut L T 176 : (1958) 2 Lab L J 433.

●——Rr. 3 and 4—Scope—Engaging in subversive activity—Government servant associating with persons engaged in subversive activity—Taking interest in political activities of Communist party as long as it is not banned—Allegations do not amount to Government servant being engaged in subversive activity—R. 3 not attracted—Compulsory retirement in such circumstances amounts to removal from service by way of penalty—Government servant can maintain a petition under Art. 226 of the Constitution.

Rule 3 being of penal nature has to be very strictly construed. Subversive activity, in order to bring the person within the purview of the rule, must amount to actively pursuing such activities as are calculated to subvert the Government established by law. Taking interest in potitical activities of the Communist party would not amount to taking part in subversive activities so long as the Communist party has not been banned. Similarly, talking with members of the Communist party or associating with such members would not amount to engaging in subversive activities. A charge against a Government servant that he associated with others engaged in subversive activities and not that he was himself engaged or was reasonably suspected to have been engaged in subversive activities or engaged in such activities in association with others, does not come within the purview of R. 3 and cannot form the basis for adopting the procedure laid down in R. 4. ● ——Association—Meetings—Notice of—Mode as to service of.

Held, that as the Mulunthuruthu resolutions embodied in Ex. F. O., which records the proceedings of the meeting did not provide for any particular mode of service for meetings, it was enough that the ordinary rules adopted by voluntary associations and clubs had been followed. In the absence of any specific rules, the mode of service determined by the Managing Committee should prevail. Moran Mar Basselios Catholicos v. ● ——Clubs — Expulsion of members — Source of power — Strict observance of rules as to expulsion—Interference by Court — Permissibility—Expulsion of member of Masonic Lodge.

The source of power of associations like clubs and lodges to expel their members is the contract on the basis of which they become members. This contractual origin of rule of expulsion has its corollary in the cognate rule that in expelling a member the conditions laid down in the rules must be strictly complied with. The question whether the doctrine of strict compliance with rules implies that every minute deviation from the rules, whether substantial or not, would render the act of such a body void would depend upon the nature of the rule infringed, namely whether it is mandatory or directory. 1956 A C 104 and (1929) 1 Ch 602 and A I R 1949 P C 313 and ILR (1946) 2 Cal 88, Rel. on.

The principles governing the members of Masonic Lodge are : (1) A member of a masonic lodge is bound to abide by the rules of the lodge; and if the rules provide for expulsion, he shall be expelled only in the manner provided by the rules. (2) The lodge is bound to act strictly according to the rules; whether a particular rule is mandatory or directory falls to be decided in each case. (3) The jurisdiction of a civil Court is limited; it cannot sit as a Court of appeal from decisions of such a body; it can set aside the order of such a body if the said body acts without jurisdiction or does not act in good faith or acts in violation of the principles of natural justice.

Held, on construction of laws 198, 128 and 56 of the District Grand Lodge—known as the Grand Lodge of All Scottish Freemasonary in India and Pakistan with head-quarters at Bombay—that (i) Law 198 expressly conferred a jurisdiction on a Daughter Lodge to try a member if he committed an offence and the jurisdiction could not be excluded by law 128 which was a general law. The word 'offence' in the context of Law 198 could only mean the infringement of the Laws of the Daughter Lodge. (ii) though the appellant did not get a notice of hearing of 14 clear days as prescribed by Law 198, in view of his failure to raise any objection the appellant must be deemed to have waived the objection to the procedural defect. (iii) the rules governing tribunal and Courts cannot mutatis mutandis be applied to such bodies as Lodges. The Court has to see broadly in the circumstances of each case whether the principles of natural justice have been applied. Where on the complaint made by one of the members of the Daughter Lodge against the appellant notice was given to all the members of the Lodge who met and unanimously held, after considering the complaint and the answer given by the appellant that he was guilty and passed a resolution expelling the appellant from the Lodge but the appellant did not raise any objection the resolution passed by the lodge would not be held to be bad for violating the principles of natural justice. ——Club—Society—Constitution—Amendment of—Rule providing for—If binding on society itself.

Where a constitution consisting of certain Rules is framed by a society the constitution is a contract between the society and its members and the society is bound by its own rules including the rule providing for amendment of the rules. ● ——East India Cotton Association — Arts. 64, 73 of Articles of Association — Bye law 52-AA made by Central Government and published in Gazette of India, Extraordinary, dated 21-1-1956 is not beyond powers of the Association.

The power to make a bye-law was not confined to the Board but bye-laws might be framed by the Association itself. There is no limitation upon the powers of the Association as is to be found in Art. 64. It is only the powers of the Board that are subject to the limitation imposed by Art. 64. Validity of bye-law 52-AA of the Bye laws of the E. I. C. A. made by the Central Government and published in the Gazette of India, Extraordinary, dated 21-1-1956, therefore, cannot be challenged by reference merely to the powers of the Board, because what is contemplated by S. 11 of the Forward Contracts (Regulation) Act (1952) is the power of the 'recognised Association' to frame the bye-law. The bye-law 52-AA cannot be held to be invalid on the ground of being in violation of the Articles of the Association, Dr. Indradramani Pyarelal Gupta v. W. R. Natu, 65 Bom L R 378 : (1963) 2 S C J 59 : (1963) 1 S C R 721 : AIR 1963 S C 274 (284, 285) (Pt E) (Pr 24).

——Society — Constitution — Amendment of—Rule providing for amendment — Nature of — Breach of such rule—Effect — Power to frame and adopt new constitution given by rule — Delegation of — Constitution passed by delegated authority is invalid. AIR 1959 All 598, Reversed.

Where a constitution consisting of certain rules is framed by a society, the constitution becomes a contract between the society and its members and the rules in the constitution, including the rules providing for amendment are binding on both. A rule providing for the procedure for amendment or change in the constitution of a society is not directory but is mandatory and its disregard cannot be treated to be a mere irregularity. AIR 1959 All 598, Reversed.

Where a rule in the constitution of a society reserves the power of amending or changing the constitution with the general body of the society, and the general body delegates that power to a committee, the constitution so framed and passed by the committee, in contravention of the mandatory rule, would be ineffective and invalid. When powers are given to a person, corporation or authority the same cannot be delegated unless there is an express provision authorising the delegation. The function relating to the preparation of the new constitution or rules is an essential legislative function which the general body itself must perform. 1962 All L J 148 : I L R (1961) 2 All 691 : AIR 1962 All 610 (616, 617) (Pt C) (Prs 22, 23, 24) (DB).

Madras Stock Exchange Association Rules.

——Rr. 1, 44 — Share brokers — Sale of shares — Defect in title — Duty of brokers to rectify defect.

The plaintiff purchased through shareholders certain shares of a company, which, when the scrips were delivered, were discovered to belong to a minor and pledged to the sharebrokers themselves, When the plaintiff wrote to the company to have the transfer of shares registered, it found that it could not effect the transfer as the shares belonged to a minor and the formalities prescribed in the rules governing transfer of shares had not been complied with. When called upon to rectify the defect the sharebrokers contended that their responsibility for defects ceased once the shares were delivered to the plaintiff and that it was the duty of the latter to get the defects rectified. The plaintiff thereupon filed a suit :

Held, that under R. 44 of the Rules and Regulations of the Madras Stock Exchange Association, which applied to the case, the responsibility of the sharebrokers did not cease upon delivery of the share scrips and that it was the duty of the brokers to rectify any irregularity or defect in the title or the genuineness of the scrips etc., therefore the brokers were under an obligation to refund the purchase price of the shares on the plaintiff returning the scrips along with the share transfer certificates. COAL BEARING AREAS (ACQUISITION AND DEVELOPMENT) ACT (20 of 1957)

PREAMBLE

——Preamble and S. 9—Word "State" in the words "acquisition by the State" in Preamble refers only to Union Government—Object and purpose of the Act is to vest powers in the Union Government to work coal mines—Act was not intended to acquire only the rights of individuals, derived from prospecting licences or based on leases, and to exclude from the purview of the Act the rights of States in coal bearing lands—The expression "any land" or "any rights in or over such land" in the proviso to S. 9 cover every interest regardless of the person or authority who owns them, including those of a State Government. State of West Bengal v. Union of India, (1963) 2 SCA 448 : (1964) 1 SCR 371 : AIR 1963 SC 1241 (1247, 1248, 1249, 1250) (Pt D) (Prs 14, 15, 16, 19).

——Ss. 4, 7 — Acquisition of coal-bearing areas vested in State by Union — Provisions are not ultra vires Constitution of India, Arts. 246 (2), 31, Sch. VII, List III, Entry 42.

Per Majority, Subba Rao, J., contra—Parliament has legislative competence to enact a law for compulsory acquisition by the Union, of land and other properties vested in or owned by the State. The State of West Bengal is not a sovereign authority such as to disentile the Union Parliament to exercise its legisiative power under Entry 42, List III.

The Coal Bearing Areas (Acquisition and Development) Act or any of its provisions are not ultra vires the legislative competence of Parliament. The Act on its true construction applies to lands vested in or owned by the State of West Bengal.

The State of West Bengal is not entitled to an injunction restraining the Union from proceeding under the provisions of Ss. 4 and 7 of the Act in respect of the coal bearing lands vested in the State.

The distribution of powers under the Constitution —both legislative and executive — does not support the theory of full sovereignty in the States so as to render it immune from the exercise of legislative power of the Union Parliament particularly in relation to acquisition of property of the States. The doctrine of immunity of instrumentalities is inapplicable to the interpretation of the respective powers of the State and the Centre. 1907 A C 81, Rel. on.

The power of the Union to legislate in respect of property situate in the States remains unrestricted. Art. 294 does not contain any prohibition against transfer of property of the State and if the property is capable of being transferred by the State it is capable of being compulsorily acquired.

A closer examination of the scheme of distribution of legislative power in regard to compulsory acquisition of property under the Government of India Act discloses that though the power to compulsorily acquire property was exclusively vested in the Provinces, the Central Government could satisfy its requirements of property for Central purposes by utilising provincial machinery, and that it was in that context that a specific provision referring to the Provinces having at the direction of the Central Government to transfer provincial property was needed.

Power to acquire or requisition property may since the amendment by the Constitution (7th Amendment) Act, 1956 by which a single Entry 42, in List III "Acquisition and Requisition of Property" was substituted, be exercised concurrently by the Union and the States. By Cl. (2) of Art. 31 property is protected against compulsory acquisition. The clause grants protection in terms of widest amplitude against compulsory acquisition or requisition of property. Entry 42 in List III and Cl. (2) of Art. 31, operate in the same field of legislation; the former enunciates the content of legislative power, and the latter restraints upon the exercise of that power. Property vested in the State may not therefore be acquired under a statute enacted in exercise of legislative power under Entry 42 unless the Statute complies with the requirement of the relevant clauses of Art. 31. By making the requisite declaration under Entry 54 of List 1, the Union Parliament assumes power to regulate mines and minerals and thereby to deny to all agencies not under the control of the Union, authority to work the mines. Power to legislate for regulation and development of mines and minerals under the control of the Union, would by necessary implication include the power to acquire mines and minerals. Power to legislate for acquisition of property vested in the State cannot therefore be denied to the Parliament if it be exercised consistently with the protection afforded by Art. 31.

Per Subba Rao, J. (contra): The Indian Constitution accepts the Federal concept and distributes the sovereign powers between the co-ordinate constitutional entities, namely, the Union and the States. This concept implies that one cannot encroach upon the governmental functions or instrumentalities of the other, unless the Constitution expressly provides for such interference. The legislative fields allotted to the units cover subjects for legislation and they do not deal with the relationship between the two co-ordinate units functioning in their allotted fields. This is regulated by other provisions of the Constitution and there is no provision which enables one unit to take away the property of another except by agreement. This Court has the constitutional power and the correlative duty to prevent encroachment, either overtly or covertly, by the Union of State field or vice versa, and thus maintain the balance of federation. The present is a typical case where the Court should stop the Union from overstepping its boundary and trespassing into the State field. Therefore the impugned Act, in so far as it confers a power on the Union to acquire the lands owned by the State, including coal mines and coal-bearing lands, is ultra vires. State of West Bengal v. Union of India, (1963) 2 S C A 448 : (1964) 1 S C R 371 : A I R 1963 S C 1241 (1255, 1256, 1257, 1260) (Pt A) (Prs 37, 38, 39, 46, 49).

● ——S. 4—Notification in respect of dormant mines and unworked lands—Issue of.

The expression 'unworked land' occurring in the preamble should be given its ordinary meaning, that is to say land which was not being worked at the time of the notification issued under the Act, which would include dormant mines. The provisions of the Act and in particular those of sub-s. (4) of S. 4 and S. 5 (b) clearly militate against the contention that the Act was intended to apply only to virgin lands, to the exclusion of land on which there are dormant mines. The absence of a provision in S. 13 of the Act providing for compensation for mineral rights cannot by itself justify the conclusion that the Act was intended to apply to virgin land only. A notification under S. 4 is not ultra vires the Act because it applies not only to virgin land but also to dormant collieries or unworked lands. Burrakar Coal Co., Ltd. v. Union of India, (1961) 2 S C A 523 : 1961 SCD 432 : (1962) 1 S C R 44 : (1962) 2 S C J 216 : AIR 1961 S C 954 (957, 958) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 8, 9).

● ——Ss. 4, 5, 6—Validity — Do not invade fundamental rights under Art. 19 (1) (g).

Setions 4, 5 and 6 do not invade the fundamental rights of a mine owner under Art. 19 (1) (g) of the Constitution because under S. 5, a mining lease ceases to have effect for two years and possibly for three years. The period of two to three years is not too long as to make the restrictions unreasonable. The operations, in their very nature, must take a long time to complete and presumably Parliament had fixed this period after bearing in mind this factor and also on the basis of expert advice. Burrakar Coal Co., Ltd. v. Union of India, 1961 SCD 432 : (1962) 1 S C R 44 : (1962) 2 SCJ 216 : (1961) 2 S C A 523 : AIR 1961 SC 954 (961) (Pt D) (Pr 21).

● ——S. 4 — Absence of provision for compensation for suspension of mine owner's rights — Effect on validity — Constitution of India, Arts. 31A (1) (e) and 31 (2). See Ibid, S. 13 (4). AIR 1961 S C 954.

— Ss. 4, 7, 9—Unworked land—Land where quarry was opened but abandoned—Central Government—Right to acquire such land compulsorily.

Under the Act, the Central Government can acquire any land, except where coal mining operations were actually being carried on in conformity with the provisions of any enactment, rule or order for the time being in force. So far as the Act is concerned, the mining operations cannot be taken to include every kind of operation, beginning from the prospecting stage.

It is when permission is obtained to operate a mine that actual mining operation can be commenced. A bore-hole or a well is neither a mine nor a quarry. It is strictly speaking a prospecting operation which cannot be called an operation of mining. The petitioner company was the sub-lessee of land. After obtaining the permission of the Coal Controller to open a colliery in the land, it started a quarry and then abandoned it. After two months had elapsed from the time the quarry was abandoned, the Government issued a notification in respect of the land under S. 4. The petitioner company had intended to open a new quarry and when the notification came to be published, permission had been asked for but not granted.

Held, that as no mining operation was going on in accordance with law, there was no bar to issuing the notification under S. 4. A subsequent permission could not invalidate a notice given under S. 4, in accordance with law. Once that notice was lawfully given, the Central Government would have jurisdiction to proceed under Ss. 7 and 9. Even if the Coal Controller had in the meantime granted permission, that would not affect the right of the Central Government to proceed under those sections of the Act. AIR 1960 Cal 736 (738, 739, 740) (Pt A) (Pr 4).

The provisions of Art. 31A, Cl. (1) (e) bars the challenge to validity of Ss. 4 and 5 of the Act on the ground that they infringe the provisions of Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution inasmuch as in Sec. 13 (4) which deals with the question of compensation there is no provision for payment of compensation for the deprivation of the right of a mine owner or a lessee to carry on his business for a period of two or three years. Suspension of the rights of a mine owner or a lessee of a mine is modification within the meaning of Art. 31-A (1) (e). AIR 1951 S C 332 : 1951 S C J 527, Rel. on. Burrakur Coal Co., Ltd. v. ● ——Ss. 13, 14 — Scope — Acquisition of land — Validity of Act cannot be challenged on ground of inadequacy of compensation—Constitution of India, Art. 31 (2).

Prospecting on a piece of land for coal is merely a stage preceding the actual acquisition of that land. If, therefore, those provisions of the law which deal with the question of acquisition are unconstitutional the whole Act will be rendered unconstitutional. There is no doubt that the entire Act cannot be sustained by resorting only to Art. 31A (1) (e) or to Art. 31 (2) (A) of the Constitution because these provisions do not deal with the question of acquisition. It will be clear from the provisions of Ss. 13 and 14 that the Act specifies the principles on which and the manner in which the compensation should be determined and given. This is all that is required of a law relating to the acquisition of property by Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution.

The minerals cannot be regarded as a separate tenement except perhaps in a case of a trespass and, therefore, there is no question of the law providing for a separate compensation for them. Apart from that :if minerals have become a separate tenement then the present Act may not apply to such a tenement at all. Burrakur Coal Co., Ltd. v. COAL MINES (CONSERVATION AND SAFETY) ACT (12 of 1952)

——Constitutional validity — (Constitution of India, Art. 272).

The provision of the Act empowering the Coal Board to collect the excise duty is not ultra vires the Constitution. Collection by the Coal Board is really collection by an agent of the Central Government because under the provisions of the Act and the Rules framed thereunder the Central Government has conferred the power of collection on the Coal Board. AIR 1959 Cal 222 (231) (Pt E) (Pr 32) (DB).

——S. 8 (1) (a) — Constitutional validity — Duty on coal 'raised and despatched'—Scope of—Coal moved from one part of establishment to another for domestic appropriation—Liability to duty—(Constitution of India, Sch. VII, List I, Entries 54 and 84).

A duty of excise can be imposed on goods immediately on their manufacture or production in the country. The section does not impose the duty on "coal raised" but imposes it on coal "raised and despatched." The added requirement of despatch is not, on the one hand, an essential pre-requisite for the imposition of an excise duty, nor does it, on the other hand, make the duty any the less a duty of excise. It only marks the point of time to which the legislature has chosen to defer the collection of the duty. As to the constitutional validity of the duty, the law imposing it cannot be said to be legislation under item 54 of the Union List, but it is good legislation under Item 84 of the same list, since coal raised from mines can well be said to be "goods produced".

In the case of coal moved from the collieries, it must be 'despatched' in order that the duty may be attracted. Section 8 (1) (a) only contemplates coal despatched from a colliery to a person other than the owner. Goods merely moved from one part of an establishment to another by way of domestic appropriation cannot be said to be 'despatched' and, in a case, where the colliery, the power house and the factory are all situated within the same compound and constitute together a single industrial unit, coal taken from the colliery to the powerhouse about a furlong away for use there in the generation of electricity for the manufacture of aluminium by the factory cannot be said to be "despatched" within the meaning of S. 8 (1) (a) and cannot be charged to the duty prescribed thereby. (1943) A C 550 and 1934 A C 45 and AIR 1939 F C 1 : (1939) 1 M L J (Sup) 1 and AIR 1942 F C 33 : (1942) 5 F L J (F C) 61 : (1942) 2 M L J 327 and AIR 1945 P C 98 : (1945) 1 M L J 225, Rel: on). AIR 1959 Cal 222 (230, 231) (Pt D) (Pr 31) (D B).

——S. 8 (1) (a)—Imposition of excise duty—Validity —Tax on coal consumed by producer — Legality — Excise duty — Implication — (Constitution of India, Sch. VII, List I, Entries 54 and 84).

The Constitution has defined the meaning of the word "goods" and coal clearly comes within the definition. As coal is produced in India, the imposition of tax under S. 8 (1) (a) is valid under item 54 read with item 84 of List 1, Sch. VII of the Constitution.

For the purposes of the Constitution it would not be necessary to import any narrow or pedantic definition of "Excise duty". The goods which are manufactured or produced in India, can be taxed under the heading of "Excise Duty", immediately upon manufacture or production, irrespective of the fact as to how or by whom it is consumed, and in spite of the fact that the producer consumes it himself. In this view, there is no particular significance in calling it an excise duty.

It cannot be contended that the imposition of duty on coal which was meant for the producer's own consumption cannot be the subject-matter of the imposition of an excise duty. (AIR 1939 F C 1 : (1939) 1 M L J (Sup) 1 and A I R 1942 F C 33 : (1942) 5 F L J (F C) 61 : (1942) 2 M L J 327, Rel. on). (1957) 61 C W N 55 : AIR 1957 Cal 326 (329, 330, 331, 332) (Pt F) (Prs. 14, 23).

——S. 8 (1) (a)—'Despatched'—Meaning.

If the coal remained in the colliery and was consumed therein, it might have been said that there was no question of 'despatching' the same anywhere. But as soon as it leaves the colliery, it does not matter whether the destination is the adjacent factory or a remote place. There is no warrant for reading into the section the words "to outsiders" in connection with the word "despatch". (1957) 61 C W N 55 : AIR 1957 Cal 326 (328) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

SECTION 17

● ——Ss. 17 (2) and 7 — Coal Mines (Conservation and Safety) Rules (1954), Rule 39 — Opening and reopening of coal mines — Rule 39 dealing with—It is authorised by S. 17—It is not invalid.

Section 17 (2) of the Coal Mines (Conservation and Safety) Act, 1952, gives various specific matters on which rules can be made but none of these covers Rule 39 of the Coal Mines (Conservation and Safety) Rules, 1954. But in spite of this that rule is valid. The object of the Act is to provide for the conservation of coal and make further provision for safety in coal mines. Section 7 empowers the Central Government to exercise such powers and take or cause to be taken all such measures as it may deem necessary or proper or as may be prescribed. Rule 39 is designed, inter alia, to secure conservation of coal. If a mine has to be opened, the Coal Board has to consider whether it is necessary that it should be reopened. It would conserve it for future use, if it is not allowed to be raised in the particular grade at that time. If a particular grade of coal is not required it would conserve it for future use, if it is not allowed to be raised. In the result Rule 39 is not invalid and it is authorised by S. 17 of the Act. COAL MINES (CONSERVATION AND SAFETY) RULES (1954)

——Rr. 33 and 39—Grading under R. 33 can only be done on seam sample—R. 39 is not of general application but relates to opening and reopening of coal mine — No provision for provisional grading or for regrading or cancellation of a grade on the strength of wagon sample.

When the rules came into operation the coal mine of the petitioner had long ago been opened and graded. The authorities had been trying to alter the grade, and wagon samples were taken on 28-12-1959, 12-5-1960 and 25-7-1960 and on or about 20-5-1961 a provisional grade certificate, cancelling the previous grade certificate, was issued by the Coal Board. Thereafter an objection being made by the petitioner, five further wagon samples were drawn between 16-10-1960 and 22-6-1963 at intervals of about 6 months and a grade certificate was granted on 22-4-1964, purporting to be issued under R. 39.

Held, that the orders made by the Board and the provisional certificate dated 20-5-1961 and the final certificate dated 22-4-1964 were both invalid and not in accordance with law.

The Board has been authorised under R. 33 to do grading only on seam sample and not on wagon sample. Rule 39 is not of general application. It relates to opening and reopening of coal mines. Thus under the rules the Board has been granted the authority to do the grading by drawing samples for analysis from any seam or section of a seam of coal mine. Except in the case of 'opening' or 'reopening' of mines, there is no provision for provisional grading by making a provisional grade and then a final grade, and no provision for regrading or cancellation of a grade on the strength of wagon samples. Although there was no question of the opening or reopening of a coal mine in the instant case the Coal Board has purported to act upon the footing that R. 39 applies and that sub-rules (3), (3A) and (3B) have general application and are not confined to the opening or reopening of coal mines.

Further, the Coal Board is a statutory corporation. The powers of a corporation created by statute are limited and circumscribed by the statute which incorporates it and extend no further than is expressly stated therein. What the statute does not expressly or impliedly authorise is to be taken to be prohibited. (1883) Ch D 675, (1947) 10 Bea 1 at p. 14, (1915) A C 550 and (1925) A C 691 H L, Rel. on. COAL MINES PROVIDENT FUND AND BONUS SCHEMES ACT (46 of 1948)

——S. 2 (e)—'Employer'—Owner — Who is:—(Mines Act (1952), S. 2 (1).)

Whether a person comes within the definition of 'owner' in S. 2 (1) of Mines Act is primarily a question of fact. Where a person is entitled to share the profits, has a power to check the accounts, and is liable to contribute for the construction of structures, he must be called an owner. (1959) 1 Lab L J 587 : 63 Cal W N 147 : AIR 1959 Cal 208 (212, 213) (Pt D) (Pr 15).

● ——S. 2 (e) — Construction—Reference to Mines Act of 1923 should be taken as reference to Mines Act of 1952 including new S. 76 therein.

The definition of the word 'employer' in S. 2 of the Coal Mines Provident Fund and Bonus Schemes Act, 1948 is: 'In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context, 'employer' means the owner of a coal mine as defined in Cl. (g) of S. 3 of the Indian Mines Act, 1923'. The Indian Mines Act, 1923, was repealed and re-enacted as the Mines Act, 1952. The definition of the word 'owner in the Mines Act, 1952. is substantially the same as that in the Indian Mines Act, 1923. However, in S. 76 of the Mines Act, 1952, something new is added. In the section the word 'owner' has been explained as meaning particular things with reference to a firm, association of persons, a public Company or private Company. It was contended that if the Legislature intended that all such provision should also apply then incidental amendment should have been made in the Coal Mines P. F. and B. S. Act, 1948 as well.

Held, that the word "owner" in the light of S. 8 of the General Clauses Act should cover S. 76 of the Mines Act of 1952 as well; and in the case of a company the director or shareholder might be held liable as being comprehended within the scope of the definition of the word "owner". Interest cannot be charged by way of damages on any amount remaining due from a person. It can be realised only if there is an agreement to pay interest or if there is a statutory law imposing a liability for its payment. Neither the Act nor the Scheme imposes any liabiltty on the employer to compensate the loss of interent on the amount of arrears remaining due from him payable under para. 33-A of the Scheme. SECTION 5

●——S. 5, Sch. II — Bonus Scheme under — Para. 3 b) — Malis employed to look after and maintain gardens in bungalows of the Management occupied by officers — Domestic and personal work — Not entitled to bonus under the Scheme.

The malis who were working in the bungalows occupied by the officers, were working in the homes of the officers. They were, therefore, on domestic work. The work they were doing would not cease to be domestic work because the bungalows belonged not to the officers but to the management. Whether a work is domestic or not would depend on its nature. The nature of that work would not change because the mali was working not under the orders of the officer occupying the bungalow but under the management. Nor for the same reason does the fact that the malis were employed by the Management and not by the Officers make any difference.

Paragraph 3 of the Bonus Scheme contemplated malis who were employees of the colliery owner and were yet on domestic work. These malis were on personal work. The word "Personal" is obviously used in the sense of work for an individual as distinguished from work for the Coal mine, as an institution. These malis were undoubtedly working for the officers as individuals. Therefore they were on personal work. The malis are not entitled to bonus under the scheme. Bhowra Colliery v. The Eastern Coal Company Workmen, (1963) 2 S C J 361 : (1962-63) 23 F J R 153 : 1962 B L J R 600 : (1962) 4 Fac L R 250 : (1962) 2 Lab L J 378 : (1962) Supp (2) S C R 883.

The total cash emoluments earned by the workmen of a coal mine on festival holidays must be treated as basic earnings for the purpose of computing bonus in paragraph 7 (2) of the Coal Mines Bonus Scheme because the emoluments are earned, by the workmen while they were on duty. The amendment of the 7th October, 1961 is tantamount to a legislative, interpretation of paragraph 7 (2) of the Coal Mines Bonus Scheme 1948, before the amendment and cannot be interpreted to mean that the wages paid to an employee on paid holidays cannot be taken into account in the calculation of bonus. On the true construction of paragraphs 4 (a) and 6 (1) of the Coal Mines Bonus Scheme, 1948, it is manifest that an employee shall qualify for a bonus from his employer only when he has put in an attendance of 169 days, if he is a category II employee, during the relevant period from the 12th May, 1947, to the 31st December, 1947, and further that any shortage, in the attendance for the requisite period can be made up only up to the extent of 21 days, by adding the same to the period, which is short, to make up the requisite attendance, but only granted by the employer to such employee, and not otherwise. The words "leave granted by the employer" occurring in paragraph 6 (1) leave no room for doubt that the leave must have been granted by the employer. (1957-58) 12 F J R 59 : A I R 1957 Pat 647 (648, 649) (Pt B) (Prs 11, 12, 14) (DB).

——S. 9 — Constitutional validity. See Constitution of India, Art 245. AIR 1959 Cal 208.

——Ss. 9 and 2 (e)—Offence under para. 12 of Coal Mines, Bonus Scheme — Company owner of the Coal Mine — Sanction given to prosecute owner for the offence — Directors of such company cannot be validly prosecuted under the sanction.

The directors of a company cannot be prosecuted on a complaint of the Labour Inspector filed under a sanction by the prescribed authority to prosecute the owner of the coal mines, which in the case is a limited company for non-compliance with the provisions of paragraphs 9 and 10 of the Coal Mines Bonus Scheme. A company is a legal entity different from its shareholders. It is a separate legal entity. It can very well be prosecuted if it is alleged that it is guilty of acts which make it punishable under the provisions of Penal Statute. The provisions contained in paragraph 12 of the Coal Mines Bonus Scheme create liabilities only against the employer. The word 'employer' is defined as 'the owner of a coal mine' in the Act. Considering the definition of the word 'owner' in S. 2 (1) of the Mines Act, 1952, directors cannot be described as the owners as they are neither the immediate proprietors nor lessees nor occupiers of the mine. The lessee or the occupier was the company itself. Therefore the directors could not be validly prosecuted under that sanction. The punishment prescribed under para. 12 is not a compulsory sentence of imprisonment but a sentence of imprisonment or fine and there is no doubt that the company can be prosecuted for the offence and fined. The alternative provision in the paragraph for a sentence of imprisonment does not defeat the jurisdiction of the Court to try the company for the commission of the offence. COAL MINES REGULATIONS (1926) ——Force of—Repeal of Mines Act, 1923—Effect—(Mines Act (1923), Ss. 29, 31 (4)—(Mines Act (1952), S. 88)—(General Clauses Act (1897), S. 24).

Indian Coal Mines Regulations of 1926, framed under S. 29 of the Indian Mines Act (Act IV of 1923), survive after repeal of that Act under S. 88 of the Mines Act (XXXV of 1952).

The Regulations are in factual existence as Regulations, though for many purposes they are treated as if they are enacted in the statute. The Regulations have not lost their identity as Regulations and, therefore, S. 24 of the General Clauses Act would apply and therefore, the Regulations would survive after repeal of the old Act by S. 88 of the new Act.

The object of the 'As if' clause contained in S. 31 (4) of old Act was to make subordinate legislation as completely exempt from judicial review as the statute itself. It follows that the legal fiction must be extended only so far as is necessary to effectuate that object and no further. It cannot be supposed that the object of the Legislature in enacting the 'As if' clause was to make the Regulations subject to repeal at the same time as the Act would be repealed. 1958 B L J R 424 : 1958 Pat L R 209 : I L R 37 Pat 726 : A I R 1958 Pat 378 (379, 382) (Pt A) (Prs 1, 9, 10).

COAL PRODUCTION FUND ORDINANCE (39 of 1944)

● ——Ordinance was permanent — Repealing Ordinance 6 of 1947 after its expiry could not have effect on Ordinance of 1944 to the extent saved.

Under Ordinance No. 39 of 1944, the Central Government was authorized to levy and collect as a cess on all coal and coke despatched from collieries in British India a duty of excise at such rate, not exceeding Rs. 1-4-0 per ton. The Ordinance promulgated on August 26, 1944, was a permanent one and would continue to be in force till it was repealed. The repealing Ordinance (6 of 1947) repealed the Ordinance of 1944 from 1-5-1947 but under S. 6 of the General Clauses Act the repeal did not affect the right of the railway to recover the freight or the liability of the other party to pay the same, and the remedy in respect of the said right and liability. The result was that Ordinance 39 of 1944 and the rules made thereunder must be held to continue to be in force in respect of the right and liability, accrued or incurred before the said Ordinance was repealed and the remedies available thereunder. The repealing Ordinance, being a temporary one, expired after it fulfilled its purpose. The repealed Ordinance, to the extent saved, continued to have force under Art. 372 of the Constitution until it was altered, repealed or amended by competent Legislature. ● ——Purpose of Ordinance not exhausted.

It cannot be said that the purpose of the Ordinance of 1944 had worked itself out and, therefore, the Central Government could no longer levy or collect the tax. S. 3 of the repealing Ordinance of 1947 provided that the unexpended balance, if any, at the credit of the Coal Production Fund constituted under the aforeraid Ordinance shall be applied to such purposes connected with the coal industry, as the Central Government may direct. The purpose of the Ordinance has not therefore been exhausted. R. C. Jall Parsi v. Union of India, (1962) Supp 3 S C R 436 : AIR 1962 S C 1281 (1287, 1288) (Pt E) (Pr 9).

——Repeal by Coal Production Fund (Repealing) Ordinance (VI of 1947) — Fund abolished— Cess collected thereafter, validity—(Constitution of India, Art. 265).

Where the cess was being collected to establish a fund called Coal Production Fund, but was abolished in 1947, and it was provided by Ordinance 6 of 1947 that the Central Government may use the balance of the fund as it deemed fit, that balance would include not only the balance on hand but would include all that might be added to it thereafter by future recoveries and it cannot be said that the cess cannot be recovered after the repeal of the Ordinance, because of the abolition of the Fund. (1958) M P L J 620 : 1958 Jab L J 611 : A I R 1958 Madh Pra 425 (430) (Pt C) (Pr 23) (DB).

● ——Ss. 2, 5—Rules under— R. 3 — Duty imposed under the Ordinance is excise duty—Fact that consignee is made to pay cannot affect essence of the tax.

Excise duty is primarily a duty on the production or manufacture of goods produced or manufactured within the country. It is an indirect duty which the manufacturer or producer passes on to the ultimate consumer. Therefore subject always to the legislative competence of the taxing authority, the said tax can be levied at a convenient stage, so long as the character of the impost, is not lost. The method of collection does not affect the essence of the duty but only relates to the machinery of collection for administrative convenience. Whether in a particular case the tax ceases to be in essence an excise duty is to be decided on a fair construction of the provisions of a particular Act.

The provisions of the Ordinance of 1944 clearly demonstrate that the duty imposed is in essence an excise duty and there is a rational connection between the said tax and the person on whom it is imposed. Rule 3 of the Rules made by the Central Government provides for the recovery of excise duty on the coal produced. Under the said rule it would be collected by the Railway Administration by means of a surcharge on freight. Such duty of excise shall be recovered from the consignor if the freight charges are being prepaid, at the time of consignment or from the consignee, if the freight charges are collected at the destination of the consignment.

The machinery evolved under the Rules for collection of the duty satisfies the conditions and therefore the exigibility of the tax at the destination point in the hands of the consignee cannot legitimately be questioned. COAL PRODUCTION FUND (REPEALING) ORDINANCE (6 of 1947)

——S. 2—Effect — Expiry of Ordinance VI of 1947 —Repealed Ordinance, if revived — (Interpretation of Statutes—Repeal of enactment) – (General Clauses Act (1897), S. 6) — (Government of India Act (1935), S. 102)—(Constitution of India, Art. 372).

The repeal or expiry of a repealing Act does not ipso facto revive anything repealed thereby; when Coal Production Fund (Repealing) Ordinance (6 of 1947) expired by efflux of time, Coal Production Fund Ordinance (39 of 1944), which was repealed by it was not ipso facto revived.

A temporary Act may either repeal a perpetual Act absolutely or only partially. It is always a question of the intention as to which it is to be gathered from the plain meaning of the repealing enactment.

The intention of Ordinance 6 of 1947 was clearly to repeal the previous Ordinance absolutely and finally from that date. Though the intention was to repeal the first Ordinance absolutely in respect of transactions, following 1st May 1947 there was also a declared intention not to repeal it in respect of transaction which had gone before. Thus, within the terms of S. 6 of the General Clauses Act the first Ordinance was not repealed but was made to continue to grovern such transactions. It is therefore apparent that if some excise duty remained to be collected it could be collected, whether under the machinery of the old law or under the general law, if applicable. The same reasoning must hold good in respect of those cases in which the recovery ought to have been made but through neglect or mistake it remained to be made. For transactions of this character Ordinance No. 39 of 1944 was available by virtue of Ss. 6 and 30 of the General Clauses Act, read with S. 2 of the repealing Ordinance, to enable the Government to make such recovery.

Since the Ordinance 39 of 1944 would have been a perpetual Ordinance but for the repeal and since the repeal operated only in part, leaving past transactions to be enforced as if the repealing Ordinance had not been passed there was authority of law in 1953 for the recovery of the duty. 1958 M P L J 620 : 1958 Jab L J 611 : AIR 1958 Madh Pra 425 (428, 429, 430) (Pt A) (Prs 15, 16, 17, 11, 18, 22) (DB).

● ——S. 3 — Purpose of Ordinance of 1944 not exhausted. See Coal Production Fund Ordinance (1944). A I R 1962 S C 1281.

——S. 5 — Rules for collection of tax — Validity — (Constitution of India, Art. 265.)

Tax under Ordinance 39 of 1944 was a duty of excise and was to be used as a cess for the purposes of a fund which was created. It was not stated in the Ordinance that the tax was to be collected at the production stage and not at any subsequent stage. But it is open to the legislature to collect an excise duty not only at the production stage but at any subsequent stage.

Considering the fact that this Ordinance was made by the Governor-General in exercise of his powers under S. 72 of the Ninth Schedule to the Government of India Act, 1935, it must be held that all, and plenary, powers of legislation were centred in him. It was, therefore, open to the Governor-General, to invest in a subordinate agency the power to provide the machinery for collection of the duty. That machinery is contained in the rules, and they enact that the duty shall be collected either from the consignor at the forwarding end or from the consignee at the delivery end. The rules, therefore, cannot be said to be beyond the purport of the Ordinance or its intention.

The goods being in the possession of the railway which realised the freight, the railway was enabled to recover the duty as part of freight and as an agent of the Government. The payment would be made either at the time of booking the goods or at the time the goods were delivered. The rule made by Government enabling the railway administration to recover the duty from the consignor or the consignee did not change the incidence of the duty, which remained a duty, on coal. 1958 M P L J 620 : 1958 Jab L J 611 : A I R 1958 Madh Pra 425 (429, 430) (Pt B) (Prs 19, 20, 21) (DB).

● ——Rr. 3 and 6—Consignment on F. O. R. basis — Rule 3 (b) applies — Cess cannot be recovered from consignor.

Where the freight charges are not prepaid at the time of consignment and the consignment is on F.O.R. basis R. 3 (a) has no application and therefore the only rule applicable whereunder the Railway Administration can seek to recover the cess is R. 3 (b), i.e., the consignee has to pay it. Rule 6 does not say that if the consignee does not pay the consignor is liable to pay. Rule 3 (b) does not empower the Railway Administration to recover the tax from the consignor. The rule does not purport to enlarge the statutory liability of the consignor or the consignee, as the case may be, and, therefore, it must be understood to provide only for recovery of undercharges from persons statutorily liable to pay in accordance with the principles governing the railway freight charges. ——S. 16—Government granting privilege of selling toddy to one of two applicants — Order, if open to objection under Arts. 19 (1) (g) and 14 of the Constitution of India.

Under S. 16 of the Act the right to vend toddy or other country liquor is the exclusive privilege of the State Government. Any private person has no fundamental right to carry on the business of selling toddy. The right is the property of the Government and hence it can sell that right or otherwise deal with it in favour of A or B or X or Y on such terms as it pleases. That being so no question of offending either Art. 14 or 19 of the Constitution would arise when the Government grants the right to one of two rival applicants for the privilege. The action of the Government is purely administrative action in exercise of the power conferred by S. 16 of the Act and the mere fact that the notification by which the privilege was granted also refers to the rule-making power under S. 29 of the Act cannot make the notification a rule having the force of law. 1958 Ker L T 521 : 1958 Ker L J 582.

Since the right of the assessee to obtain a reference, when the Commissioner has passed an order in revision, is confined by S. 109 (2) of the Cochin Income-tax Act only to cases where the assessment has been enhanced by the Commissioner or the Commissioner's order is otherwise prejudicial to him, it follows, as a result of the proviso to S. 43 of the Cochin Act, that when the Commissioner has dismissed the application for revision the assessee has no right to obtain a reference. Whereas two consequences are provided for in S. 5 for the non-registration of the Kuri, namely, (1) the kuri being treated as void and (2) the foreman being liable to a fine, S. 43 provides only for the removal of one alone of the consequences by the compounding. It is only the liability of the foreman to pay the fine that is taken away as the result of the compounding under S. 43 (1). The compounding does not at all take away the consequence which attaches to the kuri itself by its non-registration. 1959 Ker L J 130 :1959 Ker L T 43 : 1959 Ker L R 72.

——S. 5 — Kuri not registered — Kuri whether void and against public policy — (Contract Act (1872), S. 23).

On prizing the kuri the prize amount becomes money belonging to the prized subscriber subject to certain obligations, namely, the obligation to pay the future subscriptions. Where for the due performance of those obligations a security bond is executed and the kuri agreement itself is illegal, in that the kuri has not been registered, all rights and liabilities springing directly out of it cannot be enforced. It cannot be disputed that if transaction under kuri security bonds in kuries not registered are allowed to be enforced it would defeat the provision of law which requires the registration of kuries. The consideration is also opposed to public policy in as much as the policy of the State underlying the Kuries Act was that kuries of over certain value should be registered. 1959 Ker L J 130 : 1959 Ker L T 43 : 1959 Ker L R 72.

COCHIN MARUMAKKATHAYAM ACT (33 of 1113 ME).

——S. 36—Suit against Marumakkathayam tarwad—Representation — Mixed question of law and fact—Revision—Power of interference—Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115.

Section 36, Cochin Marumakkathayam Act, has enacted a rule of representation in regard to suits against Marumakkathayam tarwards and a Court in deciding whether a decree passed against any such tarward is valid or not has to satisfy itself as to whether the statutory requirement has been complied with or not. No other consideration can be brought to bear on the decision of the question.

It is a mixed question of fact and law whether there has been sufficient compliance with S. 36. When it is common ground that the party aggrieved by the order under revision has a right for a fresh suit it is unnecessary for a Court of revision to examine whether the Munsiff's finding will stand close scrutiny. 1950 T C L R 242 : 1951 Ker L T 725 : AIR 1951 Trav-Co 244 (245) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

COCHIN NAMBUDIRI ACT (17 of 1114 M. E.)

——(as amended by Act 16 of 1118)—Applicability —"Karnavan"—Prohibition against grant of leases—If applies to manager succeeding removed karnavan.

There is no warrant for the contention that when a karnavan of a Nambudiri illom is removed from management by a decree of Court and another member succeeds him in management, the prohibition in the Nambudiri Act, as amended in 1118, against the grant of a lease by the karnavan without the consent or conjunction of the other major members of the illom will not apply to such manager. Where the Court removes a karnavan from management, it is not necessary, nor is it competent, for the Court to appoint any one in his stead. The next in order comes in as manager in his own right. The mere fact that he is appointed as manager by the decree of the Court only means that he has become manager in the place of the removed or deposed karnavan. The prohibition against the karnavan granting a lease would equally apply to the manager coming into management under the decree of the Court, though he is not a karnavan. 1951 K L T 109 : AIR 1951 Trav-Co 186 (186, 187) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——Scope—Lease by manager without conjunction or consent of other major members—Voidable transaction—Avoidance—Remedy of members — Separate suit—Necessity—Election to avoid.

Where a transaction by the manager of a Nambudiri family is said to be voidable at the instance of certain members of the family, it is not necessary for those members to bring a suit for setting it aside, in order to avoid it. It is enough for them to elect not to be bound by it. If they so elect, the transaction would not bind them and it is not obligatory on them to bring a separate suit for setting aside that transaction. 1951 Ker L T 109 : AIR 1951 Trav-Co 186 (186, 187) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

● ——S. 9—Lease by karnavan in contravention of section—Not void but voidable at option of members of illom — Subsequent affirmation of lease by adult members — Initial defect is cured—Lessee obtains fixity of tenure after expiry ot lease by efflux of time — Cochin Verumpattomdars Act (8 of 1118), S. 4.

Per Full Bench : A lease for a period of more than six years granted by the karnavan without the written consent of the majority of the adult members of the illom in contravention of S. 9, Namboodiris Act, is not void but is only voidable at the option of the members of the illom and if the adult members subsequently affirmed the transaction, that would cure the initial infirmity attaching to the transaction. The fact that the document was voidable only, indicates that it was capable of being affirmed or disaffirmed, and the affirmation of the document by the majority of the adult members of the illom, who would have been competent to execute the document in conjunction with the karnavan at the time of affirmation would make the document valid from its inception and it is not open to any other person whose written consent was not necessary for the validity of the transaction to question it afterwards. AIR 1962 Ker 164 (FB) and 1961 A C 245, Foll.

In the present case as all the adult members had affirmed the lease granted by the karnavan by their acts and conduct the lease was valid and upon the termination of the period of lease by effiux of time the lessee obtained a right to continue in possession under the Cochin Verumpattomdars Act. Ittiraju Namboodiri v. ——Ss. 9, 10 and 11—Alienation of Illom property—When is valid—Non-compliance of conditions precedent—Effect—Lease executed without written consent of majority members of Illom—Held void as against them.

In order that an alienation of tarwad property should be valid under S. 9 the written consent of the majority of all the major members of the Illom is necessary; if there was no such consent, the transaction will not be binding on the Illom. Even if such consent was available the transaction to be binding on the Illom should also be for Illom necessity as provided by the first part of S. 10. The burden of proving Illom necessity is on the purchaser, mortgagee, pledgee, or other alienee, or creditor, as provided by the first part of S. 11 Under the second part of that section, however, the Court may presume such necessity when the majority of the major members of the Illom are parties to or have given their consent to the transaction.

Those conditions precedent should be satisfied before a transaction can be considered as valid, and the plea of invalidity on the basis of a non-satisfaction of the conditions precedent shall be confined to those for whose benefit those conditions were engrafted, i. e. the members of the Illom.

Where the lease was executed without the written consent of the majority of the major members of the Illom, it was held that the transaction was invalid for lack of compliance with S. 9. The members of the Illom were entitled to treat it as absolutely void and of no effect : 25 Cochin 603, 22 Cochin 515, 37 Cochin 96, AIR 1952 T C 368; AIR 1953 T C 269, 15 Cochin 143; 22 Cochin 315, Rel. on. 1961 Ker L J 910 : 1961 Ker L T 1127.

——S. 9—Scope—Deed in contravention of—If void.

Section 9 has been enacted for the benefit of the Illom and for safeguarding its interests. The section confers a right on the junior members of the Illom to avoid documents brought into existence by the karnavan in contravention of the restrictions imposed on his powers of alienation by the section. The only consequence flowing from the section is to render a document executed in contravention of the direction contained in the section not binding on the Illom and not to make it void as against the whole world and that strangers have no right to take advantage of any such defect in the document and to resist the rights arising from the document. 37 Coch L R 96, Rel. on. ——Partition — Separation in status — Expression of intention to separate — Effect — Suit by several members jointly — Division inter se — If effected—Rule — Member making demand for share before death — Right of legal representatives.

It is settled law in Cochin that if a member of a Nair tarwad expresses in unequivocal terms his intention to become separated from the other members, it would constitute partition under the law and the member can claim his share in the properties of the tarwad. When a member or members jointly institute a suit, there is no presumption that they intend to sever their status inter se unless a contrary intention is expressed by their making a claim for their separate or individual shares. Even after a decree in the suit for partition, if the several plaintiffs make applications for their separate shares, that too would constitute partition among the applicants inter se, and the Court is competent to allot their respective shares to such applicants. If a member had in fact demanded his share before his death to the knowledge of the other plaintiffs, the result would be the same and his legal representatives would be entitled to take his share, i. e., the share which he would have taken, if ——Ss. 53 and 54 — Sale deed by junior members of tarwad—Karnavan and one senior member not party —Their consent not proved — Deed not valid — Necessity alone not sufficient.

It is doubtful whether S. 53 of the Nayar Act can apply to a case where the karnavan is not a party at all to the sale transaction. The section contemplates his junction in any event and provides for the restrictions of his power by insisting on the written consent of all major members wherever possible. It is impossible therefore to have a sale of tarwad property in any circumstances without the karnavan joining it, unless, apart from the statute, resort could be had to the doctrine of urgent necessity. A sale deed without joining the karnavan and without obtaining the consent of the senior member of the tarwad cannot be upheld under S. 53. The fact that it is supported by necessity is not sufficient to make it valid under S. 54. Section 54 deals only with one indispensable element for the validity of alienation, viz., necessity and does not dispense with the competency of its executants. 1957 Ker L T 567 : (1957) Ker L J 562.

COCHIN PALIAM TARWAD ACT (8 of 1097 M. E.)

——Paliam Proclamation 8 of 1124, dated 14-3-1123, Cl. 8—Validity—Constitution of India, Art. 14.

A law applying only to one person or one class of persons is constitutional if there is sufficient basis or reason for it. The use of the disjunctive 'or' between the expression 'equality before the law' and 'equal protection of the laws' in Art. 14 indicates them as separate concepts. The principle of equality before the law does not come into play in any controversy as to the legality of a law enacted by State. It comes into play really in the sphere of the enforcement. The principle equality before the law is an essential part of the Constitution in the sense that the laws of the land shall be enforced against all persons equally without any distinction being made on any ground whatsoever.

Held, in the circumstances of the case, that Cl. 8 in the Paliam Proclamation rendering the provisions of the Cochin Revenue Recovery Act applicable for recovery of the dues to the Paliam Estate does not make any discrimination in the sphere of the enforcement and therefore it does not offend Art. 14 of the Constitution. SECTION 14

——S. 14—Construction — 'Adjustment of its affairs' — 'In the matter' — Meaning of — Appointment of liquidator - Powers of Court.

The words 'in the matter" "and the Court shall make such order in the matter as it shall deem requisite" in S. 14 refer plainly to the expression "adjustments of its affairs" in the earlier part of the section and not to the words "any dispute arising amongst the said governing body or the members of the society" occurring in the still earlier part of the section. When disputes arise, what has to be referred to the District Court under S. 14 is not those disputes but "the adjustments of the society's affairs". The expression "adjustments of its affairs" can mean only the winding up of the society. The appointment of the liquidator and the direction to the office bearers who are carrying on the voluntary winding up to hand over the society's funds to the liquidator are only orders passed by the Court in the matter of the adjustment of the society's affairs, i.e, its winding up, and are fully within the Court's competence by virtue of the last clause in Para. 1 of S. 14. 1957 Ker L T 594: ILR (1957) Ker 449: (1957) Ker LJ 528.

COCHIN REVENUE RECOVERY ACT (4 of 1083 M E.)

——S. 6 — Paliam Tarwad Proclamation (8 of 1124), S. 8 — Assignee of leasehold right in Paliam estate —Liability for arrears of revenue.

The limitation in the Revenue Recovery Act that land revenue can be realised only from the registered holder is not applicable to the recovery of dues under other statutes through the Revenue Recovery Act. Dues under other statutes can be recovered from the person who is liable in law in the mode prescribed in the Revenue Recovery Act unless there is any indication to the contrary in the statutes concerned.

Section 8 of the Paliam Proclamation which gives jurisdiction to the Paliam Estate to recover the dues due to the Estate under the provisions of the Revenue Recovery Act does not say that the dues can be recovered only from the Jamakaran. In the absence of any such limitation it has to be taken that the section authorises the Estate to recover the dues from any person who is legally liable.

The assignee of a leasehold right in Paliam estate in whom the title vests absolutely is liable in law for the rent, under a privity of estate, which accrued due from the date of the assignment till the dispossion under a revenue sale. Hence under S. 8 of the Paliam Proclamation the properties of the assignee can be validly attached for the recovery of arrears of revenue under the Revenue Recovery Act. IV and to be partible among the persons so entitled. It cannot be laid down as a broad proposition that a contract to do what is punished in order to safeguard revenue is never void. A working test for finding whether the intention be to prohibit is to ascertain whether the punishment is repeated at each act and where that is done the act would be treated as forbidden. Applying the test to S. 6 of the Cochin Tobacco Act, it is clear that a person is punished for each act contrary to the provisions of the Act or rule. ——S. 10 - Applicability — "Suit for money due on contract" — Joint contributors to solution for crossword puzzle—Prize money received by one in whose name solutions were sent — Suit by another for recovery of share — If one for "money due on contract"—Jurisdiction of village Court.

A claim for money the right to which is based on a contract is not necessarily a claim for "money due on a contract" within the meaning of S. 10 of the Cochin Village Courts Act. There is a distinction between the two classes of suits.

The plaintiff and the defendant jointly sent solutions for a crossword puzzle in the name of the defendant, some of which fetched prizes amounting to Rs. 95-6, which the defendant received. The plaintiff sued the defendant in the Small Cause Court to recover half the amount of the prize less the expenses incurred for sending the solutions on the ground that solutions were the result of the joint efforts of both himself and the defendant. The defendant pleaded, inter alia, that the Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, and that the suit lay in the village Court, being governed by S. 10 of the Village Courts Act, or in the alternative it was cognizable only by a Court of original jurisdiction, as the suit fell under Art. 27 of Sch. II to the Cochin Civil Courts Act.

Held : (1) That the suit was one for money belonging to the plaintiff wrongfully retained by the defendant, and not a suit for "money due on contract" within the meaning of S. 10 of the Cochin Village Courts Act, and was not entertainable by the Village Court ;

(2) That the suit clearly was not also one for dissolution of partnership or for the balance of partnership account, and therefore it did not come within the scope of Sch. II, Art. 27 of the Cochin Civil Courts Act and did not lie as an original suit : and

(3) that the suit was cognizable and triable only as a Small Cause suit : 37 Bom 700, Appl. AIR 1952 Trav-Co 477 (477, 478) (Prs 3, 5).

COFFEE ACT (7 of 1942)

——Ss. 25, 26, 34, 32A, 47 and 48—Power of Coffee Board to sell coffee in pool auctions — Scope and object of—Power to accept lower bid in preference to highest bid — Not ultra vires — Constitution of India, Art. 14 — Sale of Goods Act (1930), S. 64 (2) — Words and Phrases—'Marketing', meaning of — Constitution of India, Art. 14.

The contention that under the provisions of Coffee Act, 1942, the Chief Marketing Officer has no power to accept any but the highest bid at an auction sale of Coffee cannot be accepted. Section 26 directs the Board to take all practical measures to market the coffee included in the pool.

In effecting sales of coffee, the Board is doing its own statutorily authorised act. The word "market" has been defined in the Shorter's Oxford Dictionary. There is nothing in the term to imply as to how and in what manner the produce is to be sold. No doubt generally speaking the highest bid at an auction may be taken as indicating the market price ; but it cannot be accepted that it is invariably so. Marketing cannot, therefore, mean selling only through an auction and that to the highest bidder.

Section 26 does not prescribe that the sale of coffee must be by auction. The power to market is a power of sale ; it can be by private treaty or public auction subject to such conditions as may be prescribed. In the familiar case of sale by receiving tenders one of the usual conditions to be found is, that the seller does not bind himself to accept the highest tender. The Act is intended to regulate the sale of coffee ; it cannot be construed as one enacted purely to provide an agency for sale. The grower retains no rights in the coffee once it is delivered to the Board except his right to receive the payment out of the pool funds. The Legislature does not intend that the powers of marketing were entrusted solely with a view to secure the highest price of coffee to the grower ; but rather such powers were conceived in the interests of the public as a whole. This power to sell vested in the Board is for achieving the objects of the Act, that of putting the industry on a sound footing by regulating the sale of coffee and not a mere power conferring private rights. The power of marketing conferred under S. 26 can be exercised in any manner which an owner can exercise but at the same time its exercise in each individual case should subserve to the principles behind the enactment. In other words, the authority to market coffee being statutory, it must be exercised in conformity with and be regulated by the terms of the statute. On the one hand the Board having been given powers of entering into contracts, there could be no restriction on its rights to enter into any contract in the way it pleases except where the statute either expressly or by clear implication, limits the power. But the Board itself having been constituted for a specific purpose, another principle will come into play, namely, its contracts cannot be made on considerations extraneous to the purpose, of its constitution.

In the absence of rules under S. 48 (2) (1), the mode of exercising the power has not been defined. There being no rules, the conditions and rule, as to acceptance of offers will be entirely left within the discretion of the Board. But where there is an excess or abuse of the power in the matter of exercise of such discretion, it will undoubtedly be open to the aggrieved party to obtain relief in Court.

Although the acceptance of the highest bid at an auction will be the normal rule, a departure from that rule where circumstances call for it and where it is done bona fide and on considerations germane to the purpose for which the Board is created, cannot be regarded as ultra vires. In other words where in selecting the lower bid the Coffee Board is actuated by relevant considerations with a view to maintain a balance between its duty to the grower and to the consumer the discretion exercised could not be challenged.

The object of the power to market conferred on the authority being sufficiently defined by the purposes of the Act and there being sufficient safeguards against its misuse (e.g.) by the control by the Board, Government, etc., it cannot be held that the power of imposing a condition like not being obliged to accept the highest bid vests any arbitrary power in the authority. A power to accept lower bids would not contravene Art. 14 of the Constitution.

Coffee sales are regulated by a system under which registered dealers alone are allowed to bid and the bids are not received openly so as to afford an opportunity to the bidders to raise their bids after knowing what another had bid. Under the closed bid system prevailing in such sales one bidder can know his competitor's bid only after the bids are tabulated. Further the auction sales are subject to conditions whereby the seller has the liberty of choosing the bids as in a case of sale by tender.

When there is an express stipulation in the notice of sale of coffee that the seller is not bound to accept any or the highest bid that vests a choice in the seller to accept any bid, and the principle of lapsing of bids in open auctions cannot apply to such a case.

The pool auction conducted in this case is neither sale by inviting tenders nor a public auction with a stipulation to accept the highest bid. It partakes the character of both. The question of availability of any bid in such an auction for acceptance by the seller has to be decided only on the terms and conditions of sale and not by any implied presumption as to lapsing of bids. It would follow that the acceptance of the bids by the Chief Coffee Marketing Officer on 8-10-1952 was valid in all the cases whether such acceptances were in relation to higher or lower bids. SECTION 26

●——S. 26 — Rules under, Rr. 18, 19, 20 (1) (a), 21 and 22 (a) — Validity.

There is no provision in the Act which excludes or prohibits the application of the quantitative test in making rules for registration of exporters or for issuing licences for export trade. In fact the Act has deliberately left it to the rule-making authority to frame rules which it may regard as appropriate for regulating the trade. The validity of the rules can be successfully challenged only if it is shown that they are inconsistent with the provisions of the Act or that they have been made in excess of the powers conferred on the rule-making authority by S. 26 of the Act. COLLIERY CONTROL ORDER (1945)

——Assessee doing business of supply of coal giving monopoly to another company owning collieries — Coal supplied from collieries to State power houses at controlled rate—Transactions held not sale—Even if sale it was in course of inter-State trade—Imposition of tax not validated under Sales Tax ValidationAct—Assessment being composite must fail in toto. See Sales Tax — Rajasthan Sales Tax Act (29 of 1954), S. 2 (o). 1965 Raj L W 258.

CLAUSE 1

——Cl. 1—Order continues still to exist.

The Essential Supplies Act, 1946, was a valid Act; there was no time lag between the expiry of the Defence of India Rules and the promulgation of the Act. Hence, the Colliery Control Order, 1945, continues to be effective and all legal actions for the violation of it are valid. AIR 1956 Cal 176 (177) (Pr 4).

——Cls. 4 and 5—Order under, fixing control price—Prohibition to sell coal at different price—Control price is both maximum and minimum — Defence of India Rules (1939), R. 81 — Colliery Control Order (1945), under R. 81 (2).

In fixing control price of coal under Cls. 4 and 5 of the Colliery Control Order, 1945, Government cannot be said to have fixed any ceiling or maximum price. When a colliery owner was not permitted to sell coal at a price different from the fixed or controlled price, all prices maximum and minimum are covered by the order. The controlled rate is both the maximum and minimum. ('63) 67 Cal W N 138.

CLAUSE 8

——Cls. 8 and 10-A—Applicability — Supply of hard coke by plaintiff to Military Department of Government of India — Supply rejected as being not upto specification — Direction as to its disposal given by Deputy Coal Commissioner. See Contract Act (1872), S. 70. AIR 1959 Pat 347 (DB).

CLAUSE 10-A

——Cl. 10-A — Supply of hard coke by plaintiff to Military Department of Government of India — Supply rejected as being not up to specification — Direction as to its disposal given by Deputy Coal Commissioner — Suit by plaintiff to recover price is governed not by S. 70, Contract Act, but by Cls. 8 and 10-A Colliery Control Order, 1945 — Frame of suit — Suit brought against Union of India is not competent — (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 79) — (Constitution of India, Art. 300). See Contract Act (1872), S. 70. AIR 1959 Pat 347.

CLAUSE 12-B

——Cl. 12-B—Applicability—Permit issued to Municipality — Municipality handing over permit to contractor and taking delivery of coal through him—If transfer or diversion.

The mere fact that instead of taking delivery itself (that is the municipality — the permit holder) the contractor was authorised by the Municipality to take delivery of the coal and utilise the same in brick manufacture, for supply to the municipality does not amount to a deviation or transfer of coal as contemplated in Cl. 12-B of the Colliery Control Order. There is no question of any transfer or diversion of coal in the instant case, because the coal is going to be utilised for the purpose of the municipality itself. ('60) 64 Cal W N 231.

CLAUSE 12-E

——Cl. 12-E—Word "Supply"—Meaning of—Operation of tax — Supply of coal to State power-houses — Assessee acting as agent of the colliery under Cl. 12-E of Colliery Control Order — Price paid by State to collieries of other State — Assessee receiving only brokerage — Order assessing tax on price of coal held illegal and quashed accordingly. See Sales Tax — Rajasthan Sales Tax Act (29 of 1954), S. 2 (f). 1961 Raj L W 420.

COMMISSIONS OF INQUIRY ACT (60 of 1952)

● ——S. 3 (1)—Definite matter of public importance — What is — Notification dated 11th December, 1956, if ultra vires.

There is no warrant for the proposition that a definite matter of public importance, contemplated by S. 3 must necessarily mean only some matter involving the public benefit or advantage in the abstract, e.g., public health, sanitation or the like or some public evil or prejudice, e. g., floods, famine or pestilence or the like. The conduct of an individual person or company or a group of individuals may so prejudicially affect or threaten to affect the public well being as to make such conduct a definite matter of public importance urgently calling for a full inquiry. Besides S. 3 itself authorises the appropriate Government to appoint a Commission of Inquiry not only for the purpose of making an inquiry into a definite matter of public importance but also for the purpose of performing such functions as may be specified in the notification. Therefore, the notification, dated 11th December, 1956 appointing a Commission of Inquiry for investigation of certain matters relating to certain companies was well within the powers conferred on the appropriate Government by S. 3 of the Act. Ram Krishna Dalmia v. Justice S. R. Tendolkar, 1958 S C A 754: (1959) S C J 147: (1959) 1 Andh W R (SC) 67: (1959) 1 Mad L J (SC) 67: 61 Bom L R 192: 1959 S C R 279 : AIR 1958 S C 538 (543, 544) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

● ——S. 3—Validity—(Constitution of India, Art. 246, List 1, Entry 94 and List 3, Entry 45).

It was contended that S. 3 of the Act was ultra vires the Constitution and that the notification amounted to a clear usurpation of judicial powers.

Held, (i) that neither the Parliament nor the Government has itself undertaken to hold any enquiry. Since the Commission was merely to investigate and record its findings and recommendations without having any power to enforce them, the inquiry or report could not be looked upon as a judicial inquiry in the sense of its being an exercise of judicial function properly so called and consequently the question of usurpation by Parliament or the Government of the powers of the judicial organs of the Union of India could not arise on the facts of this case.

(ii) that only that portion of the last part of Cl. (10) which called upon the Commission of Inquiry to make recommendations about the action to be taken 'as and by way of securing redress or punishment' clearly went outside the scope of the Act and such provision was not covered by the two legislative entries, viz., List 1, entry 94 and List 3, entry 45 and should therefore be deleted. So deleted the latter portion of Cl. (10) would read 'and the action which in the opinion of the Commission should be taken .....act as a preventive in future cases.'

(iii) that the offending words were severable and the efficacy of the notification was in no way affected by the deletion of the offending words mentioned above. Rama Krishna Dalmia v. Justice S. R. Tendolkar, 1958 S C A 754: (1959) S C J 147: (1959) 1 Andh W R (SC) 67: (1959) 1 Mad L J (SC) 67: 61 Bom L R 192 : 1959 S C R 279 : AIR 1958 S C 538 (544, 545) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

● ——S. 3 — Validity — If violates Art. 14 of the Constitution — (Constitution of India, Art. 14).

On a proper construction of S. 3 the functions the performance of which is contemplated must be such as ancillary to and in aid of the inquiry itself and cannot be read as a function independent or unconnected with such inquiry. Section 3 indicates that the appropriate Government can appoint a commission of inquiry only for the purpose of making an inquiry into any definite matter of public importance and into no other matter. The Legislature must leave the duty of taking the necessary action to the appropriate Government. This delegation of authority however, is not unguided or uncontrolled, for the discretion given to the appropriate Government to set up a commission of inquiry must be guided by the policy laid down, namely, that the executive action of setting up a commission of inquiry must conform to the condition of the section, that is to say, that there must exist a definite matter of public importance into which an inquiry is, in the opinion of the appropriate Government, necessary or is required by a resolution in that behalf passed by the House of the People or the Legislative Assembly of the State. Ram Krishna Dalmia v. Justice S. R. Tendolkar, 1958 S C A 754 : (1959) S C J 147:(1959) 1 Andh W R (SC) 67: (1959) 1 Mad L J (SC) 67 : 61 Bom L R 192 : 1959 S C R 279 : AIR 1958 S C 538 (549, 550) (Pt E) (Pr 13).

● ——S. 3 (1) — Notification under, dated 11th December, 1956 by Central Government appointing Inquiry Commission — Validity—If violates Art. 14 —(Constitution of India, Art. 14).

The Notification dated 11-12-56 issued by the Central Government in exercise of its powers under S. 3, Commissions of Inquiry Act does not violate Art. 14 of the Constitution. The notification cannot be struck down for the absence of a definite matter of public importance calling for an inquiry.

Parliament having left the selective application of the Act to the discretion of the appropriate Government, the latter must of necessity take its decision on the material available to it and the opinion it forms thereon. In matters of this kind the appropriate Government is the best judge of the reliability of its source of information and if it acts in good faith on the materials brought to its notice and comes to the conclusion that the affairs constitute a definite matter of public importance calling for an inquiry with a view to devise measures for preventing the recurrence of such evil, the Supreme Court, not being in possession of all the facts, will be slow to adjudge the executive action to be bad and illegal.

There can be no objection to the matters brought to the notice of the Court by affidavit being taken into consideration along with the matters specified in the notification in order to ascertain whether there was any valid basis for treating the petitioners and their companies as a class by themselves. AIR 1956 S C 246 and AIR 1957 S C 397, Rel. on.

The facts disclosed on the face of the notification itself afford sufficient support to the presumption of constitutionality of the notification. There being thus a presumption of validity in favour of the Act and the notification, it is for the petitioners to allege and prove beyond doubt that other persons or companies similarly situate have been left out and the petitioners and their companies have been singled out for discriminatory and hostile treatment. Ram Krishna Dalmia v. Justice S. R. Tendolkar, 1958 S C A 754 : (1959) S C J 147:(1959) 1 Andh W R (SC) 67:(1959) 1 Mad L J (S C) 67 : 61 Bom L R 192 : 1959 S C R 279 : AIR 1958 S C 538 (550, 551, 552, 553) (Pt G) (Prs 14, 15, 16, 17, 18).

● ——S. 3 — Notification not fixing time for submitting report by Enquiry Commission—Subsequent notification fixing time—Sufficiency.

The contention that the original notification was defective in that it did not fix the time within which the Commission was to complete its report and that a subsequent notification fixing a time could not cure that defect has no substance. The third notification amended the original notification by fixing a time. There was nothing to prevent the Government from issuing a fresh notification appointing a Commission and fixing a time. In any case the amending notification taken together with the original notification may be read as a fresh notification within the meaning of S. 3 of the Act, operative at least from the date of the later notification. Ram Krishna Dalmia v. Justice S. R. Tendolkar, 1958 S C A 754 : (1959) S C J 147: (1959) 1 Andh W R (S C) 67 : (1959) 1 Mad L J (SC) 67 : 61 Bom L R 192 : 1959 S C R 279 : AIR 1958 S C 538 (553, 554) (Pt H) (Pr 20).

● ——S. 3—Notification dated 11th December, 1956 — If bad on ground of delegation of essential legislative functions—(Constitution of India, Art. 245).

The notification dated 11th December, 1956 is not bad on ground of delegation of essential legislative function. Assuming that there is delegation of legislative function, the Act having laid down its policy, such delegation of power, if any, is not vitiated at all; for the legislation by the delegatee will have to conform to the policy so laid down by the Act. Ram Krishna Dalmia v. Justice S. R. Tendolkar, 1958 S C A 754 : (1959) S C J 147 : (1959) 1 Andh W R (S C) 67 : (1959) 1 Mad L J (S C) 67 : 61 Bom L R 192 : 1959 S C R 279 : AIR 1958 S C 538 (554) (Pt I) (Pr 21).

——S. 3 (1)—'Definite matter of public importance.'

Widespread mismanagement of public endowments dedicated to religious and charitable purposes and the eradication of that evil are a definite matter of public importance, within the meaning of that expression in S. 3 of the Act. The section does not require that the institutions whose affairs should be investigated, should be named in the notification before an inquiry could be ordered into a definite matter of public importance. The section speaks only of a definite matter and not of particulars or instances of such matter. The duty of ascertaining the institutions in which there is mismanagement, is cast on the Special Officer and it is for him to inquire into the affairs of such institutions and make the necessary recommendations to the Government. 1959 Andh L T 235 : (1959) 1 Andh W R 258 : ILR (1959) A P 67 : AIR 1959 Andh Pra 148 (151) (Pt A) (Pr 13) (DB).

——S. 3 (1) — Jurisdiction of Special Officer—Preliminary inquiry not necessary.

The Special Officer acting under S. 3 need not hold a preliminary inquiry as to whether the Mutt, the object of his enquiry, is a public religious institution before proceeding to act under the notifications issued by the Government under that section. Neither S. 3 of the Act nor the notifications contemplate such a preliminary investigation by the Special Officer. Where the Officer is acting on information which more than 'prima facie' shows that the Mutt is a public Mutt, and he has also information that the affairs of the Mutt are being grossly mismanaged by the 'mahant', he is quite justified in proceeding with the inquiry. 1959 Andh L T 235:(1959) 1 Andh W R 258 : ILR (1959) A P 67 : AIR 1959 Andh Pra 148 (151, 152) (Pt B) (Pr 16) (DB).

——S. 3—Time not fixed in notification — Effect — Commission of Inquiry cannot function till defect is removed.

Section 3 of the Act lays down that the notification appointing a Commission of Inquiry should specify the functions and the time within which those functions should be performed, and the Commission shall make the inquiry and perform the functions accordingly. If the notification does not fix the time within which the commission is to complete the inquiry and make its report, the notification is defective. (AIR 1958 S C 538 : 1959 S C J 147 : (1959) 1 Mad L J (S C) 67 : (1959) 1 Andh W R (SC) 67, Rel. on.) 1959 Andh L T 235 : (1959) 1 Andh W R 258 : ILR (1959) A P 67 : AIR 1959 Andh Pra 148 (153) (Pt D) (Prs 21, 22) (DB).

——S. 3 — Court — Meaning of — Commission of Inquiry is not Court. See Contempt of Courts Act (1952), S. 3. 1954 Cr L J 366:AIR 1954 Nag 71 (DB).

——S. 3 — "Plea of ultra vires" — Appointment of Judge challenged—Burden of proof.

Where a party challenges an appointment of a Judge of the High Court on the Commission of Inquiry as being ultra vires, it is for it to show a provision of law which inhibits it. ILR (1954) Nag 1:1954 Cr L J 366 : 1954 Nag L J 245 : AIR 1954 Nag 71 (74) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 3—Nature and function of Commission.

The Commission governed by the Commission of Inquiry Act, 1952, is appointed by the State Government "for the information of its own mind", in order that it should not act, in exercise of its executive power, "otherwise than in accordance with the dictates of justice and equity" in ordering a departmental enquiry against its officers. It is, therefore, a fact finding body meant only to instruct the mind of the Government without producing any document of a judicial nature. 32 Cal 1 (P C), Foll. I L R (1954) Nag 1 : 1954 Cr L J 366 : 1954 Nag L J 245 : A I R 1954 Nag 71 (75, 76) (Pt D) (Pr 12) (DB).

——S. 3 — Nature of proceedings — Solicitor and secretary attached to Commission—Bias no disqualification.

The proceedings before a Commission not being of a judicial or quasi-judicial nature, even if there is any bias or interest so far as the solicitor and the secretary attached to the Commission are concerned, they are not disqualified from being associated with the Commission. ILR (1960) 1 Punj 416 : AIR 1960 Punj 86 (95) (Pt D) (Pr 16) (DB).

SECTION 4

——Ss. 4, 5 (1) and 5 (2) — Commission's powers in asking for production of documents — Privilege under S. 123, Evidence Act, claim of. See Jammu & Kashmir Commissions of Inquiry Act (32 of 1962), S. 4. 1965 (2) Cr L J 212 : AIR 1965 J & K 75.

——S. 4 and S. 5 (4), (5)—Scope of — Commission is civil Court for limited purposes.

Section 4 only clothes the Commission with certain powers of a civil Court but does not confer on it the status of a Court. It is only under sub-s. (4) of S. 5 that the Commission is deemed to be a civil Court and sub-s. (5) imparts to the proceeding before it the character of a judicial proceeding. However, these provisions only create a fiction which cannot extend beyond the purpose for which it is created. AIR 1940 P C 167, Rel. on. I L R (1954) Nag 1 : 1954 Cr L J 366 : 1954 Nag L J 245 : A I R 1954 Nag 71 (74) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

——Ss. 4 and 5 (4) and (5)—Commission—If Court—Applicability of Civil P. C. and Evidence Act—(Evidence Act (1872), S. 1).

A Commission appointed under the Act, to which provisions of sub-ss. (2) to (5) of S. 5 have been applied, is a fact-finding body meant only 'to instruct the mind of the Government without producing any documents of a judicial nature'. It is neither a Civil Court nor are its proceedings judicial nor do the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure or of the Evidence Act apply to its proceedings. The Commission is neither a quasi judicial Tribunal nor does it exercise powers of such a tribunal nor are its proceedings quasi-judicial. ILR (1960) 1 Punj 416 : AIR 1960 Punj 86 (94) (Pt A) (Pr 13) (DB).

——S. 4 — Procedure regarding inspection of documents.

Held, that the procedure indicated by the Commission, namely, that at later stages any documents that would be sought to be used against the petitioners or would be considered material would be shown to those interested to prepare their defences was quite just and it was not for the High Court to decide under Arts. 226 and 227 of the Constitution at what particular stage or stages and what particular documents should be shown to the petitioners and that the claim of the petitioners for a general and roving discovery was not sustainable even if the Civil P. C. were to apply. I L R (1960) 1 Punj 416 : A I R 1960 Punj 86 (94) (Pt B) (Pr 14) (DB).

——S. 5 (3)—Constitutional validity. See Constitution of India, Art. 25. AIR 1959 Andh Pra 148 (DB).

——S. 5 (4)—Scope — Commission is civil Court for limited purpose. See Ibid, S. 4. 1954 Cri L J 366 : AIR 1954 Nag 71 (DB).

——S. 5 (4)—Construction — Commission how far a civil Court.

It would not be correct to contend that the expression, "the Commission shall be deemed to be a civil Court" occurring in S. 5 (4), is full and complete in itself and what follows it only denotes the limitation on the full fledged status and powers of a civil Court that the Commission would otherwise have possessed. Reading the sub-section as a whole, it is clear that under the Commissions of Inquiry Act, 1952, the Commission is fictionally a civil Court only for limited purposes enumerated in the sub-section. ILR (1954) Nag 1 : 1954 Cr L J 366 : 1954 Nag L J 245 : AIR 1954 Nag 71 (75) (Pt C) (Pr 10) (DB).

——S. 5 (3)—Investigating officers appointed by Commission to collect material and record statements of persons — Officers then to submit reports—Maxims 'delegatus non potest delegare' and 'expressio unius est exclusio alterius' held had no applicability. ILR (1960) 1 Punj 416 : AIR 1960 Punj 86 (94, 95) (Pt C) (Pr 15) (DB).

——S. 5 (4), (5) and S. 4 — Nature of commission — Applicability of Civil P. C. and Evidence Act — See Ibid, S. 4. AIR 1960 Punj 86.

——S. 6 — Evidence Act (1872), S. 145 — Incidents leading to criminal prosecution subject-matter of Inquiry by Inquiry Commission — Statements of prosecution witnesses before commission can be used for purpose mentioned in S. 145, Evidence Act in criminal trial.

The words, no 'statement shall be used against him' in S. 6 cannot be interpreted to mean that such a statement cannot be used for any purpose whatever except the purpose mentioned in S. 6. The use of a statement made before a Commission as an earlier statement to contradict a later statement in a criminal trial which is not against the person making it, as provided by S. 145 of the Evidence Act, does not amount to a 'use against the person making the statement' as contemplated by S. 6 and is not prohibited by S. 6. Where, therefore, the incidents in respect of which the accused are being prosecuted in a criminal trial have been the subject-matter of an Inquiry by a Commission of Inquiry appointed under the Act, the statements made by the prosecution witnesses before the Commission can be used by the defence for the purpose mentioned in S. 145 of the Evidence Act. AIR 1960 Punj 86 ; AIR 1923 Lah 31 ; ILR 2 Bom 61; ILR 9 Bom 131 ; 1867 L J 268, Disting. 66 Bom L R 353 : 1964 Mah L J 525 : 1965 (1) Cr L J 10 : I L R (1964) Bom 679 : A I R 1965 Bom 1 (2, 3) (Prs 4, 5, 9, 8).

——S. 6—Scope of—Immunity under—If co-extensive with one under Art. 20 (3) of Constitution—(Constitution of India, Art. 20 (3)).

Section 6, Commissions of Inquiry Act does not cover the case of production of an incriminating document and gives no immunity with regard to the same. Section 6 will be operative only after a statement has been made or a document has been produced. But the inhibition in Art. 20 (3) of the Constitution extends to the very first stage and the person accused of an offence cannot be compelled to state a fact or produce a document which may tend to incriminate him. Section 6 will merely render his statement immune but will not afford protection against such compulsion to give self-incriminating answers or to produce self-incriminating documents. Therefore the immunity under S. 6 of the Act is not co-extensive with the one under Art. 20 (3) of the Constitution and is not a complete substitute for the prohibition enjoined by Art. 20 (3). It must, therefore, be held that Art. 20 (3) can be invoked in the proceedings before the Commission by witnesses who appear before it if and when the occasion arises. (AIR 1958 Cal 682, Rel. on. ; AIR 1958 Andh Pra 756. Not followed.) ILR (1960) 1 Punj 416 : A I R 1960 Punj 86 (97, 98) (Pt E) (Prs 19, 20) (DB).

COMPANIES ACT (7 of 1913)

PREAMBLE

——Preamble — Legislation with regard to non-trading company in Part B State — Applicability of Companies Acts of 1913 and 1956. See Companies Act (1956), Preamble. 1958 Ker L T 1178.

——Preamble — Scope of — Banking Companies Act (1949) should be read as supplemental to and part of Companies Act. See Banking Companies Act (1949), S. 2. AIR 1954 Punj 21 (DB).

——S. 2 (1) (i)—Articles of Association—Construction—Principles.

The Courts should hesitate to place an interpretation on the articles which may have the effect of imposing restrictions on transferability which may be in restraint of trade and therefore, opposed, to public policy. The Courts should lean in favour of an owner's right to deal with the property at pleasure, unless such a right has been abridged in a particular manner, and in that case too, only to the extent of the abridgment. 62 Punj L R 211 : (1960) 30 Com Cas 192 : I L R (1960) 1 Punj 969 : A I R 1960 Punj 455 (458) (Pt B) (Pr 24) (DB).

——S. 2 (1) (2) — 'Company' — Partnership—Distinction — Shareholder of company and partner of firm—Positions of.

The argument that the position of shareholders in a company is analogous to that of partners inter se is wholly inaccurate. Partnership is merely an association of persons for carrying on the business of partnership and in law the firm name is a compendious method of describing the partners. Such is, however, not the case of a company which stands as a separate juristic entity distinct from the shareholders. Bacha F. Guzdar, Bombay v. ——S. 2 (1), (2)—Company—'Goodwill'—Meaning of —(Contract Act (1872), S. 27) — (Partnership Act (1932), S. 55).

The goodwill of a business includes positive advantages such as carrying on the commercial undertaking at a particular place and in a particular, name, and also its business connections, its business prestige and several other intangible advantages which a business may acquire. 59 Bom L R 209 : (1957) 2 Lab L J 194 : (1956-57) 12 F J R 251 : I L R (1958) Bom 8 : AIR 1957 Bom 111 (115) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

——Ss. 2 (1) (2), 26 (1) — 'Company' — (Companies Act (1956), Ss. 3 (1) (i), 25 (1)).

The word 'company' as defined in the Act does not exclude bodies which have been given a corporate life by reason of a licence granted under S. 26 of the Act. That an association not for profit acquires a corporate life by reason of a licence under S. 26 (1) of the Act does not make it any the less a company within the meaning of the Act. ——S. 2 (1) (11) — 'Officer' — Secretary or agent of bank—(Companies Act (1956), S. 2 (30)).

The definition of 'an officer' in S. 2 (11), Companies Act, is an inclusive definition and does not exhaust all persons that come within the ambit of it. The word 'officer' is of wide connotation and includes assistant secretaries or agents of all the branches. (1958) 2 Andh W R 331 : 1958 Andh L T 1063 : (1959) 29 Com Cas 114 : AIR 1958 Andh Pra 756 (761) (Pt F) (Pr 13) (DB).

——S. 2 (1) (13) — Private company — Secretary of private company fraudulently enriching himself by selling assets of company—Suit by share-holders for reconveyance of assets — Principle of equitable estoppel — Doctrine of piercing veil of corporate body—Effect of laches — Limitation — Limitation Act (1908), Arts. 144 and 142.

The assets of a private company A were purchased by a new company B, floated by the secretary of company A. The whole deal was fraudulent on the part of the secretary who had a controlling interest in the new company B. The directors of the Company A became the directors of the company B. After the sale, the company A went into voluntary liquidation. By the deal, there was an unjust enrichment on the part of the secretary. The plaintiffs who were the share-holders of the company A instituted a suit against the secretary, the new company and its directors for possession, vesting or reconveyance of the property transferred to the Company B, through the fraud and undue influence of the secretary.

Held, that the share-holders of the Company A could sue in the circumstances of the case, apart from the company, in their own names, during the existence of the company A. There would be equitable estoppel, which would prevent the 'fraudulent' trustee (the defendant secretary) from putting forward the claim that the suit was not competent. Held, also that even after the dissolution of the company A, this kind of a suit by ex-share-holders would be maintainable. The basis of such a suit would be that under the Indian Company Law the share-holders have the residuary right to the assets of a defunct corporation. Particularly in the case of fraud, equity and justice require that plaintiffs ought not to be non-suited by a formal objection taken by a 'fraudulent' trustee. As far as the 'new company' B was concerned, all that it could plead was that it had bona fide developed the estates as a distinct legal entity, and that it was not liable to reconvey the corpus to the plaintiffs. Held, further that a mere delay or lying by, short of a bar of limitation would not disentitle the plaintiffs to relief. But on the ground of laches, the plaintiffs were disentitled to the relief either for possession of any part of the corpus, or for any reconveyance from the new company, or any part of it. It would not however, be equitable to dismiss the suit altogether on the ground of laches.

Held, that this was understood to be in essence, a suit for recovery of a possessory interest in immovable properties, to which the residuary Art. 144 would apply, if not Art. 142. The suit was certainly in time and was not barred. Nor was the suit barred by adverse possession, whether of the new company, or of anyone else. (1960) 2 Mad L J 401 : I L R (1960) Mad 407 : AIR 1960 Mad 410 (421, 423, 424, 425) (Pt C) (Prs 35, 36, 37, 38, 40, 42, 43, 45) (DB).

——S. 2 (1) (13), Proviso — Companies Act (1956), S. 3 (1) (iii), Proviso—Private Company—Joint share-holders — Transfer of shares in their name individually—Validity.

In the proviso to the definition of 'private company', in S. 2 (1) (13), the words 'for the purposes of this definition' are significant. All that they convey is that two or more persons holding one or more shares jointly in a private company shall be treated as a single member not for all purposes but 'for the purposes of this definition' only. The proviso relates to the second of the three requirements of the definition which restricts the membership to fifty. But the proviso makes it clear that two or more persons holding shares in a company jointly are not to be considered as a single member for all purposes. Transfer of shares to a joint-holder in his individual capacity is not prohibited by the Act. A transfer of shares whether made to an individual shareholder or to joint holders collectively is not within any statutory ban, so long as the total number of members of a private company does not exceed fifty as required by S. 2 (1) (13) (b) of the Companies Act, 1913, which with slight modifications, corresponds to S. 3 (1) (iii) (b) of the Companies Act, 1956. It was also held upon construction of the Articles of Association, that there was nothing in them prohibiting such a transfer. 62 Punj L R 211 : (1960) 30 Com Cas 192 : I L R (1960) 1 Punj 969 : A I R 1960 Punj 455 (458, 459) (Pt A) (Prs 20, 21, 24, 25) (DB).

——S. 2A (as amended by Indian Independence (Adaptation of Central Acts and Ordinances) Order 1948), Ss. 72 (2) and 277 - Company mentioned in S. 2A, if becomes incorporated in India for all purposes — Effect of notice under S. 72 — Object of Section 72

Reading the two Ss. 2-A as amended and 277 company mentioned in S. 2-A does not become a company incorporated in India for all purposes except for the limited purpose of S. 277. Even if it becomes an Indian company for a period of six months, it cannot become an Indian company for all purposes by the mere giving of notice that the address of company's registered office has been changed from one part of a town in India to another. A notice given under S. 72 can neither make a foreign company nor confer on a foreign company the status of an Indian company. The object is only for the purpose of service being effected on the company for certain purposes. A I R 1950 East Punj 188 (194) (Pt D) (Prs 30, 31) (DB).

● ——S. 3 —Company—Internal management—Interference by Court — Appointment of managing agents terminated by ordinary resolution contrary to articles of association—Suit for declaring resolution invalid as not barred. See Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9. AIR 1950 P C 81.

——S. 3 (1), Proviso—Scope—If ultra vires or invalid as constituting delegated legislation.

The proviso to S. 3 (1) of the Companies Act cannot be held to be bad as constituting delegated legislation. Under the proviso, the Legislature has applied its mind to the question as to whether the District Court should have the same jurisdiction as the High Court with regard to company matters. The policy of investing the District Courts with jurisdiction under the Companies Act has been laid down by the Legislature. The carrying out of that policy has been left to the executive and it is left to the executive in the sense that that policy should become effective at a time when the executive issues a notification. This does not constitute delegated legislation. Therefore the proviso is valid and not invalid or ultra vires. (1951) 21 Com Cas 264 : 53 Bom L R 106 : AIR 1951 Bom 282 (283) (Pr 4).

——S. 3 (1) & (3) — C. P. Government Notification No. 1644-1207 dated 17-8-1925 under Proviso to S. 3 (1) empowering District Judges to exercise powers under Act—If extent —Objection to jurisdiction —Indian Adaptation of Laws Order (1937), Cls. 9 & 10 —Government of India Act (1935), S. 292 — Indian Adaptation of Laws Order (1950), cls. 22, 23 —Constitution of India, Art. 372.

Notification No. 1644-1207 Dated 17-8-1925 issued by the C. P. Local Government in exercise of its powers under S. 3 (1), Proviso, Companies Act investing all District Courts in the Central Provinces to exercise all the jurisdiction conferred by the Companies Act did not lapse on the coming into force of Part 3 of the Government of India Act on 1-4-1937. Though the words 'Central Government' were substituted in place of 'Local Government' in proviso to S 3 (1) of the Companies Act, by the Indian Adaptation of Laws Order 1937, there was no need to issue a fresh notification as the old notification was sustained and kept in force by virtue of cls. 9 and 10 of the Indian Adaptation of Laws Order and S. 292, Government of India Act and the power to issue a fresh notification, any amendment to the previous notification became again vested in the Provincial Government by virtue of Notification No. 88 (13) Tr. C. L. 37 D/- 26-3-1938 published in C P. & Berar Gazette dated 8-4-1938.

The same position now obtains by virtue of clauses 22 and 23 of the Adaptation of Laws Order 1950, read with Article 372 of the Indian Constitution which came into force on 26th January 1950. By virtue of the aforesaid clauses, the law which was in force in India continues to be so in force unless altered by some Legislature or authority empowered to regulate the matter in question. The law in force in India would include all notifications enabling Courts to entertain suits of a particular character.

Hence, a District Judge who had been invested with jurisdiction under notification dated 17-8-1925 continues to have jurisdiction in spite of the fact that there is no fresh notification by the Provincial Government after 1-8-1938.

Even if it be held that the District Judge has no jurisdiction to entertain the winding up proceedings and as such is a wrong court, no objection to the jurisdiction of the District Judge can be gone into at the stage of appeal by virtue of S. 3 (3) Companies Act when it is not raised in the Court below. I L R (1952) Nag 802 : (1953) 23 Com Cas 429 : A I R 1953 Nag 228 (229, 230) (Prs 6, 7, 11) (DB).

——Ss. 3, 235, 216 — Court — Meaning of — Court means Court under Companies Act and not ordinary civil Court.

Where a liability not existing at general law is created by a statute, which at the same time gives a special and particular remedy for enforcing it, the remedy provided by the Statute must be followed and it is not competent to the party to proceed by action at general law. Therefore, since liquidators are creations of the Companies Act, 1913 and their liability along the officers of the Company for damages for misfeasance or non-feasance is created by S. 235 of the Act, it is necessarily implied that any shareholder (contributory) who claims damages must go to the Court under the Act, i e., the High Court, in order to obtain it 1964 Cur L J 289 : (1964) 2 Com L J 17 : 66 Punj L R 749 : (1964) 34 Com Cas 717 : I L R (1964) 2 Punj 415 : AIR 1965 Punj 24 (25) (Pr 5).

——S. 3 (3)—District Court — Absence of territorial jurisdiction —Proceedings—If invalidated—(Companies Act (1956), S. 10).

Provided a Court had jurisdiction under S. 3 (1), any proceedings taken therein will not be invalidated simply on the ground that it had no territorial jurisdiction in the matter. If the proceedings were taken in a High Court which had no territorial jurisdiction in the matter, they would not have been invalidated simply on that ground. Proceedings taken in a District Court empowered under S. 3 (1) cannot also be invalidated on the ground of want of territorial jurisdiction. When there is no inherent lack of jurisdiction and there is only want of territorial jurisdiction proceedings taken either in a wrong High Court or District Court empowered under S. 3 (1) cannot be invalidated and sub-s. (3) of S. 3 saves those proceedings. (1958) Raj L W 470 : ILR (1958) 8 Raj 334.

——S. 3— Proviso 3 (3) — Notification, dated 9th August, 1950 by Rajasthan Government empowering District Courts — Validity of, after application of Act to Rajasthan —Power of High Court to entertain proceedings — (Part B States (Laws) Act (1951), S. 6, Proviso) — Rajasthan High Court Ordinance (15 of 1941), S. 17).

The delegation of power made by the Rajasthan Government to the District Courts by the Notification issued under the Proviso to S. 3 of the Companies Act and applied to Rajasthan as modified by the Rajasthan Ordinance 4 of 1950, has been preserved by the second proviso to S. 6 of the Part B States (Laws) Act, 1951. The Notification is intra vires and is still in force after the application of the Companies Act to Rajasthan under the Part B States (Laws) Act, 1951, and the District Courts have power to entertain applications under the Companies Act, 1913.

The words of the proviso to S. 3, Companies Act, do not expressly exclude the jurisdiction of the High Court in Company matters and hence, in spite of the issuing of the above notification, the High Court does not lose its jurisdiction in Company matters. ((1842) 4 M and G 421, Rel. on.)

Although the High Court would undoubtedly possess the power to be exercised by the Court under the Act, it will not entertain applications in respect of matters which can be dealt with by the District Court.

Further, even when a District Court is authorised to exercise jurisdiction under the Act, the High Court can proceed with the application before it by virtue of sub-s. (3) of S. 3 of the Act.

Even if it be assumed that the High Court has no original jurisdiction, S. 17 of the Rajasthan High Court Ordinance authorises transfer of any case to itself falling within the jurisdiction of any subordinate Court. It would be in the discretion of the High Court either to carry on with the proceedings in the High Court or to transfer any of them to the District Court having jurisdiction. 1955 Raj LW 401 : I L R (1955) 5 Raj 931 : (1956) 26 Comp Cas 253 : A I R 1953 Raj 61 (62, 63) (Prs 7, 8, 9, 11, 12) (DB).

(Companies Act (1913), S. 4.)

1. Registration of association, company or partnership.
2. Association.
3. Partnership.
4. Persons.
5. Carrying on business.
6. Acquisition of gain.
7. Effect of non-registration.

1. Registration of association, company or partnership.

——S. 4 (2)—Members less than 20— Registration of association.

Where the members of the 'Chit Fund' together with the organisers are less than 20, the association is not compulsorily registrable as a company under S. 4 (2) of the Companies Act. ILR 29 Mad 477, Foll. AIR 1953 Hyd 142 (143) (Pt A) (Pr 4).

——Ss. 4 and 2(1) (ii)— Affixing of word 'Company' after firm name —S. 4 if attracted.

Merely because persons choose to affix the word 'Co.' after the firm name, the company need not be registered under the Companies Act. It is the number of the members of the partnership that determines the question whether the Company should be registered under that Act. A I R 1951 Kutch 55 (55) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

2. Association.

——S. 4 — Association — Chit fund concern — Not an association requiring registration — Companies Act (1956), S. 11.

To constitute an Association within the meaning of S. 4 of the Companies Act, 1913, existence of a legal relationship between more than 20 persons giving rise to joint rights or obligations or mutual rights or duties is absolutely necessary. When more than 20 persons enter into an agreement by which a chit fund is created, parties to such agreement do not form an association of which registration is necessary, because there is no existence of any legal relationship between them. (1962) 1 Andh W R 244 : AIR 1962 Andh-Pra 406 (408) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

3. Partnership.

——S. 4 — Partners of firm sharing profits with strangers — Whether strangers become partners of firm. See Income-tax Act (1922), S. 26A. AIR 1957 Andh.Pra 332 (334, 335, 336) (Prs 3, 6, 8, 10) (DB).

4. Persons.

——S. 4 — Partnership in excess of 20 persons—Incapable of registration as partnership firm. See Income-tax Act (1922), S. 26-A. (1964, 51 ITR 507 (All).

——S. 4 (3) — Hindu joint family business—Association of more than 20 persons — Legality — (Companies Act (1956), S. 11 (3)).

An association of more than twenty persons carrying on business for gain is only permissible if it is a Hindu joint family business. Such an association would be illegal even if it is a partnership of two or more joint families as sub-s. (3) in terms indicates. It is not correct to say that when two or more joint families represented by their kartas enter into a partnership the number of members for the purpose of S. 4 would be the kartas and not the other members of the joint family represented by their kartas. Such a partnership of kartas would be illegal if the number of adult members of the joint family exceeds 20. AIR 1959 Cal 380 (385) (Pt F) (Pr 15).

——S. 4 (2) (corresponding to Companies Act (1 of 1956), S. 11 (2)).

Applicability — 'Person' — Limited company registered under Companies' Act — If 'person' — Partnership between two private individuals and managing agent of limited company—Partnership not registered — Plea that partnership was illegal as it contravened S. 4 (2), it not having been registered as required by law consisting, as it did, of more than 20 persons — Held that though under S. 23 (S. 34 (2) of the Companies Act (1956)), a registered company was a body corporate, the partnership was not the one between the two private individuals on the one hand and the body of corporate members forming the company on the other, but a partnership of three persons only — Partnership was not illegal as contravening S. 4 (2) and therefore the suit for dissolution and accounts is not barred.

Obiter. — A Registered company entering into a partnership with other individuals enters it only as a single legal person and not as a group of individuals comprising its shareholders. (1963) 1 Mad L J 250 : (1963) 1 Comp L J 158 : 76 Mad L W 282 : (1963) 33 Com Cas 833: AIR 1963 Mad 128 (129, 130) (Prs 5, 6, 8).

5. Carrying on business.

——S. 4 — Association formed to obtain steel quota and distribute it to members — Activity amounts to business done for profit — Association is hit by section and is an illegal body if not registered as a company — Suit for accounts by members against other members not maintainable.

Held that the association was hit by S. 4 of the Act and was an illegal association.

The co-existence of two things namely a business and the carrying on of that business for gain attracts the application of S. 4 and the activity carried on by the association was a business which resulted in gain to its members. Keeping in view what the association was doing, it could not be said that it was not formed to do a business the object of which was to bring forth some gain to its members, the gain being the steel quota to them. ILR 60 Bom 800 and AIR 1934 Lah 382 and (1881) 45 L T 612, (1859) 141 E R 467 and ILR 17 Cal 788, Disting.

Held therefore that a suit by some of the members under O. 1, R. 8 for accounts against the office bearers and the other members of the association was not maintainable, parties to the suit being members of an illegal association. 65 Pun L R 177 : (1963) Com L J 100: (1963) Com Cas Rep 54: ILR (1963) 1 Punj 789: 1963 Cur L J 77 : AIR 1964 Punj 72 (74, 75) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4).

——S. 4 (2) — Applicability—Companies Act (1956), S. 11 (2).

An association of more than twenty members who have bonded together for the purpose of purchasing cloth and selling it at a profit for distribution among the members is hit by the provisions of S. 4 of the Companies Act of 1913 (S. 11 of the Companies Act of 1956), and without registration under the Companies Act is an illegal body. The mere fact that a number of such associations of cloth dealers were formed under the advice of the Textile Control Department for convenience of organising purchases and sales can make no difference and will not absolve such a body from the necessity of getting itself registered if the business which it carries on is for the profits of the members. There is no need to incorporate in the Act a statutory provision barring a suit by such an illegal body. ILR (1958) Punj 2412 : AIR 1959 Punj 104 (105) (Prs 9, 10, 11).

6. Acquisition of gain.

——S. 4 (2) — 'Gain' — Meaning of — (Words and Phrases — 'Gain.')

The word 'gain' in S. 4 (2) means 'acquisition' and is not limited to mere pecuniary gain. The word is to be taken as referring to a company which is formed to acquire something or in which the individual members are to acquire something. ILR (1955) Mys 519 : (1956) 26 Com Cas 121 : AIR 1955 Mys 149 (150, 151) (Pt C) (Pr 7).

——S. 4 — President of an association known as 'Naj Vitran Committee' consisting of 115 members filing suit, in representative capacity for recovery of loan — Association not registered under S. 4 — Plaintiff alleging its formation at instance of Government, to help it in distribution of grain among public — But evidence of plaintiff's own witnesses disclosing, that an element of acquisition of gain did enter into its formation — Held, committee was an illegal association falling within mischief of S. 4 and hence suit could not be maintained — Plaintiff was not entitled for benefit of Ss. 65 and 70 of Contract Act — Contract Act (1872), Ss. 65 and 70 — Companies Act (1956), S. 11.

Held on facts, that S. 4 of the Companies Act was attracted and there could be no escape from the conclusion that the N. V. Committee was an illegal association falling within the mischief of the said section and hence the suit could not be maintained. The evidence available from the plaintiff's own witnesses was clear to show that an element of acquisition of gain did enter into the formation of the 'Naj Vitran Committee' and was one of the objects with which it was formed. AIR 1932 Rang 167, AIR 1955 Mys 149, AIR 1959 Punj 104, AIR 1930 P C 300, AIR 1959 S C 559, Foll. Held further, that as having regard to the provisions contained in S. 4 of the Companies Act the 'Naj Vitran Committee' had no legal capacity to act whatever and in fact was an illegal association, to give effect to a contract entered into by such an association in a Court of law would be a clear violation of that law and no Court of law can countenance such a claim. Hence the plaintiff was not entitled to the benefit of Ss. 65 and 70 of the Contract Act. The principles underlying Ss. 65 and 70 could not be pressed into use where a contract became or was discovered to be not merely void but where it was illegal in the sense that the person entering into the contract had no legal competence whatever to function as such. Where there was a complete want of capacity to enter into a contract, and the infirmity attaches not merely to the mode of making it, or where the contract had been made by a party or an association whose very existence was unlawful in the eye of law and it was forbidden from functioning as such, then a Court of law could not but be precluded from enforcing it. 7. Effect of non-registration.

——Ss. 4 (2), 270 and 271 – Illegal company—Winding up.

Part 9 of the Act is intended to cover the cases of those companies which can legitimately remain unregistered. In other words, it provides that companies consisting of not more than ten members in cases of banking companies and not more than twenty members in case of other companies can be wound up. Part 9 therefore does not contemplate that a company formed contrary to the provisions of S. 4 can also be wound up through Court. 1954 All L J 569 : (1954) 24 Com Cas 388 : AIR 1954 All 555 (556, 557) (Pt B) (Pr 9).

——S. 4—Failure to register firm — Effect on business.

Failure to register a firm under the Companies Act can have no effect upon the legality of its business. AIR 1951 Kutch 55 (55) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

——S. 4 (2)—Applicability—Conditions.

To attract the provisions of S. 4 (2) of the Act, three ingredients are to be present. They are (1) an association of more than twenty persons, (2) which carry on business and (3) that business should be for the acquisition of gain. Any association or company formed in contravention of any of these must be held to be illegal, and no Court should entertain a suit brought in relation to such company or association. ILR (1955) Mys 519 : (1956) 26 Com Cas 121 : AIR 1955 Mys 149 (150, 151) (Pt B) (Prs 6, 7).

——S. 4—Scope – Effect of non-registration.

The effect of non-registration is that the company, association or partnership will have no legal existence as such but it does not prevent the individual members from transacting business with third parties. A contract entered into by a member of an unregistered association in individual capacity with third parties cannot be held illegal or void from the mere fact that one of the contracting parties was a member of the association which had no legal existence. AIR 1953 Sau 141 (142) (Pt C) (Pr 5).

——S. 4—Non-compliance — Right of refund of contribution.

Where the business of the partnership had been carried on for some time, and the contribution by the plaintiff to the business of the association, illegal under S. 4 of the Companies Act, had been applied to the business no refund by the plaintiff can be claimed. But where the agreement has been made and the contribution has been paid by one associate to another, but it has not been started, there is an equitable principle that the associate should get back the money. The principle of pari delicto does not come in here, because the delict though contemplated and agreed to has not yet been committed. The Managing Director of a limited liability company cannot be made personally liable for arrears of sales tax due by the company. The taxing authorities should proceed only against the assets of the company, Ss. 8 (b) (2) and 15 (h), Madras General Sales Tax Act, and S. 386, Cr. P. Code have no bearing on this question.

A company which is a body corporate can be made liable for the payment of taxes and the individuals constituting the company cannot be held responsible for the default in payment of such taxes.

Under S. 6 (iv), Companies Act, the liability of the members is limited to the amount payable on the shares. There can, therefore, be no personal obligation on the shareholders or even the directors in respect of the debts or even the taxes, revenue, etc., due from the company.

It is implicit in S. 230 (1), Companies Act that even revenues, taxes, cesses and rates payable to the State are only recoverable from the assets of the Company. Therefore, the directors cannot be personally proceeded against in respect of revenues, taxes, etc. (1954) 2 Mad L J (Andhra) 184 : (1955) 25 Com Cas 32 : 68 Mad L W 1198 : 1955 Cri LJ 332 : AIR 1955 Andhra 26 (28) (Prs 6, 8, 9, 12).

——Ss. 10 and 12 – Provision relating to appointment and remuneration of Managing Agent inserted in objects and memorandum of company – Power of Company to alter—(Companies Act (1956), Ss. 16, 17).

The mere fact that the appointment of the Managing Agent and the terms and conditions of his appointment and his remuneration were mentioned in the object of the defendant No. 1 Company would not make the provisions relating to the appointment and the remuneration a condition contained in the Memorandum of association, as contemplated in S. 10 of the Act. The provision relating to the appointment of a managing agent is merely a detail concerning the management of the company and a company will be entitled to regulate that detail in such manner as it likes without going to the Court for its sanction and without recourse to a special resolution, as contemplated in S. 12.

It could not make a difference in the position even if the clause in the memorandum of association relating to the appointment of the Managing Agent was inserted among the object of the Company. Hence the view that defendant No. 1 Company was not authorised to pay extra remuneration to the Managing Agent and could not pass a resolution in respect thereof cannot be accepted. (1957) 27 Com Cas 377 : AIR 1956 Bom 257 (259, 260) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 8).

The third part of S. 11 (6) is a permissive one, and is intended to provide for the continuance of the proceedings initiated in its former name against the company, by its new name. It does not imply that so far as proceedings initiated by the company in its former name are concerned they could not be continued in the new name. ——Ss. 12 and 55—Alteration of memorandum - Reduction of capital.

The capital of a company was originally Rs. 1,09,956 divided into 1,309 shares of Rs. 84 each to be paid in monthly instalments of one rupee and this was subsequently raised to Rs. 21,00,000 divided into 25,000 shares. Under the rules of the company, the shareholders who subscribed regularly at Re. 1 per month for 84 months should be paid a sum of Rs. 100, the difference between Rs. 84 and Rs. 100, representing the interest on the deposits of Re 1 which they paid every month towards the share capital. The alteration was to substiute in the Memorandum of Association the following, viz., "that the share capital of the company was to be 1,00,000 divided into 1,00,000 shares of rupee one each." By reason of the aforesaid alteration the company could be assured of a share capital of Rs. 1,00,000 which would not be payable to the depositors.

Held, that (1) the existing system of holding share capital was not in accordance with law and the provisions of the Companies Act.

(2) It could not, in any view, be taken to be a case of reduction of capital under S. 55. It was introducing into the company a system of share capital as required under the company law, in effect, regularising what had been irregularly carried on all this time. In this view the proper course for the company was to alter the memorandum of association giving notice to its members and applying to the Court under S. 12. AIR 1929 Mad 773, Rel. on. (1952) 22 Com Cas 299 (Mad).

——S. 12 (1) (a) — Transfer of registered office of Company — Requirements—(Companies Act (1956), S. 17).

Where a company doing mining business in the State of Orissa, where all its mines are situate, and where all its share holders are, desirous to transfer its registered office from Bonaigarh in the District of Sundargarh in the State of Orissa, to Calcutta in West Bengal, the company must satisfy the Court that by shifting its registered office to Calcutta its business would be carried on more efficiently and more economically. Merely because the company has taken on lease some portion of the dock-yard at Kidderpore and merely because, Bonaigarh is far away from the business world, it will not be proper for the Court to infer that by shifting its registered office to Calcutta its business could be run more efficiently and economically, when the history of the Company from the time of its establishment in 1939 till the date of the application indicates that its business at Bonaigarh had been flourishing steadily. (It was held that the company did not satisfy the Court about the requirements of S. 12 (1) (a).) (1959) 1 Orissa J D 673.

——S. 12 (3) — Proposed change of place of registered office — State can object — (Companies Act (1956), S. 17).

If there is a proposal to shift the registered office of a Company from one State to another, the interests of the Government of the State (from where the office is to be shifted) would be affected by the alteration not only as regards the taxes payable to that Government by the Company but also as regards the application of the various labour laws on which the maintenance of industrial peace and general peace in the locality rests. The language of S. 12 (3) is wide enough to include the State amongst persons affected by the change of the place of the Registered office. The State therefore has locus standi to object to the proposed change. (1959) 1 Orissa J D 673.

——Ss. 13 (1) and 133 (3)—Failure to place balance sheet before general body meeting within time — Managing director pleading his own default — Plea of innocence by directors.

Where a complaint under S. 13 (1) read with S. 133 (3) was filed against the managing director and the directors of a company for their failure to place the balance sheet before the general body meeting of the company as required by the Act and it was contended on behalf of the managing director that no offence was made out against him because, inasmuch as no general body meeting was held within the period prescribed, no question of placing the balance sheet arose and the plea of the directors was that it was impossible for them to hold a general body meeting and place the balance sheet and especially so when it was the managing director who was entitled to call this meeting and get the balance sheet placed before it;

Held that this was a clear case where the managing director was relying on his own default in order to establish his innocence and this he could not be permitted to do. AIR 1917 Cal 1, Rel. on. AIR 1948 Bom 357, Dissent from; AIR 1941 Mad 504, Ref. to.

Held further that the pleas put forward by the directors also could not be accepted as they had ample opportunities and time to apply to the Registrar for extension and they did not do so; and secondly they had got their own responsibility and could not plead innocence on the ground of helplessness and throw the entire blame on the managing director. ——S. 17 — Articles of Association of company — General presumption.

The general presumption with respect to the Articles of Association of a company is that the parties have expressed every material term which they intended should govern their agreement, whether oral or in writing. But it is well recognised that there may be cases where obviously some term must be implied if the intention of the parties is not to be defeated, some term of which it can be predicated that "it goes without saying" some term not expressed but necessary to give to the transaction such business efficacy as the parties must have intended. That the statutory rights cannot be taken away or modified by any provisions of the memorandum or articles applies to both classes of companies, public or private. The private companies have certain statutorily defined privileges and exemptions.

The most important of these are that (1) a private company may carry on business with a minimum of two share-holders and even one member may carry on business for a period of six months before his liability becomes unlimited (Ss. 12 and 45); (2) it may commence business without the formalities to which a public company is subject under S. 68; (3) it is not required to hold a statutory meeting or to file a statutory report (S. 165); (4) no minimum subscription need be subscribed before allotment of shares is made (S. 69); (5) it need not disclose in the statement in lieu of prospectus but in a statement in the prescribed form signed as in the case of a statement in lieu of prospectus and filed with the Registrar any underwriting commission paid (S. 76); and (6) business may be commenced as soon as a certificate of incorporation is received without complying with the restrictions contained in S. 149. But its privileges and exemptions do not extend beyond the provisions defined in the statute and it must honour the obligations that are imposed under the Act in the same manner as a public company. SECTION 20

——S. 20 — One article of association prescribing maximum and minimum number of directors — Another article authorising company at general meeting to increase or reduce number subject to provisions of S. 83A(1) and to alter their qualification and order of rotation—Held, on consideration of articles of association, that provisions were textually inconsistent and must be read subject to cross references reconciling them — Ordinary resolution of company at general meeting increasing number of directors beyond prescribed maximum held valid: 50 Cal W N 310, Reversed.

One of the Articles of Association, Art. 109 of a company prescribed a maximum and a minimum number of directors without any qualifying words. Another Article (Art. 126) authorised the company in a general meeting, from time to time to increase or reduce the number of directors subject to the provisions of S. 83A (1) and to alter their qualification and change the order of rotation of the increased or reduced number. The question was whether the power of the company by ordinary resolution to "increase or reduce" the number of directors conferred by Art. 126 was only exercisable within the limits set by the maximum and the minimum prescribed by Art. 109 and whether a special resolution altering

Art. 109 was required to increase the number of directors beyond the prescribed maximum;

Held, that after consideration of the relevant articles (Arts. 111, 112, 121 to 123, 125, 127 and 128), Arts. 126 and 109 were two textually inconststent provisions. To reconcile Art. 109 with Art. 126 and to give effective content to the opening words of Art. 126 it was necessary to imply some such opening words as "subject to Art. 126" in Art. 109 or "notwithstanding anything contained in Art. 109" in Art. 126. In this view, the company had power to increase the number of directors beyond the maximum prescribed by Art. 109, by an ordinary resolution and consequently a special resolution altering Art. 109 for the purpose was not required : (1909) 1 Ch 311 and (1909) A C 442, Ref.; 50 Cal W N 310 Reversed. SECTION 21

——S. 21—Articles of Association — Construction — Principles—(Companies Act (1956), S. 36).

In construing the relevant Articles of Association, the Court may, before accepting any specific construction, take into account all the relevant Articles together with the Bye-laws. If the words used in the relevant Articles are ambiguous an attempt should be made to adopt such a construction of the said words as would avoid a conflict between the Articles and the Bye-laws. But if the words used are clear and unambiguous and they irresistibly lead to the inference that jurisdiction to deal with the dispute as to the existence of the contract itself was not intended to be conferred on the Lavad Committee, then that meaning cannot be extended merely because words of wider denotation may have been used in some of the Bye-laws. In the very nature of things Bye-laws are subordinate to the Articles of Association and indeed they are framed in order to carry out the provisions contained in the Articles themselves. 58 Bom L R 3 : ILR (1956) Bom 100: (1957) 27 Com Cas 255 : A I R 1956 Bom 459 (462) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 21—Articles of Association providing that all disputes arising out of dealings or transactions should be referred to arbitration—Whether includes dispute as to existence of dealings or transactions — Companies Act (1956), S. 36.

An Article of Association of an Association provided that it would be obligatory on every member with reference to all the claims and disputes arising out of or incidental to all the dealings or transactions entered into by him with other members that he shall get the same settled first by arbitration without resorting, to a Court of law.

Held, that a dispute as to the existence of the transaction or dealing itself was not covered by the Article and no obligation had been imposed upon any member to refer such a dispute to the arbitration 58 Bom L R 3: I L R (1956) Bom 100 : (1957) 27 Com Cas 255 : AIR 1956 Bom 459 (463, 464) (Pt C) (Pr 9) (DB).

——S. 21 (1)—Effect of.

The effect of S. 21 (1) is that after the articles are registered, they not only constitute a contract between the association or company on the one hand and its constituent members on the other, but they also constitute a contract between the members 'inter se'. 58 Bom L R 3 : ILR (1956) Bom 100: (1957) 27 Com Cas 255: AIR 1956 Bom 459 (466, 467) (Pt E) (Pr 17) (DB).

——S. 21 (1) — Articles providing for compulsory arbitration—Effect.

If the provisions of S. 21, Sub-s. (1) of the Companies Act are literally construed and it is held that a contract resulting from the Articles of Association between members 'inter se' is not subject to any artificial limitation that its application is confined only to the company relationship subsisting between the members or to dispute in respect of the management of the association as such, then it would be possible to hold that it is a general agreement containing several clauses between one member and another and the Article providing for compulsory arbitration is a general arbitration agreement which would govern all the dealings which have been entered into between one member and another in respect of a commodity falling within the purview of the association. On this view, the Articles of Association would constitute a general contract containing an arbitration clause and all such contracts would attract the provisions of such arbitration clause. The position in respect of oral contracts made between one member and another would, on this view not be materially different from the position of contracts which are made expressly subject to the Articles of Association. What is expressly mentioned in this latter class of contracts can be said to be included in all similar contracts by necessary implication having regard to the Articles of Association which constitute a general contract between one member and another. A company had under the Articles a lien on the shares held by a member in respect of debts, liabilities or engagements with the company. A member had under an agreement guaranteed due payment to the company of all the debts due by a third person to the company. This member had pledged his shares with another, before he had entered into the agreement referred to above, with the company. The question arose whether the lien of the company had priority over the pledge.

Held (1) that the company had according to the Articles lien on the shares held by the pledger in respect of the debt due from him under the agreement.

(2) the debt in respect of which the lien was claimed having been incurred without notice of the previous pledge had priority over the pledge.

(3) that the fact that the pledger was himself a director was immaterial because knowledge of a director is not imputable to the company unless the knowledge is acquired in his capacity of a director and the agreement with the pledger was entered into by other direc ors on behalf of the company.

(4) that by the agreement with the pledger, the company could not be said to have waived its contractual lien. There would have been waiver, if there had been actual pledge of shares with the company, for pledge is a higher security than the equitable charge and the acceptance of it implies an intention to give up the lower security. 89 Cal L J 183 : (1953) 23 Com Cas 399 : AIR 1953 Cal 526 (528, 529, 530) (Pt C) (Prs 9, 11, 13, 16).

It is now well established that, though the articles of association constitute a contract between the company and a member in respect of his rights as a member, the articles do not constitute a contract between the company and third persons, and a third person who purports to have rights against the company would be precluded from relying on the articles as the basis of his claim and must prove a special contract. Hence it is not open to the policy-holders of an Insurance Company to take advantage of any thing contained in the articles of association of the company as giving them any beneficial interest or other claim to the policy holders' trust fund; nor is it open to them to contend that the company is in the position of a trustee so far as the fund is concerned. 69 Mad L W 37 : (1956) 26 Com Cas (Ins) 12 : (1956) 1 Mad L J 344 : ILR (1956) Mad 1014 : 1956 Mad W N 95 : AIR 1956 Mad 316 (319, 320) (Pt B) (Prs 9, 12) (DB).

——Ss. 30, 31—Entry in register of members is condition precedent to membership — Distinctive numbers of shares allotted must be mentioned in register.

Section 30 contemplates two things : (1) an agreement and (2) entry in the register. An agreement alone does not create the status of membership. It is a condition precedent to acquiring such status of membership that the shareholder's name should be entered on the register. An entry in the register of members is made a condition precedent to membership. How the name is to be entered in the register of members is laid down in S. 31. No doubt it is unnecessary in the resolution allotting shares and also in the letter of allotment to say that particular shares bearing numbers so and so are allotted to the share-holder. But when it comes to the making of an entry in the register of members in order that liability may attach as on a compliance with the mandatory provision of S. 30 (2), one does expect that the distinctive numbers of these shares purporting to have been allotted by the company to the share-holder should have been mentioned there. The phrase 'deemed to have agreed to become members of the Company' in S. 30 should be interpreted to mean that the subscriber of the memorandum is to be treated as having become member by the very fact of subscription. AIR 1933 All 334, Rel. on.

Neither application for, nor allotment of shares is necessary in the case of a subscriber to the memorandum and he acquires the full status of a member with all the rights and liabilities by the very fact of subscription and subsequent registration of the company. ——Ss. 30, 40—"Shareholder" — Who is—Status of Shareholder — Essentials of — Contract Act (1872), S. 4—(Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 22).

A mere subscription to shares in a company does not constitute a subscriber a shareholder; the subscription amounts to nothing more than an offer to take share. The application for shares and the letter of allotment constitute a valid and legally binding contract between the applicant and the company, contract the fruit of which is shares. An applicant has an equitable right to the shares from the time when the letter of allotment is sent to him and can obtain specific performance of the contract by the company to allot those shares to him. The issue of a certificate of shares is not necessary to constitute him a shareholder. Under S. 30 of the Companies Act every person who agrees to become a member of a company and whose name is entered in its register of members shall be a member of the company, and under S. 40 the register of members shall be prima facie evidence that a person whose name is on it is a shareholder. If in addition it be proved that such person has become, subscribing to the prescribed sum or otherwise, entitled to a share in the company, the evidence that he is a shareholder is conclusive. A failure of consideration is not a ground for treating shares as unpaid although an application for shares made upon a condition precedent does not become binding on the applicant until it has been complied or its performance waived. When the company has fulfilled a part of its contract by allotting to the applicant the number of shares which it had agreed to sell, and the share certificates have been issued and the name of the applicant has been placed on the register of shareholders and all formal acts have been completed, in the eye of law the applicant has been put in possession of the shares and he acquires the status of an owner or at any rate a beneficial owner. If the applicant fails to comply with the terms of the contract, it would be open to the company to bring an action against them for specific performance or for recovery of damages. It has no power to recall the shares which have been allotted by them or to divest the applicant of the right of ownership which has come to vest in him. 59 Punj L R 122 : (1958) 28 Com Cas 386 : I L R (1957) Punj 1505 : A I R 1957 Punj 261 (264, 265) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 9, 10) (DB).

The burden of proof that the list of shareholders was forwarded to the Registrar in time is on the company and if it is not discharged, the company is responsible. The liability of the directors however depends on their knowingly and wilfully withholding the list. Where the prosecution has failed to establish that the particular directors excepting the Managing Director knowingly and wilfully authorised or permitted the non forwarding of the list, they cannot be held responsible. The Directors of a company were charged with offences under S. 32 (5) and S. 133 in that they were knowingly and wilfully parties to the failure to file the summary of share capital for certain year as required by S. 32 (3), and to the failure to lay before the company in general meeting the balance sheet and profit and loss account as required under S. 131. No general meeting of the company had been held during the year in question and the Directors had been knowingly parties to the default of the company in that respect.

Held, (i) that the fact that no general meeting of the company was held, was, in the circumstances, no defence to the charge of not complying with the requirements of S. 32.

Section 76 which imposes an obligation to hold a general meeting and attaches a penalty to a failure to perform that obligation does not affect the question. The two sections (Ss. 32 and 76) dealt with different matters and S. 76 did not interfere with the operation of S. 32. Nor did the fact that S 32 (5) imposed a daily fine during the continuance of the default indicate that the default was not committed till the meeting had been held. The default occurred after the expiry of 21 days from the day when the meeting should have been held within the year. ——Ss. 32 (3), 76, 131 (1), 133 and 134 — Directors' failure to call general meeting—Offence–Liability.

Where the directors are in default in not calling a general meeting under S. 76 or in not laying the balance-sheet or profit and loss account before such a meeting under S. 131 (1) or in not sending three copies of such balance sheet and profit and loss account to the Registrar under S. 134 (1), Companies Act or in not sending the list of members together with a summary under S. 32 (3), they render themselves liable to the penalties provided by the Act for each and every one of these defaults provided that so far as the directors or other officers are concerned, their default is wilful and not inadvertent as distinguished from the default of the company itself. The substantial requirement of S. 134 (1) is the sending of a certain number of copies of the balance-sheet and the profit and loss account or the income and expenditure account, as the case may be, to the Registrar. The Courts should not place an interpretation upon the section which would permit the evasion of or escape from one default simply because this default was the inevitable consequence of another default, and where both these defaults are punishable in the eye of law.

In order that the default should be wilfully and knowingly committed, it need not necessarily be suggestive of dishonesty or fraud on the part of those concerned. It is the duty of the directors to see and make the necessary attempt that the statutory requirements are carried out, and where this has not been done, the Courts can and would legitimately infer that the defaults though not expressly authorised were still wilfully permitted : 39 Cal W N 1152 and A I R 1948 Cal 42, Rel. on.

Held, that the conviction of the directors for each of their defaults under Ss. 32, 76, 131 (1) and 134 for each of the four years could not be said to be wrong in law because these defaults proceeded from an earlier default under S. 76 of the Act. 1960 Raj L W 139 : (1960) 30 Com Cas 523 : I L R (1960) 10 Raj 857 : 1961 (2) Cri L J 416.

In the case of defaults in compliance with the requirements of Ss. 32, 76 and 134, the fact that the directors do not automatically become liable for the defaults of the company is quite clear from the purposeful distinction drawn in the section between the liability of a company and the liability of its officers. The company's liability is absolute while that of its officers is made dependant on whether they were knowingly or wilfully parties to the default.

The words 'knowingly and wilfully authorises or permits the default' signify that the gist of the crime is conscious and deliberate action (or omission). A director can be held liable for his company's default only if it is shown that he, being aware that his act or omission will result in the default, authorises or permits the default by a deliberate act or omission on his part or by his reckless disregard to the fact whether his act or omission will result in such default. The question whether in a particular case a director was a knowing and wilful party to the default will depend on the facts of that case. 1961 Ker L J 490 : 1961 Mad L J (Cr) 608 : 1961 Ker L T 382 : I L R (1961) Ker 732.

——S. 33 — Receiver appointed in suit by purchaser of shares against shareholder whose name was still on register of company — Court cannot direct company to allot shares to receiver and enter his name in register—Company cannot recognize trust — Court cannot also give directions, so as to nullify right acquired by company under S. 105C, to allot shares. See Civil P. C. (1908), O. 40, R. 1 (d). A I R 1950 Bom 76 (DB).

——Ss. 33 and 79 — Company holding shares in another company on behalf of its constituents — Right to vote according to wishes of constituents.

Where a company or a corporation holds a number of shares in another company on behalf of its constituents, it is only proper that holding their proxies it must vote according to the desires of the individual constituents although in paper the company or corporation is the share-holder.

What is said in S. 33, Companies Act, is that no notice of any trust, express or implied or constructive shall be entered on the register or receivable by the registrar. Nothing of that kind is done by allowing the company to vote according to the dictates of the constituents on whose behalf it holds the shares. Indeed to extend the doctrine of non-recognition of trust in such manner will be to destroy the whole principle of voting by proxy. ILR (1956)

(Companies Act (1913), S. 34.)

1. Scope.
2. Transfer—Meaning of.
3. Instrument of transfer—Necessity.
4. Stamp duty.
5. Refusal to register.
6. Effect of non-registration.

1. Scope.

——Ss. 34, 38 and 123—Scope — Register of debentures or mortgages—Rectification — Power of Court —Transfer of debentures—Application for rectification of register by entering his name as transferee of debentures after winding-up order—Competency — Interpretation of statutes — Meaning of words — Duty of Courts.

Section 38 of the Companies Act is comprehensive enough to include not only rectification of the register of members, but also the register of mortgages including debentures. It is clear from S. 34 (3) that the section legalises and visualises the transfer of debentures also.

Under S. 123 read with S. 38, the Court has got power to direct that the transfer of debentures be entered in the registers of the company. Such an application by a transferee for rectification of the register of debenture-holders is certainly maintainable under S. 123 read with Ss. 34 and 38, and it may be made even after a winding-up order has been made. The provisions of Ss. 123, 34 and other sections do not stand paralysed or suspended during the period following the passing of the winding-up order. On the other hand, the Court during the winding-up proceedings assumes greater responsibility. ——S. 34 (7) — Transfer of shares — Honesty of transferor if relevant — (Companies Act (1956), S. 110).

That the transferor had acted honestly and in good faith throughout is not relevant for the purpose of transfer of shares. (1957) 2 Mad L J 517 : 70 Mad L W 715 : I L R (1957) Mad 1058 : A I R 1957 Mad 702 (713) (Pt H) (Pr 33) (DB).

——S. 34 — Nccessary formalities — Knowledge of transfer on part of company's officers is not enough to satisfy requirements of S. 34. A I R 1955 N U C (Mad) 1004.

——S. 34 (3)—Transfer of shares—Necessary formalities—Refusal to transfer.

Section 34 (3), Companies Act, contemplates that the following conditions must be fulfilled before the Company can lawfully register a transfer, viz., that,

(i) the instrument of transfer, is duly stamped ;

(ii) the instrument is executed by the transferor and the transferee ; and

(iii) the instrument is delivered to the company along with the scrip.

Where conditions (i) and (iii) are not fulfilled, the company is not legally competent to register the transfer. It is immaterial in this connection that the company does not demand a proper stamp. The condition creating as it does a statutory liability, cannot be waived and its breach would debar the company from registering the transfer. Nor does the fact that the instrument could be validated under the proviso (a) of S. 35, Stamp Act, 1899, make it enforceable until the necessary stamp duty and penalty are paid. S. 36, Stamp Act has no application to such a case as the proceedings before the company are not of a judicial character such as is contemplated therein. I L R (1954) Nag 392 : 1954 Nag L J 454 : AIR 1954 Nag 293 (296) (Ft C) (Pr 9) (DB).

2. Transfer—Meaning of.

——S. 34 — 'Transfer' — Sale of shares by company in enforcement of its lien — (Companies Act (1956), S. 110).

Section 34 does not contemplate cases of transfer by the company of its own shares. Just as allotment by the company of its own shares cannot be characterised as a transfer within the meaning of the section, similarly the sale of its own shares by the company after forfeiture also cannot be characterised as 'transfer', within the meaning of S. 34 of the Companies Act. But shares belonging to other people which the company is selling in enforcement of lien or equitable charge cannot be treated on the same footing. They are not shares in which the company has 'property' and the sale does not result in transfer of property from the company to the purchaser. The sale in enforcement of lien results in the transfer of property from one registered owner to the purchaser and is not different from ordinary transfer from one shareholder to another. The fact that the company acts as the seller being authorised by the Articles to sell, does not alter the character of the transaction. It is a case of transfer just like any other transfer and is covered by S. 34 of the Act. Such a sale of shares by the company in enforcement of lien is not excluded from the operation of S. 34 of the Act. ILR (1959) 2 Cal 530 : (1960) 30 Com Cas 532 : AIR 1959 Cal 715 (745) (Pt M) (Pr 97).

——S. 34 (3)—Applicability—Court sale.

The language of S. 34 (3) of the Companies Act clearly shows that it applies only to transfers by acts of parties and does not apply to sales held by the Court. 55 Cal W N 408 : I L R (1953) 1 Cal 1 : AIR 1952 Cal 58 (60) (Pt B) (Prs 9 and 10) (DB).

——S. 34, Table A, Regs. 18 to 23 — Transfer and transmission — Distinction — Purchaser of share at Court-auction—If automatically becomes member — Proper procedure for transfer — Discretion of directors to refuse to register such transfer—(C. P. Code (1908), O. 21, Rr. 79 and 80).

Where the company has adopted Arts. 18 to 23 of Table A subject to the modification of Art. 20 which modification invests the directors with absolute and uncontrolled discretion to refuse to register a transfer of a share, then even in a case falling under Art. 22, the directors "have the same right to decline or suspend registration as they would have in the case of a transfer of a share by the deceased or insolvent person before the death or insolvency."

The case of a purchaser of a share at a Court auction does not fall under Art. 22 of Table A. A purchaser of a share at a Court-auction sale does not automatically become a member of the company in view of the provisions of O. 21, Rr. 79 and 80, C. P. Code. He can only become a member of the company on compliance with the requirements of Arts. 18 and 19. A transfer of the share has therefore to be completed by the judgment-debtor in favour of the purchaser as required by Arts. 18 and 19. Under sub-s. (3) of S. 34, Companies Act, it is not lawful for a company to register a transfer of share in the company unless the proper instrument of transfer duly stamped and executed by the transferor and the transferee has been delivered to the company along with the scrip. If the judgment-debtor refuses to execute the transfer as required by Arts. 18 and 19 then the Court steps in under O. 21, R. 80, C. P. Code to effectuate the transfer in favour of the purchaser. In either case, on a transfer being presented for registration to the company, the provisions of Art. 20 are necessarily attracted and the directors still have a discretion to refuse to register the transfer. At a court-sale the purchaser does not purchase, over and above his share, the absolute right of forcing the directors to register his name. That is a right which ex hypothesi 'the Court never had to sell.' Nor does an auction sale enlarge the rights of a shareholder. The share purchased is subject to the same incidents and restrictions as regards transfer as before the sale. (A I R 1923 Mad 241 and AIR 1918 Bom 147, Rel on : AIR 1928 Mad 571 and AIR 1949 Lah 8 Disting.) I L R (1955) Nag 1016 : 1956 Nag L J 30 : AIR 1956 Nag 20 (23, 24) (Pt D) (Prs 18, 19, 20, 21) (DB).

3. Instrument of transfer—Necessity.

——S. 34 — Purchase of shares — Delivery of share scrips by a broker together with transfer deeds in blank duly executed by the registered holders of the shares effects a valid transfer of shares in favour of the purchasers. 1957 All W R (HC) 104.

——S. 34 — Transfer of shares — Registration — Necessity for deed of transfer — Article enabling registration—If ultra vires — (Companies Act 1956, S. 110).

The Articles of the Company should be so construed as to harmonise and be consistent with the provisions of the Companies Act. That is the proper rule of construction. If an article provides for registration of shares sold by the company in enforcement of lien even without a deed of transfer, the Article would be inconsistent with the provisions of S. 34 of the Act and therefore ultra vires. I L R (1959) 2 Cal 530 : (1960) 30 Com Cas 582 : A I R 1959 Cal 715 (745) (Pt L) (Pr 96) (DB).

——S. 34 (1) and (7)—Registration of transfer without transferee signing transfer deed — Discretion of company—(Companies Act (1956), S. 110).

Where the Articles of Association of a company require the transfer of shares to be executed by both parties, the Court has no power to rectify the register by removing the name of the transferor, unless the transfer deed has been executed by the transferee also, the principle being that a Court is bound to carry out the contract between the parties and cannot make a new contract for them. A blank transfer deed may pass property in the shares as between the purchaser and the seller, and transfer the shares in that sense, but before that transfer can be registered with the company under S. 34, the transferee's name must be clearly known to the company either by his signing in the transfer deed, in token of the transfer to him, or by a Court passing a decree for specific performance recognising the transfer of the shares to the transferee. Such a procedure will show clearly who the transferee is. Even then, the transfer deed signed by the transferor and the transferee (wherever possible) or by Court for one of the parties and duly stamped must be presented to the company with an application for the registration of the transfer, and it will be within the discretion of the company to allow or refuse the registration of the transfer under S. 34 (7) and the relevant Article or the Articles of Association. ——S. 34 (7) — Scope — (Companies Act (1956), S. 110).

Section 34 (7) and an Article in the Articles of Association of a company which requires the transfer of shares to be executed by both the parties. are concerned with the company's registering the transfer of the shares, and not with their accepting or rejecting the validity of the transfer and the ownership in the shares in the transferee. Where the shares are bought in open market with blank transfer forms duly executed by the registered holders, the ultimate purchaser filling up his name in the form has got the right to have his name put on the share register. (1890) 15 A C 267, Rel. on. A I R 1955 N U C (Cal) 399.

4. Stamp duty.

● ——S. 34 (3)—Liability of Company to pay stamp duty in respect of transfer of shares.

If a company registers an instrument of transfer of shares which is not duly stamped, it would be doing something which is not lawful. But there is no provision in the Companies Act or in the Stamp Act, which would make the company liable for payment of the proper stamp duty.

The only liability to pay stamp duty in the case of an instrument of transfer is upon the executant. If he fails to do so the revenue authorities can proceed against him. If the document is brought before the revenue authorities, the revenue authorities will impound it, but having impounded it, the only right given to them to proceed for the recovery of the duty is against the person who was liable to pay the duty. Jagdish Mills, Ltd., In re, 56 Bom L R 525 : (1954) 24 Com Cas 241 : ILR (1955) Bom 1074 : A I R 1955 Bom 79 (80) (Pr 3) (SB).

——S. 34 (3) — Formalities—Transfer deed not duly stamped — Company, if justified in refusing registration — (Companies Act (1956), S. 108(1))—(Stamp Act (1899), Ss. 3, 17)).

A company is justified in refusing to register a transfer of shares on the ground that the transfer deed was not stamped as required by law. The obligation is not of the company but of the transferee to deliver the transfer deed duly stamped and executed. A I R 1955 Bom 79, Rel. on. Whether or not the company in refusing registration acts under a particular article of association, which gives absolute discretion to the directors to refuse registration of transfer of shares is immaterial, as the law gives the company power to refuse to register in case the transfer deed is not only stamped. The stamp must be put at the time or before the execution of the transfer deed. Subsequent stamping will not satisfy that legal requirement.

Obiter.—If a transfer deed is not duly stamped as required by law that consideration can also very well come within the ambit or meaning of Article of Association giving discretionary power to the Directors to refuse registration. To be alive to the law is a part of the well informed discretion which the Board of Directors are required to exercise under the Article. [(1903) 2 K B 121, Rel. on; (1917) 2 Ch 100, Disting.]. 5. Refusal to register.

——Ss. 34 (3) and 38 — Rectification of register of mortgages — Essential under the Act — Transfer of debentures — Application by transferee to rectify the register is maintainable — Company cannot refuse registration. See Ibid, S. 125. (1964) 1 Com L J 217 (All).

——Ss. 34 and 38 — Refusal to register transfer on ground of non-production of only executed and stamped instrument — Court will not entertain application for rectification of register. AIR 1955 N U C (All) 1997.

——S. 34 — Transfer of shares in company—Refusal to register—Mala fides or bad faith — Proof — Evidence as to rejection of transfers not in issue in the suit and not between parties to the suit — Admissibility. See Evidence Act (1872), S. 6. A I R 1957 Cal 709 (DB).

——Ss. 34 (4) and 28—Transfer of shares—Director's power to refuse registration — Powers of Court — (Companies Act (1956), S. 111 (2) and 82).

Even in a case where the articles of association give uncontrolled and absolute discretion to the Directors to decline to register transfer of shares and also give them power to withhold reasons for such refusal, if it is shown that there has been no exercise of any discretion but an exercise of a whim or a caprice, then such purported exercise of power under such an article can be examined by the Court. The test of 'discretion' is not satisfied if the act or the decision of the Directors declining to register is oppressive, capricious, corrupt or mala fide or not in the interest of the company at all. But once it is shown to the Court that the Directors have exercised their discretion, then the Court does not sit as a Court of appeal reviewing or revising that discretion. The High Court in that event will not set aside that discretion of the Directors even though it would have come to a different conclusion on the same set of facts. If, any reason or reasons are given by the Directors in a particular case, the Court can always enquire if they are legitimate or not. But even when the Court considers whether such reasons are legitimate or not, that only means that it tries to ascertain whether the Directors have proceeded on a right or wrong principle. [(1891) 65 L T 245 and (1942) 1 Ch 304, Rel. on]. (1958) 28 Com Cas 565 : AIR 1957 Cal 709 (712, 713) (Pt A) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 34 (4) — Transfer of shares — Grounds and reasons in exercising power — Distinction—(Companies Act (1956), S. 111).

Where the articles of association give absolute discretion to the Directors to decline to register transfer of shares without assigning any reason for such refusal the reason for exercising the power is a distinct thing from the grounds which gave rise to its exercise. [(1926) 1 Ch D 746 and (1935) 1 Ch 718, Rel. on.]. The directors may at their absolute and uncontrolled discretion decline to register or acknowledge any transfer of shares and shall not be bound to give any reason for such refusal. It is, subject to the discretion having been exercised, absolute and uncontrolled. The latter part of Article is only illustrative of the grounds on which the directors could decline to register but not exhaustive. (1958) 28 Com Cas 565 : AIR 1957 Cal 709 (715) (Pt C) (Pr 16) (DB).

——S. 34 (4) — Transfer of shares — Resolutions passed by Board of Directors showing no reason for declining to register transfer—Unused, undated and undespatched letter on file of Company—Inference — (Companies Act (1956), S. 111).

Where the articles of association of a company gave absolute discretion to the Directors to decline to register transfer of shares without assigning any reason for the same and the actual terms of the resolution passed by the Board of Directors showed that no reason whatever was disclosed or stated by the Board for refusing to register certain transfer :

Held, that the draft of an unused, undated and undespatched letter on the file of the company could not be used and read as an actual letter to show that the Company was prepared to put forward a false reason as a ground for refusing to register. (1958) 28 Com Cas 565 : AIR 1957 Cal 709 (715) (Pt D) (Pr 17) (DB).

——S. 34 — Transfer of shares — Directors' power to refuse registration—Mala fides—Proof—Purchase of large blocks of shares by Director to acquire control — Legality — (Companies Act (1956), S, 111).

Cornering as such or purchase of large blocks of shares as such by a Director of a company, so long as they are permissible by law, is not unjustified. That by itself does not prove mala fides or bad faith either in fact or in law. To acquire a control which the law permits cannot be illegal. (1958) 28 Com Cas 565: AIR 1957 Cal 709 (726, 727) (Pt E) (Pr 19) (DB).

——S. 34 — Transfer of shares—Directors' power to refuse registration — Mala fides—Proof—Indebtedness of other directors to one director—Relevancy — (Companies Act (1956), S. 111).

The fact that a person is indebted to somebody else does not necessarily make the debtor surrender all his judgment in other respects to the creditor. The fact that the other Directors are indebted to one director is not sufficient to induce the conclusion that the creditor Director exercised the biggest influence, even in declining to register a transfer of shares in favour of the plaintiff. (1958) 28 Com Cas 565 : AIR 1957 Cal 709 (717, 718) (Pt J) (Pr 26) (DB).

——S. 34—Transfer of shares—Directors' power to refuse registration—Mala fides—Burden of proof — (Companies Act (1956), S. 111).

Where the plaintiff alleges bad faith and mala fides against the defendant company in declining to register transfer of shares in his favour, it is not proved by creating what at best may be called suspicion against the conduct of one individual director. The onus is upon the plaintiff to prove his charge that the directors of the defendant company acted dishonestly and that their act was in fraud upon their powers in the Articles of Association. It is difficult to prove fraud and dishonesty because they are grave charges and imputations. Because they are difficult to prove is no reason why Court should take a lenient view and make that light and easy for which law seeks most satisfactory proof in order to hold a person guilty of fraud and dishonesty. Fraud is not proved by mere suspicion. (1958) 28 Com Cas 565 : AIR 1957 Cal 709 (718) (Pt K) (Pr 28) (DB).

——S. 34—Refusal of registration— Directors have right to refuse registration—They cannot however sit over it indefinitely. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 399.

——Ss. 34, 38—Application by transferee of shares for rectification of register—Defence.

Where the Company endorsed on the back of the share scrips that the shares had been fully paid up it is not open to the company to say in defence to an application, by the purchaser of the shares for rectification of the register of shares of the company by striking out the name of the registered holder of the shares and entering his name, that the consideration for the sharers was not paid and therefore the sharers could not be registered in the name of the purchaser when there is nothing to hold that the purchaser was a party to any fraud or that he did not purchase the shares perfectly bona fide. ('50) 54 Cal W N 80.

——S. 34 (7)—Discretion of company—Application for registration - Discretion to accept or reject if arbitrary or invalid—(Companies Act (1956), S. 110) —(Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (f)).

The absolute discretion given to the company to accept or reject an application for registration, of a transfer, under an Article in the Articles of Association, recognised by S. 34 (7) cannot be held to be invalid on the ground that it is arbitrary and unreasonable, and affects the citizen's rights of property. The discretion given to the company under the Articles of Association is perfectly justiiiable, as that is necessary for the well-being of companies and is the basis of the contract between the company and the shareholders. (1957) 2 Mad L J 517: 70 Mad L W 715: ILR (1957) Mad 1058: AIR 1957 Mad 702 (713) (Pt C) (Pr 32) (DB).

——S. 34—Refusal to transfer — Discretion—Giving of reasons.

If a discretion as to registering transfers is given by the Articles to the Directors the Court will not control the exercise of such discretion unless it is proved that the directors are not exercising it bona fide or are acting in other ways oppressively, capriciously or corruptly or in some way mala fide. The Board of Directors is not bound to give any reasons for not registering the transfer and if the reasons are not given, the Court will not merely on that account draw an unfavourable inference against the Board. They are however at liberty to disclose the reasons and if they do, the Court must consider the reasons assigned with a view to find out whether the defendants acted on a right or wrong principle. If a person is of such a character as to throw their company into confusion and if he was not a desirable one, then the Board of Directors would certainly be acting in the best interest of the company in refusing to register the shares in his name and such a reason is quite a valid reason: (1955) 25 Com Cas 283: 68 Mad L W 624: ILR (1956) Mad 686: 1955 Mad W N 800: (1955) 2 M L J 535: AIR 1955 Mad 665 (667, 668, 669) (Prs. 11, 14, 16, 18) (DB).

——S. 34 (4)—Transfer of shares—Refusal to register —Necessity to specify ground for refusal—Refusal on ground not personal to transferee—Refusal if bona fide.

In the exercise of a power to approve or disapprove a transferee, the directors are confined to the transferee himself. They are not concerned with matters extraneous to this enquiry. If it is established that the rejection of the transfer application was not on the ground of personal disapproval of the transferee, the action of the directors is not bona fide, and in any event is arbitrary and illegal. The prior recognition of the transfer of shares in favour of the transferee prima facie precludes the possibility of a disapproval of the transferee on personal grounds.

Article 37 of the Articles of Association of a company was as follows: "The directors may decline to register any transfer of shares in respect of which any member solely or jointly with others is indebted to the company in any manner whatsoever or if the directors shall not approve of the proposed transferee, and they shall not be obliged to give any reason for not approving the transferee". The plaintiff, who was a share-holder of the company, purchased a number of shares from other shareholders and applied to the company to register the transfer of the shares in his name in the books of the company. The Board of directors of the company, however, refused to register the shares without specifying the ground of rejection of the application. A few months before the date of this application certain other shares were registered by the company in the plaintiff's name. It was also in evidence in the suit filed by the plaintiff for a mandatory injunction directing the company to register the transfers in his favour that the Managing Director of the company wanted the shares to be sold to himself:

Held (1) that it was the duty of the directors to have informed the plaintiff the ground on which they decided to decline to register the transfer. Of course, if the ground was that they did not approve of him, they certainly were not obliged to give reasons for not approving. But because the directors did not specify the ground on which they had declined to register the transfer no adverse inference should be drawn against them;

(2) that in the absence of any suggestion that something occurred, without suggesting what, which made the directors change their opinion of the plaintiff personally, it must be held that the disapproval by the directors could not have been on any ground personal to the plaintiff;

(3) that, therefore, the refusal by the directors to register the transfer of the shares in favour of the plaintiff was improper and not bona fide and could not be upheld. (1950) 1 Mad L J 808: 63: Mad L W 579: (1950) 20 Com Cas 61: ILR (1951) Mad 21: AIR 1950 Mad 725 (727) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 34 (4)—Directors refusing to register transfer of shares – Presumption of bona fides—Onus to prove lack of bona fides—(Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103).

Where the directors of a company refuse an application for transfer of shares of the company the presumption would be that the directors acted bona fide and the onus would be on the person challenging their action to establish the lack of bona fides and the impropriety on their part. ——S. 34 (3) and (5)—Refusal to register.

Application for registering transfer of shares returned by company within one month of the date of its presentation—This tantamounts to an intimation of the refusal to register transfer of shares—Moreover, under sub s. (5) a breach of sub-s. (4) only entails a penalty and does not entitle transferee to an automatic rectification of the register. ——Ss. 34, 38 — Transfer of shares — Director's discretion to register—Refusal to register—Power of Court to rectify register—(Companies Act (1956), Ss. 108, 155).

The directors are in a fiduciary position both towards the company and towards every shareholder in it. The Court would interfere with any violation of the fiduciary duty so reposed in the directors where it is made out that the directors have been acting from some improper motive or arbitrarily or capriciously. (1879) 8 Ch. A. 448, Rel. on. Where the Articles of Association give the directors an absolute and uncontrolled discretion to register the transfer of any share to any person but reasons are given by the directors for the refusal although they were not bound to do so, the Court can go into the questions whether those reasons are proper, legitimate and bona fide. The power vested in the Board of Directors under such Article is a fiduciary power and must be exercised bona fide in the interests of the company.

Except on grounds which apply personally, the refusal cannot be based upon grounds like 'security was not given or a particular agreement was not executed.'

Held, that the conduct of the company in refusing to register the transfer of shares on the basis of title by devolution or transmission in the circumstances of the case was not bona fide, proper and legitimate. (1958) 28 Com Cas 500: AIR 1957 Orissa 203 (207, 208, 210) (Pt A) (Prs 16, 17, 18, 23).

●——S. 34 and Table A, Regn. 18 — Transfer of shares—Relationship between transferor and transferee—Obligations of transferor—(Trusts Act (1882, S. 94).

On the transfer of shares the transferee becomes the sole beneficial owner of those shares sold by the transferor, the legal title to which is vested in him. Thus, the relation of trustee and cestui que trust is thereby established between them. The transferor holds the shares for the benefit of the transferee to the extent necessary to satisfy the demands of S. 94, Trusts Act, 1882. As the transferee holds the whole beneficial interest and transferor has none, the transferor must comply with all reasonable directions that the transferee may give. In this situation if he becomes a trustee of dividends he is also a trustee of the right to vote because the right to vote is a right to property annexed to the shares and as such the beneficiary has a right to control the exercise by the trustee of the right to vote. 45 Bom L R 46, Rel. on.

The relationship arises by reason of the circumstance that till the name of the transferee is brought on the register of share-holders in order to bring about a fair dealing between the transferor and the transferee equity clothes the transferor with the status of a constructive trustee and this obliges him to transfer all the benefits of property rights annexed to the sold shares of the cestui que trust. That principle of equity cannot be extended to cases where the transferee has not taken active steps to get his name registered as a member on the register of the company with due diligence and in the meantime certain other privileges or opportunities arise for purchase of a new share in consequence of the ownership of the shares already acquired.

The principles of justice require that cestui que trust who gets all the benefit of the property should bear its burden unless he can show some good reason why his trustee should bear them himself. ——S. 34 and Regulations 18 and 20 of Table 'A' Schedule I—Certain shares of a shareholder transferred to another shareholder for valuable consideration to avert winding-up proceedings initiated by former—Agreement between transferee and other shareholders to reimburse him in money after taking transfer of some of the shares in the event of transferee's failure to reimburse himself from company's assets—Transferee's name not entered in Register of members in respect of transferred shares — Instrument of transfer not stamped and not properly executed—Suit for specific performance of agreement against other shareholders — Liquidation of company before suit— Effect — Right to specific performance—Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877), Ss. 19 and 25.

Plaintiff, who was one of the shareholders and chairman of the Board of Directors of the suit company, under an agreement between him and three other shareholders, purchased ten shares of the value of Rs. 10,000 from another shareholder to avert winding-up proceedings initiated by the latter. It was agreed between the plaintiff and the other three shareholders, (defendants) that the sum of Rs. 10,000 should be paid back to him from out of the company's assets, or with the consent of the General Body of members allow the plaintiff to repay himself with necessary adjustments in the company's accounts, and that if the plaintiff could not realise the money in either of the two ways, the defendants were to pay each Rs. 2,500 to the plaintiff and take a transfer of 2½ shares. The company was later ordered to be wound up on a petition filed by a shareholder. Plaintiff, unable to pay himself in either of the two modes contemplated by Cl. (1) of the agreement, filed the suit for specific performance of Cl. (2) of the agreement. The trial Court dismissed the suit and this was confirmed in appeal to the High Court. Plaintiff preferred a Letters Patent Appeal.

Held, that unless and until the name of the plaintiff is registered in the books of the company, he is not the legal owner of the shares transferred. The deed of transfer cannot be said to be valid in law, as it is not in the prescribed form, nor stamped. Whatever rights he might have had against the transferor, he had no title to the shares on the date he instituted the suit. On the date of the suit the plaintiff was not registered as a shareholder in respect of the ten shares, and was not the legal owner thereof, and consequently could not transfer them to the defendants. The suit for specific performance of the agreement to transfer the shares in respect of which he had no title, must necessarily fail. Since the suit itself was instituted with the knowledge that the petition for winding up was filed in the High Court, the plaintiff cannot claim specific performance of the agreement. Further, it is impossible to grant a decree for specific performance as the company itself is dissolved. (1965) 1 Com L J 257 : (1965) 1 Andh W R 441 : AIR 1965 Andh Pra 353 (358, 359) (Prs 22, 23, 27, 30, 31, 33 and 34) (DB).

——Ss. 34, 156, Sch. I, Regn. 18—Liability of member —Plea that shares were sold but transfer was not registered — (Companies Act (1956), Ss. 108, 426, Sch. I, Table A, Regn. 19).

The provisions of S. 34 are to be strictly followed before any transfer could be recorded and recognised by the company and before the company could be bound by the transfer. Until the name of the transferee is entered in the register of membership, the transferor under Sch. I, Regn. 18 shall be deemed to be the holder of the shares and as such liable as a member. It is no answer for the contributory against the claim of the company to say that although his name appears on the register, he is not liable because he has sold his shares to a purchaser who has not got his name registered in the register. In the absence of rectification of the register under S. 38, his liability is absolute under S. 156. AIR 1950 Bom 217, Rel on. 28 Com Cas 536 : AIR 1958 Assam 86 (92, 93) (Pt C) (Pr 9) (DB).

——Ss. 34 and 38—Effect of transfer of shares.

Until a transfer of shares is registered the transferor continues to be the legal owner of the shares and after his death the same right inheres in his heirs who would be competent to obtain letters of administration in respect of the shares. Hence where after filing an application for a duplicate shares certificate the member who has subsequently transferred his shares dies, the company would be entitled to demand letters of administration from the heirs when the articles of association of the company authorises it to do so. Consequently the demand of the Company for production of letters of administration cannot be a ground of attack in the proceedings started by the transferee under S. 38, Companies Act. This conclusion is not affected by the fact that the heirs do not claim any interest in the shares in question for the Company is entitled to claim immunity not only from them but also from the rest of the world. SECTION 38

(Companies Act (1913), S. 38.)

1. Application for rectification.
2. Any member may apply.
3. Necessary parties.
4. Civil suit for rectification.
5. Entry or omission of name without sufficient cause.
6. Discretion of Court.
7. Delay in application.
8. Order for damages.
9. Rectification after commencement of winding up proceedings.
10. Nature of enquiry.
11. Effect of order for rectification.
12. Appeal.

1. Application for rectification.

●——S. 38—Procedure.

Application for rectification of alleged wrongly recorded shares should be accompanied by affidavit of counsel — Party cannot challenge form of order under S. 38 to which its counsel consented. AIR 1917 P C 30 and AIR 1951 Mad 796, Rel. on; AIR 1951 Mad 572, Reversed. Sha Mulchand and Co., Ltd., v. 2. Any member may apply.

— S. 38 — Association not for profit — (Companies Act (1956), S. 155).

The argument that if an association does not exist for profit, no member of the association has a pecuniary interest in the fact that the name of some one else is or is not on the list of members of the company and that he is therefore not entitled to invoke the jurisdiction of the Court is fallacious. A citizen is entitled to invoke the jurisdiction of the Court not merely in matters affecting him financially. Besides under S. 38 (1) (b) any member of a company has a right to invoke the jurisdiction of the Court. (1956) 26 Com Cas 229 : (1957) 2 Mad L J 416.

3. Necessary parties.

——S. 38 — Rectification of register — Necessary parties—Court cannot order rectification in absence of third parties whose rights would be affected by such rectification. 4. Civil suit for rectification.

——S. 38 — Remedy of transferee—Right to bring suit.

The remedy of the transferee of a share is not limited to an application under S. 38 of the Companies Act, but he has the right to bring a suit to get his name registered and where the case is a complicated one an action should be brought. 55 Cal W N 408 : ILR (1953) 1 Cal 1 : AIR 1952 Cal 58 (60 and 61) (Pt D) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 38—Rectification of register—Suit for—Maintainability—(Companies Act (1956), S. 155).

Under S. 38 though a petition is the normal way for moving the Court for rectification of the register, a suit also can be filed under that section, either alternatively or in addition. ——S. 38 — Scope — Proper relief to be claimed in a suit for rectification by the share-holder whose shares have been forfeited is a declaration that the forfeiture of the shares is illegal and inoperative and a mandatory injunction directing company to restore the name of the plaintiff as share-holder in the companies register. 5. Entry or omission of name without sufficient cause.

——S. 38—'Omitted', meaning of—It may mean 'refuse to enter' or 'scored out' — Latter meaning is too narrow and technical — Word 'omitted' covers the case of person who applies for first time to have his name registered in share register—He need not prove his name was registered and was deleted. A I R 1955 N U C (All) 1997.

——S. 38 (1) (a)—Fraudulent entry in register — Case is covered by Cl. (a) of S. 38 (1). AIR 1955 N U C (Assam) 3634.

——S. 38 (1)—Rectification—Act or omission on part of company under sub-s. (1)—Proof—Necessity of — Sale of shares by share-holder—Failure of purchaser to get his name registered—Ground for rectification.

Under clauses of sub-s. (1) what one has to establish is some act or omission on the part of the company. It is not sufficient for a share-holder who sells his shares merely to contend or prove that there was omission on the part of the purchaser to get his name registered or impute knowledge with regard to the change of ownership of the shares to the chairman of the board of directors or to the Secretary or merely to refer to a letter written by him to the company pointing out that he has sold his shares and that he is no longer a share-holder. Something much more has to be established before it can be held that the company was in default in not making the necessary alteration so as to entitle the share-holder to call for rectification under the section. He has to bring home to the company an omission which in law would amount to a sufficient cause within the meaning of sub-cl. (a) and would amount to default or unnecessary delay within the meaning of sub-cl. (b). 52 Bom L R 40 : (1950) 20 Com Cas 26 : AIR 1950 Bom 217 (219) (Pt B) (Prs 6 and 7) (DB).

——Ss. 38 and 34 — Application by transferee of shares for rectification of register — Defence.

Where the Company endorsed on the back of the share scrips that the shares had been fully paid up it is not open to the Company to say, in defence to application by the purchaser of the shares for rectification of the register of shares of the company by striking out the name of the registered holder, that the consideration for the shares was not paid and therefore the shares could not be registered in the name of the purchaser when there is nothing to hold that the purchaser was a party to any fraud or that he did not purchase the shares perfectly bona fide. ('50) 54 Cal W N 80.

——S. 38 (1) (a)—Fraud on part of purchaser of share —Transferor's name not omitted from Register—Relief under S. 38 (1) (a) can be given. A I R 1955 N U C (Mad) 1004.

——S. 38 (1) (a)—'Entered in or omitted from register' —Meaning of—Cases where entry is continued or retained and case of person who is member of company being struck out, are covered—(Words and Phrases). AIR 1955 N U C (Mad) 1004.

——S. 38 (1) (a) — Applicability—Fraud—Absence of sufficient cause on part of third person — Fraud need have no relation to company—"Without sufficient cause" need have no relation to any default or omission on part of company. A I R 1955 NU C (Mad) 1004.

——S. 38—Applicability of clause (a) — Question arising under sub-cl. (a) confers wider powers than sub-cl. (b)—In applying S. 38, question is not merely whether there was any default or omission on part of company which would fall under sub-cl. (b) but question will also be whether under sub-cl. (a) name of any person is fraudulently or without sufficient cause entered in or omitted from the registers. A I R 1955 NUC (Mad) 1004.

——S. 38—Application for rectification of register—Onus is on shareholder to prove that action of directors in refusing to register transfer of share was mala fide. (1872) 8 Ch 446; (1895) 2 Ch 404; (1898) 14 T L R 314 and (1926) 1 Ch 758, Rel. on. ILR (1955) Nag 1016 : 1956 Nag L J 30 : A I R 1956 Nag 20 (22) (Pt B) (Pr 11) (DB).

——Ss. 38, 34 and Table A, Reg. 20 — Private Company—Articles of association conferring on directors absolute and uncontrolled discretion to refuse to register transfer of share—Interference by Court.

Where the Articles of Association of a private company confer on the directors an absolute and uncontrolled discretion to refuse to register any transfer of a share whether fully paid or not, where in the opinion of the directors it is not to the interest of the Company to admit the proposed transferee to membership or (if he is already a member) to allow him to increase his holding, and the directors in the exercise of that discretion refuse to register a transfer of a share, then unless it can be shown that a power so vested in them was exercised mala fide or for any collateral purpose, the Court cannot overrule the decision of the directors and substitute its own judgment about the desirability of bringing the name of a person as a shareholder in the register. (1942) 1 All E R 542, Applied.

Held, on facts that in the absence of mala fides the Court was not justified in allowing the application for rectification of the register and thereby interfering with the decision of the directors to refuse to register the transfer of share of the applicant in the exercise of their discretion. ILR (1955) Nag 1016 : 1956 Nag L J 30 : A I R 1956 Nag 20 (22, 23) (Pt C) (Prs 12, 13, 17) (DB).

——S. 38—Effect of transfer of shares — Where after filing an application for a duplicate share certificate the member who has subsequently transferred his shares dies the company can demand letters of administration from the heirs when the Articles of association authorise it to do so—Demand for such letters cannot be a ground of attack in the proceedings started by the transferee under S. 38. See Ibid, S. 34. AIR 1954 Nag 293 (DB).

——Ss. 38 and 31 — Application for rectification — S. 38 provides summary mode — It is not necessary that name of person should have been fraudulently entered—It is enough if it was entered "without sufficient cause"—This will cover case where there was no valid allotment. A I R 1955 N U C (Pepsu) 2501.

6. Discretion of Court.

——S. 38—Section 38 is comprehensive enough to include not only rectification of register of members but also the register of mortgages including debentures. See Ibid, S. 34. (1964) 34 Com Cas 394 (All).

——S. 38 — Refusal to register transfer — Power of Court to rectify register. See Ibid, S. 34. A I R 1955 N U C (All) 1997.

——S. 38—Power of Court—It can fix particular date at which registration shall become operative even to the extent of making it retrospective. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 399.

——S. 38—Power of Court.

There is discretion vested in the High Court either to exercise or not in a particular case the power under S. 38. The proceedings being in the nature of summary proceedings, there is no warrant for the High Court to go into a detailed investigation into the matters alleged by one party and denied by the other. If the petitioner has been wronged he may have his remedy, otherwise than in an application for rectification of the Register. Where the facts requiring consideration are complicated and not simple a separate action alone would be the proper remedy. (Having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case the High Court was not inclined to exercise power under this section.) (1904) 1 Ch 598, Rel. on. ——S. 38 (1)—Rectification of register—Conditions—Error or mistake or default on part of company—Proof—Necessity—(Companies Act (1956), S. 155).

There is jurisdiction in the Court to rectify the register even in the absence of error, or mistake, or default, on the part of the company, though the Court will not, usually, exercise its discretion and rectify the register, when there is no mistake, or error, or default, on the part of the company. It is a matter entirely for the Court to decide, subject to the Articles of Association and Companies Act. Indeed, even the company will have a right to apply under S. 38 (1) (a), to rectify the register of share-holders regarding the name of any person entered in it fraudulently or without sufficient cause or omitted from the register of members, and of course, no default or fraud of the company can, or need be, proved in such cases. ——S. 38 and first Schedule, Table A, clause 22 — Transmission of shares due to death or insolvency — Paragraph 11 of Articles of Association—Unfettered discretion conferred on Directors to refuse registration without assigning reason — Other clauses of transmission by operation of law not affected — Transmission of title to shares by change of sovereignty—Directors cannot refuse to recognise change in title — Powers of Court under S. 38 — Court has jurisdiction to examine whether company acted bona fide — Reasons given by company held based on collateral matters.

Held, on facts, (i) the case of transmission of title to shares by change of sovereignty was a peculiar case of 'transmission by operation of law' which was outside the scope of Cls. 18 to 23 of Table A to the First Schedule of the Act; and consequently the unfettered discretion conferred on the Board of Directors by paragraph 11 of the Articles of Association had no application. (ii) Assuming that discretion of the Board of Directors, in this respect, was unfettered, the company's conduct showed that refusal to recognise transmission was not made bona fide. (iii) The reason eventually given for the refusal was not legitimate reason but was based on extraneous considerations i. e. for a collateral purpose. ——Ss. 38, 101 and 102—Repudiation of allotment—Grounds — Delay in accepting offer — Effect of — (Companies Act (1956), Ss. 155, 69 and 71).

There is always an implied term in an application for shares that the offer must be accepted within a reasonable time, and if it is not, the applicant is entitled to repudiate the allotment. When the allotment was made more than twenty months after B expressed his desire to purchase the shares, there was no communication between him and the Company as to the delay in the allotment during all this period and although the company was in the initial stage of its formation B was not asked if he was still willing to accept the shares for the amount advanced by him and, further, while the money advanced was in respect of 300 shares of Rs. 100 each, the company in its place decided to allot 1.200 ordinary shares of Rs. 25 each, nor was he ever asked if he was willing to accept shares different from those applied for by him :

Held, that B was within his rights to repudiate the shares. A I R 1956 Pepsu 98 (99, 100) (Pt A) (Prs 8, 12, 13).

Repudiation in order to be effective must be made without any delay. The person should not gain time to find out if the company makes profits or runs at a loss and then to decide to accept or refuse the share. This is necessary to safeguard the interests of third persons who may have in the meantime intervened, but no limitation is provided by law for an application under S. 38. Where the delay, even if it was not properly explained was not shown to have resulted in any detriment to the interests of the company or its members or creditors, and there was no allegation of waiver or acquiescence on the part of the applicant:

Held, that the delay by itself, particularly in the circumstances of the case, would not be a sufficient ground for refusing the prayer. A I R 1956 Pepsu 98 (100) (Pt B) (Prs 14, 15, 17).

——Ss. 38, 184 and 216—Applicability and scope of —Order of winding up — Inclusion of name of member in list of contributories — Failure to appeal —Application after more than three years for rectification of register and list of contributories—Maintainability — Companies Act (1 of 1956), Ss. 155, 467 and 518.

An application for rectification of the share register and for rectification of the list of contributories should be made without delay, and if made after a delay of several years (nearly four years in the present case) and after the order of winding up of the company had been passed, is liable to be summarily dismissed as not maintainable, especially when the applicant-member had ample opportunities of repudiating his liability. Once a winding up order is made and his name included in the list of contributories, he cannot move for rectification of the register of members.

An order of a Court bringing the name of a person on the list of contributories, if not appealed against, becomes final and the question as to his liability as contributory cannot be reopened; and if the applicant claims to have been misled by fraud or false representation into taking shares in the company, as in this case, he should raise the objection without delay. (1963) 2 Comp L J 225 : (1964) 34 Com Cas 402 (Punj).

9. Rectification after commencement of winding up proceedings.

——S. 38 — Rectification of register after winding up can be made by Court, though no application is made. A I R 1955 N U C (Assam) 3634.

——Ss. 38, 156 and 227 (2)—Recification of register —Powers of Court and rights of members — Shareholder standing by and not taking steps to get register and list of contributories rectified in time—Application for relief more than five years after order for winding up and when execution is taken out to enforce call order — Maintainability — Transfer of shares effected during winding up proceedings—Effect — Right of transferee to get name deleted from register — Companies Act (1 of 1956), Ss. 155, 426, 536.

The liability of a member of a company to be included in the list of contributories under S. 156 of the Companies Act is not ex contractu but ex lege and arises by reason of the fact that his name appears on the register of members of the Company; when a claim is made by the company against him it is no answer to say that although his name appears on the register, he is not liable because the allotment of shares to him is void. If he does not take steps for rectification of the register under S. 38 of the Act soon after he comes to know that his name is entered in the register either fraudulently or irregularly or without sufficient cause, his liability becomes absolute under S. 156, all the more so when winding up also has supervened. When he allows his name to remain on the register without having it removed promptly, he would be liable on this doctrine of holding out.

No doubt, in a proper case, the Court may order rectification of the register after the commencement of the winding up proceedings. But if the member does not take steps within a reasonable time, then a winding up order would debar him from approaching the Court for rectification of the register, as by that time the rights of third parties would have come into existence and they cannot be defeated at the instance of a shareholder to whom it was open to come to Court with promptitude but who did not choose to do so.

Where a shareholder does not take steps to rectify the register and the list of contributories at the proper time but waits until application is made by the liquidator to execute the call order and files applications for rectification of the register of members and of the list of contributories and for leave to object to the list of contributories long after the winding up order (more than five years after the final order of winding up), the application should be summarily dismissed on the simple ground that once the winding up order is passed, he has no right to file an application for rectification of the register.

A transfer of shares made during the winding up proceedings and without the sanction of the Court would offend S. 227 (2) of the Companies Act (1913) and must be held void and therefore the names of the transferees in whose names the transfer is effected should be removed from the register. (1963) 1 Mad L J 270 : (1963) 1 Com L J 213 : 76 Mad L W 305 : (1963) 33 Com Cas 435 : A I R 1963 Mad 287 (289, 290, 291) (Prs 4, 8, 9).

——S. 38—Petition for rectification—Maintainability after order for winding up—(Companies Act (1956), S. 155).

A petition for rectification will lie normally after the filing of a winding up petition and before the winding up order is passed, provided the Court will normally reject that petition if the company is already in a notorious state of bankruptcy by the time the petition for rectification is filed and it is for the Court, in its discretion, to say whether such a petition should be allowed or not, it having undoubted jurisdiction to entertain it. ——S. 38—Share-holder, if and when can be relieved of his shares after winding up.

A shareholder cannot be relieved from his shares after a winding up application. But if a shareholder has started active proceedings to be relieved of his shares, the passing of a winding up order during their pendency would not prevent his getting the relief. The reason why a shareholder cannot throw back his shares upon the company after winding up is that rights of third parties have intervened and, equities which would be sufficient as between the shareholder and the company cannot be set up as against the creditors or co-contributories. 1950 All L J 836 : (1950) 20 Com Cas 296 : I L R (1951) 2 All 228 : A I R 1950 All 508 (514) (Pt H) (Pr 20) (DB).

——Ss. 38, 183, 184 — Liquidation proceedings — Application for rectification of Register of Members of Company filed after list of contributories becomes final—Maintainability.

An order of a Court in winding up proceedings bringing the name of a person on the list of contributories after notice to him under S. 212 (c) and after overruling his objections if not appealed against, becomes final under S. 183 and operates as res judicata and the question as to the liability of such person as contributory cannot be reopened. He cannot move for rectification of Register of Members once his name has found place in the list of contributories. Moreover where an application for rectification of the Register of Members of the Company was filed by the member 3 years after the allotment of shares, the application is belated one and the member cannot move for the rectification of the Register of the Members of the Company once his name has found place in the list of contributories. A I R 1915 Lah 227 (1) and (1963) 1 Mad L J 270: (1963) 1 Com L J 213 : A I R 1963 Mad 287 and A I R 1915 Lah 100, Rel. on. ——S. 38 (3)—Rectification of register—Question of title—(Companies Act (1956), S. 155).

An order under S. 38 is not so summary as is contemplated under the English Law. It contemplates decisions of questions relating to title and also provides for an appeal from the decision of such an issue. In an application under S. 38, all the relevant papers to determine the question of title involved in the case were filed by the parties. The question of title was not of any complicated nature. Held, that the petitioner's name was to be registered in the register of share-holders of the company. (1958) 28 Com Cas 500 : A I R 1957 Orissa 203 (212) (Pt C) (Prs 26, 27).

——S. 38—Power of Court—Dismissal of application for rectification.

The application for rectifying the share register under S. 38 of the Companies Act cannot be allowed where there are serious disputes as to whether the resolution of the company is valid and intra vires and whether there can be a valid transfer of those shares in pursuance of that resolution and the issues arising between the parties cannot be properly decided in the summary proceedings under the section. The proper course in such a case is for the parties to get the questions determined in the civil suit which they have already filed. ——S. 38 — Scope and object of — (Companies Act (1956), S. 155).

The object of enacting S. 38 of the Companies Act of 1913, which is analogous to S. 155 of the Companies Act of 1956, was to provide a summary remedy in non-controversial matters or in matters where a quick decision was necessary in order to obviate an irreparable injury to a party. When serious disputes are involved the proper forum for their adjudication is a civil Court.

Where the Company forfeited the shares of a share-holder who was a cashier of the Company, on the ground that a certain amount was due from him to the Company on account of defalcation, but the share-holder denied the defalcation and his liability, the controversy cannot be decided in a summary manner under S. 38. 61 Pun L R 227 : (1960) 30 Com Cas 300 : AIR 1959 Punj 352 (354) (Prs 8, 9).

11. Effect of order for rectification.

——S. 38—Forfeiture of shares and removal of name from Members' Register — Order of rectification directing name to be re-entered in Register—Effect of —Date of operation of rectification—Patiala Companies Act, S. 38.

Rectification means correction of a mistake or blunder and the mistake or blunder, if ordered to be removed by an order of the Court, must inevitably stand removed from the date when it was committed unless the Court specifies that the rectification is to come into operation from a subsequent date. Where by a resolution of a company the shares of a share-holder were forfeited and his name was expunged from the members register and on an application under S. 38, the Court holds that the forfeiture was invalid and orders the name of the share-holder to be re-entered in the company's register, the order of rectification has manifestly for its object the restoration of the applicant to his previous position of the share-holder of the company and as a result of that order all the rights and obligations of a share-holder in respect of the shares held by him are revived. It plainly brings about continuity in the position of the applicant which had been disturbed by an illegal or invalid act of the Company. The period intervening the forfeiture and rectification was only a period of suspense. The applicant should not be regarded to have become a fresh share-holder on the date when his name is re-introduced on the Register of the Company. 12. Appeal.

——S. 38, Proviso—Appeal under—Finding of fact —Interferenee - (C. P. Code (1908), S. 100).

An appeal under the proviso to S. 38 has to be treated as equivalent to one filed under S. 100, C. P. Code. A finding fairly reached on the evidence would, therefore, be binding. But where the Judge in allowing the application for rectification of the register, reached his decision after placing the onus wrongly, the decision is open for further consideration. A company, only if authorised by its articles, has powers to make arrangements on the issue of shares for a difference between the share-holders in the amounts and times of payment of calls on their shares. Where there is no such power, a resolution discriminating between ordinary share-holders and Directors so far as payment of calls are concerned, is bad in law.

If fixation of the time of payment of the call is not done, the call is not valid. Absence of notice of demand of call as per resolution on share-holders would render a call invalid.

In regard to discriminatory nature of the call, however, it is open to a share-holder to agree to pay all what is due on a share, and hence when the Directors of a company have agreed to do so by passing a resolution calling upon them all to make their shares fully paid-up ones, they are estopped from questioning the validity of the call made pursuant to their resolution. ——Ss. 54-A, 55 and 156 — Liability of member — Surrender of shares by a subscriber to memorandum resulting in reduction of share capital—Legality.

A subscriber cannot escape his liability to pay for the shares which he subscribed for in the memorandum even on the ground of misrepresentation by the Company or any of its Directors. Even if there is an attempt at withdrawal by a subscriber before registration but it is not actually brought about and the names appear on the Memorandum of Association as subscriber he is liable.

A transaction which results in reduction of share capital whether called for or otherwise is invalid where there is no sanction of the Court for the purpose. The only statutory exception is forfeiture under conditions laid down by law. Surrender, where authorised by the Articles of the Company is only permissible where it is equivalent to forfeiture or is made and accepted merely as a short cut to forfeiture, i. e., where the conditions for valid forfeiture exist and surrender is resorted to where the share-holder is unable to retain and pay for the future calls on the shares. It is never intended to permit share-holder and particularly a subscriber of the memorandum to escape from his liability. The necessary mental approach needed both in the case of company or its directors and the defaulting share-holder or the subscriber is that the latter was unable to hold the shares and pay for them and the former intended to forfeit the shares and took steps for the purpose but before forfeiture is actually brought about its effect is hastened by the mental assent of both. It must be by a special resolution carried at a general meeting, that the members of the company can decide to reduce the capital and if the necessary validating procedure like issue of notices to all the members is not observed, the validity of the resolution must be affected and its value reduced to nullity. 3 Pepsu L R 342 : AIR 1952 Pepsu 114 (114) (Pr 2).

(Companies Act (1913), S. 76.)

1. Scope.
2. Powers of Court.
3. Default in holding general meeting.

1. Scope.

——S. 76 (2) and S. 133 (3) — Applicability — One-man company — Meeting, meaning of—(Companies Act (1956), S. 166).

The common-sense view is that for a meeting there must be at least two persons. This common-sense view is also the true view in law. According to the ordinary use of the English language, a meeting can no more be held by one person than it can be by none. (1876) 22 Q B D 28 and (1911) 1 Ch 163, Rel. on. The Court does not profess to read the mind of the Legislature apart from what appears from the words it has used, but it will be that the Legislature thought it unnecessary that the obligations under S. 76 of the Act and under the other section depending on it, should be imposed on a one-man company. Where a company consists of only one member he would naturally be in conduct of its affairs and the Legislature might well have thought it unnecessary to protect him against himself. For the general public dealing with such a company it was probably thought that provisions like S. 147 and S. 162 (iv) would afford sufficient protection. Thus, the general meeting required by S. 76 (1) being an impossibility, no liability attaches under S. 76 (2) or S. 133 (3) in the case of a one-man company. 1957 Ker L T 1065 : (1958) 28 Com Cas 13 : 1957 Ker L J 1044 : 1958 Cri L J 177 : ILR (1957) Ker 989 : (1957) Mad L J (Cri) 818 : AIR 1958 Ker 41 (42, 43) (Pt A) (Prs 2, 5, 10) (DB).

——Ss. 76 and 131 — Applicability and scope.

Section 76 does not say that the general meeting shall be called for considering the balance-sheet or profit and loss account and such a meeting might be called for other purpose. The calling for a meeting is one thing, and the subject to be considered at such a meeting is another. It is therefore not correct to say that if eighteen months is unalterable under S. 76, that should equally be so under S. 131. (1953) 2 M L J 94 : (1953) 23 Com Cas 139 : 66 Mad L W 554 : AIR 1954 Mad 276 (276, 277) (Pt C) (Prs 2, 3).

——Ss. 76 and 131—Failure to hold general meeting — If good defence for offence under S. 131.

In a prosecution under Ss. 76 and 131 it is not open to the accused Director to plead his own default by saying that as the general body meeting could not be held no question of placing the balance-sheet arose and therefore no offence under S. 131, was committed. (1953) 1 M L J 408 : 66 Mad L W 152 : (1953) 23 Com Cas 63 : 1953 Cri L J 1062 : AIR 1953 Mad 558 (559) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

——Ss. 76 and 133—Distinct offences—(Penal Code (1860), S. 71).

Sections 76 and 133 create two distinct offences viz , one for not holding general body meeting and another for not laying the balance-sheet before the general meeting. The former offence may give rise to the latter offence or even independently of it. Hence there is no case of the accused being prosecuted twice for the same offence and put in double jeopardy. The decision on the validity of the co-option of a director is incidental to the exercise of the powers under S. 76 (3). (1952) 22 Com Cas 324 : 66 Mad L W 71 (2) : (1953) 1 M L J 275 : ILR (1953) Mad 508 : AIR 1953 Mad 467 (472) (Pt E) (Pr 20) (DB).

——Ss. 76, 79 (3)—General meeting of shareholders — Election of director — Whether formal subject — Appointing independent Chairman — Power of Court.

Though an election of director is ordinarily a non-controversial subject in respect of a company whose affairs are running smoothly, it cannot be called a formal subject where there are factions in the shareholders. It is an important item of business and the Court may appoint an independent Chairman to preside over the general meeting of the shareholders. Such an appointment cannot be objected to as an interference by the Court with the internal management of the company as Ss. 76 and 79 (3) expressly empower the Court to call a general meeting which also includes a power to appoint a person to preside over it. 21 Com Cas 294 : 1951-2 Mad L J 586 : 1951 Mad W N 823 : 64 Mad L W 1091 : AIR 1952 Mad 60 (60) (Pr 3) (DB).

——Ss. 76 and 79 — Adjournment of meeting—Validity.

Where the annual general meeting has been fixed for a particular date the Court would not be justified in granting an adjournment merely because it has appointed an independent Chairman of the meeting. The appointment of independent chairman does not affect the rights of the shareholder in any manner and it is not necessary that they should have due notice of such appointment before they can take part in the meeting. 1951 Mad W N 432 : 1951-2 Mad L J 19 : 64 Mad L W 571 : 1951-21 Com Cas 210 : AIR 1951 Mad 927 (929) (Pt C) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 76 (2) — Conviction under — Sustainability — Default in holding the annual meeting not wilful.

Where the default in holding the annual meeting was not wilful inasmuch as it was not held owing to the serious illness and death of a brother of the accused who along with another brother held almost all the shares of the company, the accused cannot be convicted under S. 76 (2) of the Companies Act. 52 Cri L J 237 : 1951 A M L J 31 : AIR 1951 Ajmer 39 (2) (Pr 1).

——Ss. 76 (3), 78, 79, 86 — General meeting not convened within period prescribed—Share holders—Right of, to convene meeting—(Companies Act (1956), Ss. 166, 169, 290).

Section 76 (3) is an enabling section. There is no reason why the requisite number of shareholders under S. 78 or 79 (2) would not be entitled to convene an Annual General Meeting, which is overdue and which the Directors have defaulted in convening within the prescribed period. Such a General Meeting may not strictly be characterised as the Annual General Meeting but is nevertheless a meeting in which all that can be done in an Annual General Meeting can be done including the passing of the balance-sheet and appointment of Directors. If an appointment is made its effect would be to ratify the acts of those who purported to act as directors without being lawfully appointed. Only those acts of the directors however would be deemed to be ratified by such retrospective appointment as can be ratified in law and that ratification only binds the principal and the act done by an agent without authority will become binding on the principal after ratification. After appointment retrospectively those acts may become binding on the company.

But where a shareholder gave authority to the directors to sell his shares to recover the debt due from him to the company after taking necessary steps as provided in the Articles and if the sale was effected not by directors but by some unauthorised persons the shareholders' right to repudiate cannot be affected by the company's ratifying the unauthorised acts of persons who purported to act as directors, though in fact they were not. S. 86 does not protect the acts of directors whose office expired, after the termination of office. (Obiter in : AIR 1928 Cal 868, Dissented from). The term 'de facto' directors have been restricted to directors with defective appointment. It does not include a mere usurper without any appointment whatsoever and whose office has terminated. If within the time limited by S. 76 (3), no general meeting is convened, the directors cease to hold the office of directors. Consequently the resolutions passed at the meeting of directors held after the termination of their appointment enforcing the lien for debts on the shares of a shareholder and making demands of payment and giving notice on the shareholder, all these acts are not warranted by law and are illegal. The directors whose office had expired were not competent to convene a General Meeting. In such a case it would be quite competent for five members of the company to convene a meeting under the Articles of Association. This is provided for in S. 79 (2) of the Companies Act. The only other way to convene a General Meeting is to hold a meeting under S. 76 (3) by and under an order of the Court. ILR (1959) 2 Cal 530 : (1960) 30 Com Cas 582: AIR 1959 Cal 715 (735, 736) (Pt G) (Prs 65, 66, 67, 68) (DB).

——Ss. 76 (2) and 133 (3) — Scope—Gist and nature of offence — Sentence — Cr. P. Code, S. 439 — Enhancement of sentence—Application for—Accused's right to question legality of conviction.

It is not correct to say that offences under Ss. 76 and 133 of the Companies Act are only technical ones. The legislature considered these offences to be real offences deserving substantial punishment. The question of the adequacy of the sentence to be awarded in a particular case is left to the discretion of the Court. Such discretion has to be judicially exercised. The Court must be guided by a sense of proportions in fixing the quantum of fine in any particular case. It must bear some reasonable proportion to the upper limit sanctioned by the statute. To disregard that limit altogether and to award only a nominal sentence would have the result of reducing the prosecution itself to a mockery and thus defeating the only object of such penal provisions. In resisting the move for an enhancement of the sentence awarded to the respondents, in the revision they are entitled to request the Court to exercise its revisional jurisdiction under S. 439, Cr. P. Code, and to examine the sustainability of the conviction recorded against them. For every default in complying with the requirement of the respective sections the officers of the company are not liable to be punished. In this respect, a clear distinction is maintained between the company and its officers. As against the company it is enough to prove that there has been a default as contemplated by the section. But as against the officers of the company, something more has to be proved. It must be shown that the officers concerned were knowingly and wilfully, parties to the default and then only will they be liable to be punished. What is significant to note is that any director or any other officer of the company becomes liable to be punished under these sub-sections only if he is knowigngly and wilfully a party to the default contemplated by the respective sections. (L. R. (1925) 1 Ch 40; AIR 1929 Lah 836; AIR 1942 Mad 75, Rel. on.) 1958 Ker L J 52 : 1958 Ker L T 173 : (1958) M L J (Cr) 332 : (1958) 28 Com Cas 255.

——Ss. 76 (2) and 133 (3) — Punishment of the officers of the defaulting company — Evidence of mens rea — (Companies Act (1956), Ss. 168 and 210).

It is clear from sub-s. (2) of S. 76 and sub s. (3) of S. 133 that for every default in complying with the requirements of the respective sections, the officers of the company are not liable to be punished. In this respect a clear distinction is made between the company and its officers. As against the company it is enough to prove that there has been a default as contemplated by the sections. But as against the officers it must be shown that the officer concerned was knowingly and wilfully a party to the default and then only he will be liable to be punished. This qualifying expression 'knowingly and wilfully' has been used deliberately to afford protection to innocent defaulters and to punish only those who are consciously and intentionally committing default. There must be some evidence direct or circumstantial to sustain an inference that they contributed to the default with full consciousness of their responsibility in the matter. 1958 Ker L T 173 : 1955 Ker L J 52 : 1958 MLJ (Cr) 332: (1958) 28 Com Cas 255.

——Ss. 76 (2) and 133 (3)—Sentence—Discretion of Court—Imposition of nominal fine—(Companies Act (1956), Ss. 168 and 210.)

Specific provisions have been made in the Act casting certain duties on the officers of the company. Wilful default in the discharge of these duties has also been made punishable. In the case of offences arising out of default in complying with the provisions of Ss. 76 and 133 there is a clear indication, inasmuch as the sections have provided for a maximum fine of rupees five hundred, that the offences are of a substantial nature, deserving substantial punishments. Although it is in the discretion of the Courts to determine the adequacy of the punishment in any particular case. the Court has to exercise that discretion judicially. By inflicting a nominal fine then the Court should not reduce the prosecution to mockery and defeat the very object of the penal provision 1958 Ker L T 173 : 1958 Ker L J 52 : 1958 Mad LJ (Cr) 332 : (1958) 28 Com Cas 255.

——Ss. 76 and 131—Offences under—Complaint for —Locus standi to make.

With regard to offences under the Companies Act, there is no provision that any offence should not be taken cognizance of unless the complaint is filed by any of the persons mentioned in the Act. In the absence of such a provision, the normal rule, namely, that any person may set the criminal law in motion will apply. No doubt in cases under Companies Act, it has been considered desirable that either the Registrar or Joint Registrar or Officer concerned in dealing with the Act should prefer the complaint. The Regulations framed assigned the duty of making investigations into these matters to the above officers and directing them to file the complaint in such matters. But these regulations do not take away the right of any citizen to file a complaint under the Companies Act. In the absence of a special provision requiring that the complaint should be filed by a particular person, a complaint either by any citizen or a member of the company or by Assistant Registrar will be a valid complaint. 65 Mad L W 679 : (1952) 22 Com C 173 : (1952) 2 M L J 184 : 1953 Cr L J 436 : 1952 Mad W N 841 (2) : AIR 1953 Mad 196 (196) (Pr 4).

——Ss. 76, 32 (3), 131 (1), 133 and 134 — Directors' failure to call general meeting—Offence—Liability.

Where the directors are in default in not calling a general meeting under S. 76 or in not laying the balance-sheet or profit and loss account before such a meeting under S. 131 (1) or in not sending three copies of such balance sheet and profit and loss account to the Registrar under S. 134 (1), Companies Act or in not sending the list of members together with a summary under S. 32 (3) they render themselves liable to the penalties provided by the Act for each and every one of these defaults provided of course that so far as the directors or other officers are concerned, their default is wilful and not inadvertent as distinguished from the default of the company itself which has heen made liable independently of any such requirement and its liability is, therefore, absolute.

The substantial requirement of S. 134 (1) is the sending of a certain number of copies of the balance-sheet and the profit and loss account or the income and expenditure account, as the case may be, to the Registrar and it is there that the true emphasis of the section lies and not on the introductory part of section, namely, after the balance-sheet and profit and loss account (or the income and expenditure account as the case may be) has been laid before the company at a general meeting. The courts should not place an interpretation upon a section which would put a premium on a double default or, permit the evasion of or escape from one default simply because this default was the inevitable consequence of another default, and where both these defaults are punishable in the eye of law and where those responsible for the second default are also responsible for the first. The proper course is to punish the persons guility for both thc defaults and not for one only.

In order that the default should be wilfully and knowingly committed, it need not necessarily be suggestive of dishonesty or fraud on the part of those concerned.

The directors, cannot be allowed to escape the performance of duties by the mere plea that they had no real control over the affairs of the company and therefore they did not wilfully permit the default It is their duty not to be mere passive spectators of what is going on but to see and make the necessary attempt that the statutory requirements are carried out, and where this has not been done, the courts can and would legitimately infer that the defaults though not expressly authorised were still wilfully permitted. 39 Cal W N 1152 and AIR 1948 Cal 42, Rel. on.

Held, that the conviction of the directors for each of their defaults under Ss. 32, 76, 131 (1) and 134 for each of the four years could not be said to be wrong in law because these defaults proceeded from an earlier default under S 76 of the Act. 1960 Raj LW 139 : (1960) 30 Com Cas 523 : ILR (1960) 10 Raj 857 : 1961 (2) Cr L J 416.

——S. 78—Company — Injunction against management.

In an interlocutory application there must be a prima facie case both on facts and law which should justify the grant of an interim injunction restraining company management. That prima facie case should all the more be clearly made in the case where attempt is made to restrain the normal function of a Company according to the decisions of the domestic forum of the Company.

Article 90 of the Articles of Association of the company provided as follows: 'In case of any dispute as to the admission or rejection of any vote, the Chairman shall determine the same and such determination made in good faith shall be final and conclusive'. The plaintiff filed an application for an interlocutory injunction to restrain the company from giving effect to a particular resolution passed at a particular meeting on the ground that the Chairman had wrongly rejected certain votes given by proxy or wrongly accepted such votes.

Held, prima facie unless a case of bad faith is made out, it would be the normal course of the Court to allow the decision of the Chairman to stand as prima facie final until it can be found to be wrong at the trial and decision in the suit. If that principle is once accepted then there is no scope here in this case for grant of an interlocutory injunction on the ground that the Chairman has wrongly rejected certain votes given by proxy or wrongly accepted such votes. SYNOPSIS

1. Scope.
2. Notice of meeting.
3. Right to vote.
4. Proxy.
5. Adjournment.
6. Power of Court to order meeting.

1. Scope.

——S. 79—Principles regulating company meetings.

The Courts have evolved certain well-defined principles which regulate company meetings. Primarily the Articles of Association and the Company Statute provide the matrix of the Company Law on the point, secondly, the Courts are generally reluctant to interfere with the decisions taken at Company meetings, unless there is almost a manifest breach of the articles or the Statute. This is the rule of domestic forum applied to company jurisprudence. The third principle which the Courts have evolved as a corollary of the first two principles, is that prima facie the decision of the Chairman at such company meetings is allowed to stand until it is proved to be in breach of the Articles or Statute. The burden of proving the Chairman's decision to be wrong rests with the party challenging his decision and it is not for those who rely on his decision to bring evidence in the first instance, to show that the Chairman was right. This is the rule of convenience and of practical wisdom. It is of great practical utility. The Chairman by virtue of his position and the nature of his duties, has to decide on the spot all emergent questions that arise at the meeting and it will be mere folly to reduce the prima facie authority of his verdict. The burden of holding and conducting company meetings and recording votes cast therein and for taking decisions at such meetings is the primary responsibility of the company's share-holders and their chosen directors and not of the High Court. ILR (1956) 1 Cal 475 : 58 Cal W N 715 : AIR 1955 Cal 132 (135) (Pt B) (Pr 15).

2. Notice of meeting.

——Ss. 79 (1) (b) and Table A, Reg. 112 — Share-holders of company residing at great distances from company's registered office — Notice of meeting—New Articles proposed — Necessity to send copies of proposed Articles with notice.

Where there is a large body of shareholders who reside at great distances from the registered office of the company, it would not be fair on the part of the company to leave the proposed articles at the registered office and give the shareholders notice of that fact. Printed copies of the proposed new Articles should be sent with the notice. Where this is not done, the notice cannot be held to disclose fully and frankly the facts upon which the shareholders are asked to note. 56 Cal W N 361 : 22 Com Cas 248 : ILR (1954) 1 Cal 185 : AIR 1952 Cal 645 (649) (Pt B) (Pr 22) (DB).

3. Right to vote.

——S. 79 (1)—According to an Article of Association member whose name had not been in the register for continuous period of two months immediately preceding the date of meeting, are not entitled to vote or to be reckoned in a quorum—Article held illegal being contrary to S. 79 (1) (e). (1953) 23 Com Cas 29 : 66 Mad L W 124 : (1953) 1 M L J 346 : ILR (1953) Mad 966 : AIR 1953 Mad 520 (526) (Pt D) (Pr 15) (DB).

——S. 79 (1) (e)—Object of—S. 79 (1) (e) if overrides any provision in articles of company imposing disability on members' right to vote.

Section 79 (1) (e) of the Act must override any provision made in the Articles of the Company. If a share-holder's name is entered in the register of share-holders of the company, he cannot be prevented from enjoying the right to vote on the ground that his name has not been on the register for any specified time, as required by Art. 48 of the Articles of the Company.

Section 79 (1) (e) which was inserted by the amending Act of 1936 was designed to prevent the denial to share-holders duly brought on the register of the full exercise of their rights as share-holders which would include the right to vote. 1951 Mad W N 432 : 64 Mad L W 571 : 1951-21 Com Cas 210 : 1951-2 Mad L J 19 : AIR 1951 Mad 927 (929) (Pt D) (Pr 5) (DB).

—— S. 79 (1) (e)—Adjournment of meeting from time to time — Who are entitled to vote at adjourned meetings.

Where an annual general meeting originally convened for a particular date is adjourned from time to time due to the action of one party or the other, the Court would be justified in directing that only such of the share-holders who were on the list of share-holders on the original date of meeting would be entitled to vote at the meeting to be held on the adjourned date. Such a direction would not contravene the provisions of S. 79 (1) (e). 1951 Mad W N 432 : 1951-2 Mad L J 19 : 64 Mad L W 571 : 1951-21 Com Cas 210 : AIR 1951 Mad 927 (929) (Pt E) (Pr 6) (DB).

4. Proxy.

——S. 79—Proxies—Share-holder having more than one vote can split them in more than one proxy.

The contention that a share-holder holding a number of votes cannot split his votes and give a few to one proxy and others to another proxy cannot be accepted as sound.

The right to vote is to be judged not by the personality but by the shares. If the shares are different, the votes can be different and the holder need not be precluded by any doctrine of convenience or inconvenience or propriety that he cannot vote both 'yes' and 'no' in the same resolution. As owner of the specific property in each specific share he can distribute his votes on the shares he holds in any manner as he chooses. The way he votes cannot take away the legal right in each share carrying the right to vote. 58 Cal W N 715 : ILR (1956) 1 Cal 475 : AIR 1955 Cal 132 (137, 138) (Pt C) (Pr 27).

——S. 79 — Share-holders' right to vote by proxy—Revocation of proxy — Principles — Contract Act (1872), Ss. 203, 204, 205, 209.

Share-holders' right to vote by proxy is recognized by S. 79, subject to conditions and limitations imposed by the Articles of Association. But this right has to be given by the Articles, which form a contract between the company and the share-holders.

A proxy as an agent of the share-holder, as between himself and the principal, is not entitled to act contrary to his instructions in the matter. The relationship brought about between the share-holder and his proxy is that of a principal and agent.

When once the relationship of principal and agent is created by contract, the incidents of that contract of agency are governed and have to be determined by applying the law of contracts. The principal cannot be denied his right to revoke a contract which brought about the relationship of principal and agent. The Articles might make the proxy irrevocable or impose restrictions or circumscribe the limitations within which the power of revocation should be exercised. But all these are matters within the region of contract between the parties and in the absence of anything to the contrary, there is no reason to exclude the right of revocation which is recognised under S. 203 of the Contract Act. There are other limitations imposed by the Contract Act on the exercise of the power of revocation, e g., by Ss. 204, 205, 209. The same principles have to be applied for revocation of proxy by share-holder. If the articles lay down the limitations within which a power to vote by proxy can be exercised, it should be strictly observed. This follows from the fact that the right to vote by proxy is founded on contract. Consequently unless the right of revocation is expressly excluded by the articles the right is governed by the general law of contract of agency. Case law relied. 64 Mad L W 1072 : 1951-21 Com Cas 351 : 1952-1 Mad L J 18 : ILR (1952) Mad 218 : AIR 1952 Mad 515 (521, 522, 523) (Pt B) (Prs 8A, 8B, 11, 11A) (DB).

——S. 79 — Provision in Articles of Association conferring power of revocation in respect of permanent proxy—Whether it can be deemed that such power is excluded in respect of specific proxy — (Maxim—expressio unius est exclusio alterius).

Where one of the Articles of Association expressly confers a specific power of revocation in respect of permanent proxy, it cannot be deemed in the absence of any such provision in respect of specific proxy, that power of revocation is excluded on the maxim expressio unius est exclusio alterius (the express mention of one thing implies the exclusion of another). It is only if power of revocation of a limited nature is recognised in respect of a specific proxy by any article then it would be possible to contend that by reason of the express mention of the limited power any other power is excluded. 64 Mad L W 1072 : 1951-21 Com Cas 351 : 1952-1 Mad L J 18 : ILR (1952) Mad 218 : A I R 1952 Mad 515 (523) (Pt C) (Pr 13) (DB).

——S. 79—Revocation of proxy after their exercise at first poll but before second poll — Result of first poll is not affected—(Contract Act (1872), S. 204).

The power to revoke an authority given to an agent, after the authority has been partially exercised, has been recognised by S. 204 of the Contract Act. The revocation cannot have the effect of invalidating acts and obligations already done in the exercise of that authority as an agent. Where the first poll of the meeting at which the proxies were exercised became final the effect of revocation of the proxies subsequently but before the second poll cannot in any manner affect the declaration of the result of that poll. 64 Mad L W 1072 : 1951-21 Com Cas 351 : 1952-1 Mad L J 18 : ILR (1952) Mad 218 : A I R 1952 Mad 515 (523, 534) (Pt D) (Pr 14) (DB).

——S. 79 — Revocation of proxy without notice to proxy—Effect—(Contract Act (1872), S. 207).

The effect of the want of notice of revocation of proxy to the agent (proxy) does not invalidate the revocation or the termination of the authority of the proxy but makes the principal liable for any damage that results to the agent by reason of such want of notice. 64 Mad L W 1072 : 1951-21 Com Cas 351 : 1952-1 Mad L J 18 : ILR (1952) Mad 218 : AIR 1952 Mad 515 (524) (Pt E) (Pr 15) (DB).

——S. 79—Chairman's decision on question of allowing proxies or not on ground of insufficiency of stamps is binding on him and his successors. (Stamp Act (1899), S. 36).

If the Chairman in the exercise of his powers comes to a decision whether the votes given on proxy which are in question shall be disallowed or not on the ground of sufficiency of stamp and if that decision is not vitiated by fraud or misconduct on the part of the chairman that decision is binding on himself or his successor at a later stage of the same meeting. Under S. 36 of the Stamp Act if the instrument is admitted in evidence overruling the objection concerning stamp duty, such admission cannot be called in question at any stage of the same suit or proceeding on the ground that the instrument has not been duly stamped. No doubt, a chairman is not a person authorised by law or consent of parties to receive evidence within the meaning of S. 35 of the Stamp Act. But there is no reason for not applying the same principle of finality to the ruling of the chairman on the nature of the instrument in dispute. 64 Mad L W 1072 : 1951-21 Com Cas 351 : 1952-1 Mad L J 18 : ILR (1952) Mad 218 : A I R 1952 Mad 515 (524, 525) (Pt F) (Pr 19A) (DB).

——S. 79 — Chairman's power to reject proxies on ground of insufficiency of stamp — No intention to evade payment of stamp duty — Duty of Chairman to refer matter to Collector under S. 31, Stamp Act (Stamp Act (1899), S. 31).

Where a shareholder complies with the requirements of Articles of Association and pays on a proxy in the form prescribed by the Article, stamp duty of two annas under the law as altered on the footing that it is a proxy and not a general power of attorney, the chairman has no option but to accept the proxy even if he comes to a conclusion that the stamp duty was not proper. If the proxies conform to the articles in all respects they cannot be rejected by the chairman. The articles constitute a contract binding on the company and the members in all matters. The chairman is not entitled to go behind the articles and to reject the proxies on the ground that they were not duly stamped.

Where there was no intention on the part of persons holding the proxies to evade the stamp duty when they had acted bona fide and followed the articles of association and paid two annas stamp on each proxy and they also offered that if the objection to the sufficiency of stamps was to be sustained, it would only involve payment of extra stamp duty with penalty which might be fixed by the Collector and that they were prepared to pay it if and when it was decided that it was payable in the present case, the Chairman would be acting unfairly if he were to reject the proxies on the ground of insufficiency of stamp. The fair way would be to refer the matter to the Collector under S. 31 of the Stamp Act and to postpone the declaration of the result of the poll until the decision of the Collector was obtained. Where the proxy contains the specific power as well as the general power, it would be admissible only if the aggregate amount of the duties in respect of two such separable instruments is paid even if both the parts are separable. It is not permissible to dissect the instrument into two parts and use the unobjectionable part in evidence that is to allow only that part of the proxy, for which, there is sufficient stamp. A proxy is a creature of law of agency, though with this difference that under the company law such an agent has to be appointed in a manner as provided thereunder. Therefore, so far as voting by proxy is concerned that can be done on behalf of any person, may it be natural or artificial, so long as that person is in position to appoint proxy as provided in law. ——S. 79—Meeting of Board of Directors—Chairman if can decline to preside.

Where one of the Articles of the Company provides that the Chairman of the Board of Directors should preside only if he is willing he cannot be compelled to preside. There is nothing in law compel him to do that which he is not willing to do. But he is not entitled to stop the metting at his own will and pleasure because he is unwilling to preside. If a meeting is called for a particular purpose of the company, undoubtedly, a person should preside at that meeting, and invariably the constitution of the company provides for the same. It is not open to the Chairman to stop the meeting and dissolve it before the business of the meeting is finished. It is the privilege and the right of the share-holders assembled at the meeting to decide whether they should continue the business of the meeting on that day or adjourn it for a subsequent date. If the Chairman unjustly and without the consent of the shareholders stops the meeting and declares it dissolved, it is perfectly within the powers of the meeting to elect another Chairman and conduct the business remaining unfinished ; but there is no authority in support of the proposition that a Chairman is not entitled to give up his right to preside at a meeting. (1894) 3 Ch. D 159, (1918) 2 Ch D 325, Rel. on. 61 Mad L J 724, Disting.

Where a meeting of shareholders to hold a poll is adjourned to another date without holding the poll, the second meeting held on the adjourned date is the continuation of the first, and if the Chairman of the first meeting declines to preside, the shareholders have a right to elect another chairman and continue the meeting. The function of the chairman would not be merely to supervise the recording of the votes. He is entitled to exercise all the functions of a Chairman at the meeting. 64 Mad L W 1072 : (1951)-21 Com Cas 351 : 1952-1 Mad L J 18 : I L R (1952) Mad 218 : AIR 1952 Mad 515 (519, 520, 521) (Pt A) (Prs 7A, 7C, 8B) (DB).

——S. 79—Adjournment of meeting—Validity.

Where the annual general meeting has been fixed for a particular date, the Court would not be justified in granting an adjournment merely because it has appointed an independent chairman of the meeting. The appointment of independent chairman does not affect the rights of the shareholders in any manner and it is not necessary that they should have due notice of such appointment before they can take part in the meeting. 1951 Mad W N 432 : (1951) 2 Mad L J 19 : 64 Mad L W 571 : (1951) 21 Com Cas 210 : AIR 1951 Mad 927 (929) (Pt C) (Pr 4) (DB).

6. Power of Court to order meeting.

——S. 79 (3) — "Order a meeting to be called" — Power of Court to call meeting — Its jurisdiction indicated—Legislature by giving this power did not intend to empower Court to take over management of Company — Court has to consider whether it has become 'impracticable' to call meeting in manner in which meeting may be called under Articles of Association along with provisions of Companies Act. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal) 1015.

——S. 79 (3)— 'Impracticable' — Meaning — Order of Court directing holding of meeting — When justified.

The term "impracticable" implies that it is impracticable from a reasonable point of view. The Court must take a common sense view of the matter and must act as a prudent person of business. Thus where the calling of a meeting by requisitionists shareholders would lead to endless litigation and where matters might arise for debate and decision which were already the subject matter of suits, the holding of a meeting would be impracticable as it would be most unlikely to lead to any result and would inevitably cause more litigation and confusion and further embitter the feelings between the parties. In such circumstances the Court would be justified in ordering a meeting under S. 79(3). 55 Cal W N 653, Rel. on. (1952) 22 Com Cas 162 : 56 Cal W N 398 : AIR 1953 Cal 355 (357) (Prs 20, 21) (DB).

——S. 79 (3) - Court's power to call meeting when to be exercised.

The word 'impracticable' in S. 79 (3) means impracticable from a reasonable point of view. Where the Court was not satisfied that there was a board of directors validly appointed who could call a meeting in the manner in which a meeting of the company may be called and where meetings held otherwise than under S. 79 would lead to interminable troubles and prejudice the interests of the company.

Held that it would be expedient to make an order under S 79 (3) for calling a meeting of the company. (1951) 21 Com Cas 323 : 55 Cal W N 653.

——S. 79 (3)— Courts' power to order meeting when to be exercised.

The powers under S. 79 (3) should be exercised with caution and only when it is not practicable to call a valid meeting in exercise of the powers given by the articles. The Court would not ordinarily interfere in the domestic management of the Company which must be conducted in accordance with the powers contained in the regulations of the Company. But, where the meeting can be called only by the directors and there is serious doubt and controversy as to who are the directors and where there is possibility that one or other or both the meetings called by the quarrelling groups or directors may be invalid the shareholders should not be exposed to the uncertainties flowing from the situation and the consequent litigation and it should be held that a position has arisen which makes it "impracticable" for the meeting being called in accordance with the articles. S. 79 (3) also contemplates that the Court should exercise its powers where it cannot say with reasonable approach to certainty, or even prima facie that the meeting called in exercise of the powers contained in the regulations will be valid. (1951) 21 Com Cas 290 : 55 Cal W N 646.

——Ss. 79 (3), 76—General meeting of share-holders —Election of director — Whether formal subject — Appointing independent Chairman—Power of Court. See Ibid, S. 76. AIR 1952 Mad 60.

——S. 79 (3)—App'icability.

The section applies whether the impracticability to hold a meeting arises at a stage preliminary to the choice of the chairman or at the stage subsequent to that which is the stage of conducting it. The expression 'to conduct' in the provision of the statute includes the stage prior to the choice of the Chairman also. Thus, where the share-holders who had requisitioned a meeting were unable to hold it because the registered premises were locked the impracticability contemplated by the section arises, though in the matter of assembling of share-holders at the registered office there was no difficulty. SECTION 80.

——S. 80 - Company not incorporated under the Act —Applicability of section.

Obiter : — The word company in S. 80 means a company incorporated under the Indian Companies Act. Section 80 cannot, therefore, apply to a company not incorporated under the Indian Act. But this does not mean that such a company cannot execute a power of attorney for purpose of its representation in another company of which it is a member. A corporation has no body nor a soul and must ex necessitate rei, act through some human agency. ('51 21 I T R 39 : 1951-21 Com Cas 239: 55 Cal W N 237 (DB).

——Ss. 80 and 153 (2) — Meeting to consider compromise Vote in person by representative of creditor company - Validity - Person—If includes corporation—(Companies Act (1956), S. 187) — Companies Act (913), S. 246 Rules under R. 150.)

The word 'person' as understood in its ordinary sense generally implies a natural person and not a person artificial unless there is a provision made for it either expressly or by necessary implication. (1904) 20 T L R 700. What is provided in S. 153 for voting in person in relation to a creditor is confined to such creditors only who are in a position to fulfil that condition and it cannot be denied that one of the essential conditions required under the section for a creditor to vote is that he should be present either in person or by proxy. In a meeting held under S. 153 a corporation cannot vote in person unless there is specific provision made for it. The provision made in S. 80 for a corporation to vote in person is confined to its capacity as a member corporation only and is not in relation to its capacity as a creditor corporation. That means, in the case of a proceeding which is controlled exclusively by the Act of 1913 a creditor corporation, as contemplated under S. 153 of that Act, can vote only by proxy and not in person. Further, even under R. 150 of the Rules made by the Patna High Court under the Act of 1913, the mode of voting that is allowed in the case of a corporation creditor is one by proxy alone and not in person. Held, on facts that the person representing the creditor companies in the meeting held under S. 153, was not entitled in law as laid down in the Act of 1913, and the rules framed thereunder, to vote in person on behalf of the corporation, and as such the votes cast by him in person on their behalf without filing any proxy in the meeting of the unsecured creditors were invalid and inoperative. SECTION 81

——S. 81 (2)—Notice—Validity.

Clause (2) of S. 81 has to be strictly complied with in the matter of issue of notices, as the object of notifying the share-holders thereunder is that they may be able to think over the special resolution to be moved in the light of the memorandum and articles of association of the company. Such notices must make a frank disclosure to the share-holders of facts on which they will be called upon to vote. Such notice has to give clear information of what is proposed to be done, but it need not set out the terms of the specific resolution in all its details. However concealment of any important part thereof therein will invalidate the proceedings The words "to decide the question of subjecting the Bank to voluntary liquidation," in a notice cannot by any stretch of imagination connote that a special resolution was going to be passed at the meeting, voluntarily winding up the Bank: (1915) 1 Ch 503; (1910) 1 Ch 430; (1920) 2 K B 523, Rel. on. To be a director the holding of shares is not a necessary sine qua non. The share-holders may well desire to have other qualifications for a person to be a director, though it may not be a share qualification. The matter is left entirely to the discretion and judgment of the share-holders and hence a special resolution providing for the holding of a fixed deposit of of Rs. 1000 as an additional qualification for a director is entirely intra vires and legal. SECTION 86

——S. 86 — Directors after their disqualification making calls—Validity.

The directors of a company knew that they had not paid the allotment and call moneys, but there was nothing to indicate that the fact that they had thereby disqualified themselves was present to their minds at the time when they allotted the shares and made the calls. There was no defect in their appointment as directors; the only defect was that they continued to act as directors even after their disqualification. There was no suggestion that they acted dishonestly in passing the resolutions of allotment and making the calls. They acted bona fide, oblivious of the fact of their disqualification and there was no evidence of the fact of their disqualification having ever been brought to their minds :

Held, that in view of Art. 181 of the Articles of Association of the Company the language of which was similar to S. 86, the acts of allotting shares and making the first and second calls were valid. ——S. 86—Lien on shares and share scrips — Rights of Company — (Sale of Goods Act (1930), S. 2 (7))— (Companies Act (1956), S. 290.)

The share scrips may not be documents of title. But under the Sale of Goods Act the shares are marketable property and goods as defined in the Sale of Goods Act. The share scrips representing the shares are themselves goods and can be delivered to the share-holders. The company like any other person can have possessory lien with respect to these share scrips. When the Article says that the company will have 'lien and charge available at law and in equity' it means that the company will have lien at law on the share scrips and equitable charge on the shares, if the scrips are not in possession of the company, but in the possession of share-holder. When the Article provides for the sale of shares, subject to lien only, the company will have right to sell only the shares, the scrips of which are in posssession of the company. With respect to shares, subject only to equitable charge, right of the company to sell the shares can only be enforced by a suit. In selling the shares the company will be under an obligation to make over to the purchaser the share scrips. The Companies Act provides for the issue of duplicate scrips only in cases when the share scrips are lost. The article gives no authority to the directors to sell shares which are subject to equitable charge only and the only way to enforce the equitable charge is by instituting a suit. (1960) 30 Com Cas 582 : I L R (1959) 2 Cal 530 : A I R 1959 Cal 715 (729, 730) (Pt F) (Prs 42, 43) (DB).

——S. 86—Lien—Article authorising sale in enforcement of lien—Interpretation—(Companies Act (1956), S. 290).

Article 17 of the Articles of Association was : "17" The directors may sell the shares subject to any such lien at such times and in such manner as they think fit, but no sale shall be made until such time as the moneys in respect of which such lien exists or some part thereof are or is presently payable or the liability or engagement in respect of which such lien exists is liable to be presently fulfilled or discharged and until a demand and notice in writing stating the amount due or specifying the liability or engagement and demanding payment or fulfilment or discharge thereof and giving notice of intention to sell in default shall have been served on such member or the person (if any) entitled by transmission to the shares any default in payment, fulfilment or discharge shall have been made by him or them for seven days after such notice." Held, that the claim for which the shares could be sold should be a claim 'presently payable.' The amount taken from the Company by a share-holder on account from time to time represented a loan and the debt was 'present payable' even before demand. If the company sought to sell the shares for the recovery of a debt which was far in excess of what was actually due by the share-holder, to that extent the notice demanding payment and threatening sale was not in compliance with Art. 17 of the Article and to that extent it was wrongful. The non-compliance of the conditions laid down in Art. 17 affected the validity of the sale. (1960) 30 Com Cas 582 : ILR (1959) 2 Cal 530 : AIR 1959 Cal 715 (736) (Pt II) (Pr 71).

——S. 86—Power of de facto directors to sell shares —(Companies Act (1956), S. 290).

Where the directors are entitled in law to sell the shares held by the plaintiff in enforcement of lien for a debt due to the company by the plaintiff, the sale cannot be challenged on the ground of bad motive of the directors. In a case of recovering debt due to the company by a director the principles laid down in the Supreme Court case in A. I. R. 1950 S. C. 172 : (1950) S. C. J. 337 would be hardly applicable. But where the acts were not of directors 'de jure' but only of directors 'de facto' they are only upheld if the acts are done bona fide in the interest of the Company. If, however, the sole motive was not to benefit the company but to promote the private interest of the de facto directors and deprive the plaintiff of his voting power, then the principles in the Supreme Court case would apply and the acts of the 'de facto' directors would not be upheld by the Court 30 Com Cas 582 : ILR (1959) 2 Cal 530 : A I R 1959 Cal 715 (736, 737, 738) (Pt I) (Prs 72, 73) (DB).

—— S. 86—Sale of shares by de facto directors without authority to enforce lien for debt — Purchaser when protected—(Companies Act (1956), S. 290).

Where the transaction resulting in the sale of shares is illegal in the sense that the directors under the Articles had no power to sell or that the sale had been effected by directors with defective appointment or that the sale was effected without satisfying the conditions laid down in the relevant articles or that one important step in the transaction, namely, the determination of the liability and decision to enforce the lien by sale of the shares and giving notice required was taken by those who at the time had ceased to be directors, then the purchaser of the shares can only protect his title as purchaser at such sale either under S. 86 of the Companies Act, or the Article which says that the purchaser is not bound to see the application of the money or that his title shall not be affected by irregularity or illegality in the proceeding in reference to the sale or by invoking the rule in Turquand's case, (1856) 6 E. and B. 327 quoted in Kanssen's case, 1946 A. C. 459. In each of these cases, however, the sale will not be upheld by the Court unless the party, seeking the assistance of the Court acts 'bona fide'. An innocent purchaser will be protected. But the Court will never come to the assistance of a purchaser who purchases the share without good faith, that is, with notice that the sale was wrongful.

Held, after considering the evidence that the defendant purchaser did not act bona fide in the impugned transaction and that the purchase was not protected by S. 88 of the Companies Act and/or by Art. 19 of the Articles of the company or by the Rule in Turquand's case, (1856) 6 E. and B. 327. ——S. 86, Proviso — Applicability—Suit by director under power given by Board of Directors — Competency.

Per Dua, J. : Section 88 refers to 'discovery of defects' and not discovery of facts. It is the subsequent discovery of defect in the appointment or qualification of a Director which this section seeks to cure for certain purposes, and not the subsequent discovery of complete absence of factual appointment of a Director. Where a resolution by the Board of Directors of a private company appoints one of them as the managing director and authorises him to file a suit against the ex-managing director a suit filed in pursuance of this power will be held to have been instituted by an authorised person unless the power is patently invalid. Section 86 of the Companies Act 1913 covers such a case. (1944) 1 All E R 751, Expl. and Disting. AIR 1936 Lah 321 Disting. A I R 1960 Punj 655 (661, 662) (Pt A) (Prs 17, 19, 21) (DB).

SECTION 86-F

——S. 86-F—Consent of directors — Express consent not necessary—(Companies Act (1956), S 297).

Section 86-F mentions the consent of directors without laying down that the consent must be express consent or that it should be by a resolution, or that it must be given at a meeting of the board of directors, or that the consent should be that of the board of directors. Section 86-F uses the words 'directors' in laying down the requirement of consent. If every single director gives his consent it must be said to be 'consent of directors'. Where every single director does join, the exercise of power must necessarily be held to be an exercise 'by the directors'. Where a company started before the introduction of S. 86-F in the Companies Act, by its very constitution, envisaged that directors must carry on business with the company it must be held that there was implied consent of all the directors to the entry of contracts by other directors with the company. Further, as even after this S. 86-F was introduced in the Act, no steps were taken, either by the general body of shareholders or by the directors, to amend their articles of association so as to omit requirement of every member having to carry on business with the company. The directors, who continued to function after the introduction of S. 86-F, as well as the directors of the company who were elected subsequently when the Board of directors had to be reconstituted must be deemed to have impliedly consented to all the directors continuing to carry on business with the company so as to comply with the requirements of the articles of association. AIR 1959 All 276 (290, 291, 293) (Pt D) (Prs 20, 19).

——S. 86-F -Contract by managing director without consent of directors, if void—Contract Act, S. 23.

The language of S. 86-F does not indicate that a contract effected by a director without the consent of the other directors is illegal. The prohibition is against the director and there is a penalty for any violation of the provisions of the section. This does not mean that the contract is void. In the second place, the party liable to restitution under S. 65 of the Indian Contract Act is the private company with which the contract is entered into and even if the director is a member or director of the private company he is in law different from the Company. Therefore the managing director who has entered into a contract with other private companies of which he is a member, without the consent of other directors, is not liable as the managing director to the company of which he is a managing director for the balance of the price of goods supplied to the private companies. The directors are trustees in a very limited sense. They are liable as trustees for breach of trust, if they misapplied the funds or committed breach of bye laws. In the case of an ordinary commercial company, a director does not commit a breach of trust when he, in the usual course of business sells or purchases goods from another company in which the director had interest. He is only liable for breach of trust when he misapplies the funds and misappropriates any assets. Section 23 of Contract Act does not apply to the case of a contract entered into by the Managing Director of a public company with another private company in which the said Director has interest. The fact that a contract is not enforced by a Court of Equity on equitable ground does not make the contract illegal within S. 23 of the Contract Act. ——S. 86-F—Scope – (Companies Act (1956), S. 293).

It cannot be said that S. 86-F is confined in its application to contracts which are to be performed at some future time, and that it does not apply to an individual sale or purchase, or to a contract which is performed and completed the moment it is entered into. ——Ss. 86-F and 91-A — Contract of director with company—Essentials.

Dua, J.: Considering the object and purpose of enacting S. 86-F, it is clear that the Legislature intended a full disclosure of the facts of particular contracts of a director with the company to the directors so that they may apply their mind to the effects of such contracts on the company and then give or withhold their consent. A general disclosure is not enough. AIR 1960 Punj 655 (663) (Pt B) (Pr 31) (DB).

SECTION 86-H

● — S. 86-H — Agreement to transfer — Section is not violated.

Section gives power to directors to transfer undertaking with consent of company in a general meeting. An agreement only to transfer the undertaking by directors does not violate the section, it being merely tentative, subject to final approval by company at the general meeting.

Held, that even assuming that the agreement was beyond the power of the directors, it could not be said that the subsequent approval of it by the share-holders has been without any knowledge of the defect. The defect was of the want of the directors' power to transfer in view of the provisions of S. 86-H of which the share-holders could not be heard to deny knowledge. There was therefore valid ratification by the share-holders of the action of the directors : (1939) 1 Mad L J 98 ; AIR 1938 P C 284, Distinguished. Shyamapada Chakrabertty v. SECTION 86-I ——S. 86-I — Director — Nomination — Articles of Association — Shareholder having specified number of shares having power to nominate — Nominated Director whether vacates office on shareholder ceasing to hold specified shares—The Companies Act (1 of 1956), S. 283 (1) (a) — English Act, S. 184 (1).

Under Art. 88 of the articles of association of a private company, C, his wife, and children were entitled "to appoint and from time to time to remove or reappoint a director" as long as he or they individually, collectively or jointly held 250 shares first allotted by the company. Article 89 provided that "every nominated director shall be entitled to hold office until requested in writing to retire by the party or parties who appointed him or who are or is entitled to appoint his successor—As and whenever a nominated director vacates office whether upon request aforesaid or by death or otherwise, the company, person or persons whoever is entitled to appoint his successor may appoint another director in his place."

C held 250 such shares and nominated himself under Art. 88. Out ot these shares he transferred 200 shares to persons who did not constitute members of the group mentioned in Art. 88. One of the directors of the company filed a suit for a declaration that C ceased to be a nominated director he having trans ferred 200 of the 250 shares which empowered him to nominate

Held, (i) that just as the grounds on which the office of a director is vacated are specified in S. 86-I, the additional grounds must equally be specified in the articles of association ; (ii) that Article 88 did not imply that the office of the nominated director should be vacated as soon as the appointing authority ceased to hold the shares specified therein; merely because no request could be made by the appointing authority to such nominated director to retire under Art. 89 it did not follow that he had ceased to hold office; (iii) that the expression "or otherwise" in Art. 89 could not incorporate a fresh ground of disqualification which was neither to be found in the articles nor in S. 86 (I) of the Companies Act; and (iv) that, therefore the transfer of these shares did not bring about a vacancy in the office of director held by C. ——S. 87-C — Applicability — Appointment of new Managing Agent in place of deceased Managing Agent after 15-11-1937 — Whether comes within S. 87-C.

Where by a resolution passed on 15-11-1937 by the Board of Directors, the company replaced the deceased Managing Agent by a new Managing Agent as the legal representative in virtue of his own right and in virtue of his nomination as contemplated by the Memorandum and articles of association of the Company and as per the agreement between the Company and the deceased Managing Agent, it cannot be said that the appointment of the Managing Agent was made after the commencement of the Indian Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936, so as to attract the application of S. 87-C, Companies Act. Hence, no special resolution as required by S. 87-C for payment of extra remuneration to the Managing Agent was necessary. Where a company appointed a Managing Agent before the commencement of the Indian Companies Amendment Act of 1936;

Held, that there was nothing illegal in the Managing Agent stipulating for the drawing any remuneration additional to the remuneration fixed under the resolutions passed by the company. Section 87 (c) applied only to the cases of Managing Agents after the commencement of the Amending Act of 1936.

Where the Managing Agent employed another firm to do the work for himself and the company wanted him to refund the remuneration received by him as the Managing Agent because he was prevented during the period of the employment of that other to draw the commission;

Held, that in so far as the company did not enter into any agreement to the effect that the other firm should be paid and not the Managing Agent the company could not claim refund of moneys that he had drawn as commission.

As regards profits earned by the Managing Agent in a separate business of his own carried on by him with the assistance of the company's staff, etc.

Held, that in so far as this was a case of advantage taken by a person in his fiduciary capacity, the law was explicit that he should not keep to himself any gain but give it up to the person to whom he owned fiduciary duties. Hence the amount of profit on his separate business could be claimed by the company. To such a suit no other article of the Limitation Act was applicable and therefore Art. 120 must apply. Article 36 or Art. 90 of the Limitation Act would not apply. 66 L W 283 : (1953) 1 M L J 577 : (1953) 23 Com Cas 107 : ILR (1953) Mad 1097: AIR 1953 Mad 694 (695, 696) (Pts A, B, C) (Prs 5, 7) (DB).

——Ss. 87-C and 270 (1) — Scope of — Managing agency agreement — Provision both for a specified amount as office allowance and a remuneration — Validity — Termination of managing agency before term by reason of winding up of company—Managing agent's right to damages in respect of office allowance and remuneration which he might have earned for remainder of term.

A managing agency agreement of a company which provides both for an office allowance and a remuneration is quite in accordance with the statutory provision in S. 87-A of the Companies Act. It cannot be said that the amount expressly stated to be payable as office allowance is in the nature of a minimum remuneration. The minimum payment contemplated in S. 270 (1) of the Companies Act is something different from the office allowance.

When a specific sum is mentioned as the office allowance payable there is no reason why it should not be held to be "defined." It is not necessary that to be "defined" it should be described in detail for example by specifying the number of clerks, peons, attenders, etc.

Under S. 87-B (f) the removal of a managing agent shall not be valid unless approved by the company resolution at a general meeting of the company.

A mere resolution for suspending the managing agency will not have the effect of terminating the agency and where the directors of the company wrongfully prevented the managing agent from being in charge of the company the managing agent is not disentitled to the office allowance provided for in the agreement during the period the managing agent was prevented from being in charge of the company (in this case up to the date of the winding up of the company).

In a case when the managing agency of a company is agreed to be for a period of twenty years a condition that the business shall continue to be carried on during the period named is not to be implied. Where the company has been compelled to close down its business by reason of its winding up and because of it the managing agency has come to an end it cannot be inferred as an implied term of the agreement that the company is bound to carry on business for a period of twenty years. The managing agent in such circumstances cannot be heard to say that he must be paid what he might have earned if the company had continued to carry on business for the full term of twenty years. The same consideration must also apply to the claim for office allowance for such period. 65 L W 818: (1952) 22 Com Cas 217 : (1952) 2 M L J 378 : ILR (1953) Mad 200 : AIR 1953 Mad 197 (199) (Pt A) (Pr 7) (DB).

● ——S. 87-C — 'Net profits' — Computation of.

The managing agents of the assessee company who were appointed on 9-4-36 were to be paid remuneration in accordance with the revised Art. 83 of the Articles of Association of the company which provided inter alia, "The remuneration of the managing agents shall be an office allowance of rupees 100 per mensem plus 15 per cent. of the 'net profits' of the company, after deducting interest on debentures and other loans but before taking anything to depreciation, reserves. or other special accounts as the Directors may from time to time sanction."

Held, that in computing net profits of the company upon which commission was to be paid to the managing agents as provided by the managing agency agreement read with the Revised Art. 83 of the Articles of Association of the assessee-company excess profits tax was not to be deducted, though S. 87-C, Companies Act, 1913, did not govern the case. SECTION 87-D

——S. 87-D (3) — Liability under — (Indore Companies Act, S. 87D).

Under sub-s. (3) of S. 87-D the only person who can be punished is the Director of the Company who is a party to the making of the loan or giving of the guarantee. ——S. 87-D — Guaranteeing of loan — Meaning of — (Indore Companies Act, S. 87D) — (Contract Act (1872), S. 126).

The word "guarantee" has acquired a technical meaning and the legislature was aware of it. The essence of guarantee is that a guarantor agrees to discharge his liability only in one event i.e., when the principal debtor fails in his duty. In other words, a guarantee pre-supposes the existence of a principal debtor and if in any contract there never was at any time another person who can be properly described as "the principal debtor" in respect of whose default a guarantee can be given, there cannot be said to have been any "guarantee" either in its technical meaning or in its ordinary meaning. So a promissory note executed jointly by a company and its Managing Agents does not come within the purview of S. 87D. 1953 Cri L J 253 : (1953) 23 Com Cas 201 : AIR 1953 Madh B 26 (27) (Pt C) (Pr 11) (DB).

It is well established that directors are, in the eye of law, agents of the company for which they act, and the general principles of the law of principal and agent regulate in most respects the relationship of the company and its directors. Hence, where directors make a contract in the name of or purporting to bind the company, it is the company—the principal—which is liable on it, not the directors; they are not personally liable unless it appears that they undertook personal liability by contracting in their own names, except in cases where under the law of principal and agent or under the provisions of the Companies Act they are made personally liable. The same principles apply to managing directors and managing agents. (1963) 2 Comp L J 61 : (1963) 2 Andh W R 112.

——S. 89 — Scope and applicability — Section cannot be invoked by company against its bank for making payment on cheques issued by managing agency of company.

Before a company can be bound by a negotiable instrument, one of the essential conditions is that the instrument on its face must show that it has been drawn, made, accepted or endorsed by the company. This may be done either by showing the name of the company itself on the instrument, or by the statement of the person making the instrument that he is doing so on behalf of the company. Whenever a negotiable instrument is issued without complying with the requirement, it would not bind the company and cannot be enforced against it. The principle enunciated by S. 89 cannot be extended to a claim made by a company against its bank on the ground that the cheque which the bank accepted and honoured was defective in that it did not comply with the requirements of S. 89 and could not have been enforced against it. ——S. 89 — Principle of — Liability of company in respect of negotiable instrument — When arises — (Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), S. 27).

The fundamental principle underlying the law of negotiable instruments is that as a negotiable instrument passes from hand to hand, persons dealing with it should have no doubt as to who is liable upon the negotiable instrument, and although the same principle is enunciated in S. 27, Negotiable Instruments Act, S. 89, Companies Act, emphasises that principle and makes it clear that a company will not be bound in its corporate capacity in respect of a negotiable instrument unless that negotiable instrument on the face of it and according to its tenor makes it clear that it is a negotiable instrument made, drawn or endorsed by the company itself. 57 Bom L R 1039 : I L R (1955) Bom 1072 : (1955) 25 Com Cas 479 : AIR 1956 Bom 57 (58, 59) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 89 — Pronote in favour of Company — Endorsement by Branch Manager — Presumption and onus of proof — (Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), S. 118) — (Companies Act (1956), S. 47).

The plaintiff, an endorsee of a promissory note executed by the defendants in favour of a Company sued on the basis of that note impleading as defendant the Manager of the Branch of the Company who had endorsed the note in his favour. Under the article of association of the Company the Managing Director of the Company had authority to endorse or negotiate any bill of exchange, promissory note, etc., executed in favour of the Company.

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to assume that the Manager of the branch had authority to assign the pronote in question within the meaning of S. 89, Companies Act. Under S. 118, Negotiable Instruments Act, there is a presumption that the holder of a negotiable instrument is a holder in due course. It was for the defendants to establish that the Branch Manager had no authority to endorse the note and that the plaintiff was not a holder in due course (1921) 1 K B 77, Rel. on. ——S. 91-A — Object of — Conflict between personal interest and duty avoided — (Companies Act (1956), S. 299).

The object of S. 91-A is to secure that there shall be no conflict between the personal interest of each of the directors and their duty towards the company without the nature of that interest being disclosed to the directors and the shareholders. When there is a possibility of such a conflict, by a director having personal interest in any contract or arrangement entered into by the company, S. 91-A provides for its disclosure to the other directors. Thus the general rule of law that directors shall not make a profit out of the contracts by the company without the knowledge of the co-directors and the shareholders is statutorily enforced and if there is a violation, besides the common law obligation to account to the company for these profits, there is a penalty superimposed by S. 91 A (2). 69 Mad L W 774:(1956) 2 Mad L J 590: 1957 Cri L J 69 : (1957) 27 Com Cas 77 : ILR (1957) Mad 665 : AIR 1957 Mad 4 (6) (Pt B) (Pr 7).

——S. 91-A—Duty of director — (Companies Act (1956), S. 299).

A director being in a fiduciary relation to the company, he is always expected to guard the company's interest and surely not to utilise the position and knowledge possessed by him in virtue of his office to the detriment of the company's intertest and for his personal advantage. A corporate body can only act by agents and it is of course the duty of those agents so as to act as best to promote the interests of the corporation whose affairs they are conducting. Such agents have duties to discharge of a fiduciary nature towards their principal. And it is rule of universal application, that no one, having such duties to discharge, shall be allowed to enter into engagements in which he has or can have, a personal interest conflicting, or which may conflict, with the interest of those whom he is bound to protect 27 Com Cas 340 : AIR 1956 Pepsu 89 (92, 93) (Pt D) (Pr 10).

ILR (1964) 14 Raj 135.

● ——S 91-B—Scope and object of—Board meeting—Voting by interested director, if can invalidate the contract.

A director of a company stands in a fiduciary position towards the company and is bound to protect its interest. He must not place himself in a position in which his personal interest conflicts with his duty. He must not vote as a director on any contract or arrangement in which he is directly or indirectly interested, unless authorised by the company's articles. In case he votes in such a case, his vote would not be counted. If an interested director votes and without his vote being counted there is no quorum, the meeting would be irregular, and the contract sanctioned at such meeting would be voidable by the company against the director and any other contracting party who has notice of the irregularity. The company may, however, waive the irregularity and affirm the transaction. (1904) 1 Ch 32 and (1914) 2 Ch. 488, Appld.

This rule of equity is embodied in S. 91-B, in the form of a statutory provision. The effect of S. 91-B is that the vote of the interested director has to be excluded. If, as a result of such exclusion there is no quorum, the resolution sanctioning the contract is irregular. The contract becomes liable to be avoided by the company against the directors and any other contracting party having notice of the irregularity. The object of S. 91-B is to protect the company; and the company may, if it chooses, waive the irregularity and affirm the contract. AIR 1938 P C 159, Approved. Where one of the directors of a banking company, who was interested in the particular transaction of a business of the board meeting, was not entitled to vote on the allotment and after exclusion of his vote there was no quorum, the allotment made at the meeting was irregular and the company was entitled to avoid the same. Instead of avoiding the allotment, if the company had chosen to affirm it, the allotment would be valid and binding on the allottees. A I R 1961 Bom 252, Affirmed. Narayandas Shreeram Samani v. ——S. 91-B — Arrangement — General scheme not creating interest of any director at time of passing—Effect of—(Companies Act (1956) S. 300).

The word 'arrangement' in S. 91-B, does not cover a general scheme of the type under which at the time when the scheme is approved by the board of directors no rights or liabilities accrue or are incurred by the members of the company, the directors or the company itself. The word 'arrangement' as used in the section is intended to cover such transactions in which a director at once becomes interested, so that he either acquires some rights as a result of it or incurs some liabilities as a result of it. ——S. 91-B (3) — Applicability and scope — Private company—Voting on Director's contract—Quorum—S. 91-B forbids Director to vote on any contract in which he is directly or otherwise concerned or interested—His presence will not form part of quorum—These provisions do not apply to private company when there is no provision in Articles of Association in this respect. AIR 1955 N U C (All) 3576.

——S. 91-B—Scope—Contract entered into in breach of provisions—Validity.

Though under S. 91-B (1) the presence of a director acting in breach of the provisions of the sub-section is not to be counted for the purpose of forming a quorum at the time of vote at the meeting the contract entered into in such meeting is not void ab initio. The fact that sub-S. (2) provides a penalty cannot, by itself, make the contract void. It would be voidable at the instance of the Company and not the Director. A resolution allotting certain shares to the defaulting director passed at such meeting is not void and would be binding on such director. Further the the defaulting director being himself a party to the resolution and being primarily responsible for committing the illegality, cannot be allowed to say that the allotment is bad and not effective. Even on general principles the defaulting director cannot be allowed to plead his own default, for avoiding the allotment because he subsequently finds it onerous. The expression "interest in an arrangement", in S. 91-B (1) though somewhat elastic, must in the context receive the interpretation that it must be of such a nature as to involve a conflict between interest and duty of the same type as would arise in the case of personal interest in the contracts of the company. It is this conflict between the personal or self-interest of the director and his duty to the company to render independent and unbiassed advice, that is the mischief, which these provisions are intended to remedy. Viewed thus, it would be clear that the mere carrying out the duties of a director would not amount to "being concerned in any contract or arrangement" within S. 91-A or S. 91-B. Thus where the Board of three directors managing a company passes a resolution authorising any one of the two directors named therein to operate on the bank account of the company the resolution constitutes only a delegation of the power of the board to certain of their members and there is no element of personal interest involved in it so as to give room for any conflict between interest and duty; and therefore there is no violation of S. 91-B in voting thereon by the directors so authorised thereby 69 Mad L W 774 : (1956) 2 Mad L J 590: 1957 Cri L J 69: (1957) 27 Com Cas 77: ILR (1957) Mad 665 : A I R 1957 Mad 4 (7, 8) (Pt C) (Prs 14, 15).

SECTION 96.

——Ss. 96, 98, 101 and 102 — Scope — Allotment of shares in contravention of S. 96 (2) and S. 98 — Effect.

Section 96 is only a provision for the due compliance with certain conditions to be observed by the management in floating public limited company, and has no bearing on the contractual relationship between the intending share-holder and the company. The only consequence which S. 96 (2) contemplates is a penalty on the offending official.

A contract for the allotment of shares is concluded between the applicant and the company by the tender of the application along with the subscription and allotment of shares irrespective of the fact that the company has not issued a prospectus or a statement in lieu of prospectus in contravention of the express provisions of S. 98. The very fact that S. 102 speaks of voidable contract clearly shows that a contract can be completed despite the provisions of Ss. 98 and 101. The mere fact that the Legislature has not included S. 96 in S. 102 cannot lead to the inference that a contract in contravention of S. 96 (2) is deemed to be void, because S 96 itself has no application whatever to the formation of a contract. 54 Bom L R 777 : (1953) 23 Com Cas 124 : A I R 1953 Bom 112 (116, 117) (Pt A) (Pr 23).

The term 'promoter' is not a term of law but of business usefully summing up in a single word a number of business operations familiar to commercial world by which a company is generally brought into existence. It is a question of fact whether or not a person is a promoter, and any person who undertakes to take part in forming a company or who, with regard to a proposed or newly formed company, undertakes a part in raising capital for it, is prima facie a promoter of the company, for he has taken part in setting a going company formed with reference to a given object, and a person may be a promoter even if he has taken a comparatively minor part in the promotion proceedings. Clerks and employees of a person engaged in the promotion are not thereby themselves promoters, but if they in fact take part, outside their duties as such clerk or employee, in the promotion, they will themselves be promoters. ——S. 101, Sch. 1, Regs. 26, 28 — Forfeiture of shares — Forfeiture is treated strictly by Courts — Slight irregularity is fatal — Allotment cancelled after it is communicated to share-holder — Subsequent allotment and non-payment of monies due thereunder cannot be made basis for notice of forfeiture — Suit for recovery of amount of shares forfeited not maintainable — Allotment made after unreasonable period — Suit for recovery of amount of shares not maintainable.

Once there is forfeiture of shares the only liability which the shareholder would have to pay the monies would arise by reason of the articles of association, and the articles commonly provide that where a share has been forfeited the member shall be liable for payment of the call with interest, and this creates a new obligation which can be enforced by action at law. Forfeiture is treated very strictly by the Courts, and the directors seeking to enforce it must exactly pursue the course of procedure marked out by the articles. A slight irregularity is as fatal as the greatest. Thus, if the call, in respect of which the forfeiture is made, is not validly made or if the notice on which the forfeiture is founded is inaccurate in requiring payment of interest from a wrong date e.g., the date of the call instead of the date appointed for payment, the forfeiture may be held invalid. An allotment of shares should be made within a reasonable time and applicant is not bound to accept the allotment after the lapse of a reasonable time. Where the allotment is made, almost 18 months after the date of the application, it cannot be argued that this lapse of time is not unreasonable. Once an allotment is made it is not competent to the company to cancel it by any means whatever.

Where an allotment is cancelled after it is made and communicated to the shareholder, it is not competent to the company to pass a second resolution allotting the shares to the shareholder and the subsequent allotment and the non-payment of the monies due thereunder cannot be made the foundation of any notice for forfeiture which can validly be addressed by the company to the shareholder and such invalid notice cannot be made the basis of a valid resolution of forfeiture. No fresh cause in such a case therefore arises to the company which can be made the basis of a suit for recovery of the amount of the shares with interest. So also where the allotment is made after unreasonable period, the suit would not be maintainable: AIR 1934 Bom 97, Rel. on. 51 Bom L R 1012 : ILR (1950) Bom 192 : AIR 1950 Bom 149 (152) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

——S. 101—Allotment of shares — Specific performance — Suit by company brought after great delay —Court in its discretion would not decree specific performance — Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 22.

The Court has jurisdiction to decree specific performance of a contract by a person to take, or by a company to allot, shares but the matter is one of judicial discretion. Where the suit by the company is brought after great delay the Court in its discretion would not decree specific performance though the suit is within limitation. 51 Bom L R 1012 : ILR (1950) Bom 192 : AIR 1950 Bom 149 (155) (Pt C) (Pr 13).

——Ss. 101, 30 and Table A, Regs. 75 and 87—Allotment of shares — Meeting of directors — Necessity of acceptance of offer to take shares.

The Directors cannot think without a meeting. A company is entitled to the benefit of the "combined wisdom" of the Directors in meeting, unless the articles provide for transacting the business by a resolution in writing circulated to the Directors without a meeting. However, in the circumstances of a case the theory of "combined wisdom" may not be rigidly applied. (1889) 42 Ch. D 160 (167) and (1871) 12 Eq 246 (258), Rel. on.

In pursuance of the resolution of the plaintiff company, its managing director sent an application to the defendant company offering to transfer 14 buses along with three routes to the defendant company, and to take shares as a member. This application was considered by the Directors of the defendant company as appeared from the endorsement made on the application accepting the offer though there was no record of any meeting of the Board of Directors.

Held, (i) that though the minutes book of the defendant company did not record any meeting of the Board of Directors there was no evidence that when all of them signed the acceptance on the same day, they did not consult each other; and (ii) that it was difficult to reject the acceptance by the directors on the technical ground that there was no record of any meeting in the minutes book of the company. ——S. 101 — Scope — Executory contract to take shares—Validity.

The legal possibility of a valid executory contract for allotment of shares is recognised, provided there is an offer to take up shares which is communicated to and is accepted by or on behalf of the company. An executory contract to take up shares may be brought into existence in the same manner and subject to the same principles as under the Contract Act. If he adopts those steps within a month from the date of the statutory meeting, a winding up order made during that period will not affect his rights. But if he does not take any steps within that period, then a winding up order will debar him from coming to Court for rectification of the register, because by that time the rights of third parties have come into existence and they cannot be defeated at the instance of a shareholder to whom it was open to come to Court with promptitude and who did not choose to do so. 55 Bom L R 473 : (1953) 23 Com Cas 322 : ILR (1954) Bom 1 : AIR 1953 Bom 417 (418, 419, 420) (Pt B) (Prs 7, 8, 10).

——S. 103 (3)—Provisional contract—Meaning—Pre-incorporation expenses—Contract Act (1872), S. 70.

The word "provisional" in S. 103 (3) means that the contract made by a Company is to be read as if it contained a provision that it shall not be binding on the Company unless and until the Company became entitled to commence business. The section applies to all the contracts of a Company whether preliminary or final or in the course of carrying on its business. The Company is not, therefore, liable for costs and expenses incurred in respect of its formation and promotion and in the case of a Company which never commenced its business, also for the expenses such as stamp and registration fees postal and other charges and publicity and travelling expenses incurred even after incorporation : (1906) 2 Ch. 390, Rel. on.

Moreover, as the statute prohibits a Company from making a binding contract before the commencement of its business no implication of a promise to pay can be made in respect of the expenses incurred before its incorporation. The expenses of a Company which had never become entitled to commence its business cannot be said to be for its benefit and hence cannot be recovered under S. 70, Contract Act. 54 Cal W N 157: AIR 1950 Cal 491 (492, 493)(Prs 12, 13, 15, 16).

offence — Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 190 (1) (a) and 200 (aa).

The Registrar of companies filed complaints against the petitioner who was director of certain companies on the ground that he had filed false returns and for failure to file returns of allotment of shares. The complaints were filed on receiving information from the allottees of shares. The Registrar did not afford any opportunity to the petitioner to explain the allegations against him.

Held, that there was nothing in the Criminal Procedure Code which barred the Magistrate from taking cognizance of the offence. Section 190 (1) (a), Criminal Procedure Code, empowers a Magistrate to take cognizance of an offence upon receipt of a complaint of facts which constitute such offence. Under S. 200 (aa), Criminal Procedure Code, since the complaints had been preferred by the Registrar as a public servant acting or purporting to act in the discharge of his official duties, there was no need to examine the complainant on oath before the Magistrate took cognizance of the offence under S. 190 (1) (a), Criminal Procedure Code. The failure to afford opportunity to the petitioner to explain did not affect the exercise of the jurisdiction of the Magistrate.

There is nothing in S. 141A read with S. 137 among the other provisions of the Indian Companies Act, 1913 which either in express terms or by necessary intendment forbade the Registrar from preferring a complaint to a Court of competent jurisdiction that the petitioner was liable to be punished under S. 282 of the Act. Under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, cognizance of an offence punishable under S. 282 could be taken by a Magistrate on a complaint by a shareholder without recourse to the machinery provided by S. 137 and S. 141A of the Act. That the complaint was by the Registrar, made no difference to the question, whether S. 141A barred the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to take cognizance of an offence except when proceedings were initiated by the authorities specified under S. 141A. Section 141A was an enabling provision, permissive in its scope. It did not prohibit anything else being done. It was not necessary for the Registrar to hold a preliminary investigation and report the matter to the Central Government under section 137 (5) for further investigation.

When the Registrar preferred complaints to the Magistrate against the petitioner, the Registrar did not contravene any provisions of the Act. What he did was not illegal. The proceedings before the Magistrate were validly launched. The Magistrate had jurisdiction to take cognisance of the offences alleged to have been committed by the petitioner. The proceedings were lawful. They were not liable to be quashed. (1940) 10 Com Cas 141 and (1942) 12 Com Cas 51, Rel. on. ('58) 28 Com Cas 106 (Mad).

When a company is in the process of being wound up, the liability of the members is ex lege and not ex contractu : in other words whatever liability there was under any contract, whether void or voidable, terminates and the liability thereafter when the process of winding up starts, becomes a statutory liability as enjoined by S. 156 of the Act. This statutory liability attaches by reason of the fact that the person is a member of the company. Where the appellant was shown as a member of the company in the register of members maintained by the company, his statutory liability to contribute under S. 156 arises, although the allotment of discount shares to him did not fulfil the requirements of S. 105A. Where the appellant did not apply for getting his name struck off from the register when the winding up commenced, he is not entitled to raise any objection about the invalidity of the allotment, because the irregularities in the process of allotment, if any, are no answer to the liability which commences after the winding up and which is an ex lege obligation. A transferor of a certain number of shares who being the legal owner of those shares the beneficial interest of which vests in the cestui que trust (the transferee), is not liable for all the payments and obligations attaching to the new issue of shares. He is not bound to act in both respects for the benefit of the cestui que trust. He is not under a duty, when so instructed by his beneficiary, to make an application for the new issue of shares offered under the provisions of S. 105-C and obtain them in his name by making the necessary payments and by incurring the consequential obligations. Thus, the obligation of a transferor of a certain number of shares as a trustee does not extend also in respect of the right to acquire further shares issued by the company on behalf of his cestui que trust by putting himself on the register of shareholders in respect of the new shares regarding which he may have to incur fresh liabilities and obligations which were not existing at the time when he made the transfer. A receiver appointed in the suit cannot acquire the newly issued shares in his name. That privilege is conferred, by section 105-C only on a person whose name is on the register of members. ● ——S. 105-C – Object — Time of issuing further shares — Discretion of directors — Interference by Court.

The object of the section is to prevent discrimination amongst share-holders and prevent the directors from offering shares to outsiders before they are offered to the sbare-holders. So long as these two requirements are complied with, the action of the directors in selecting the time when they will issue the shares as also the proportion in which they should be issued is a matter left to their discretion and it is not the province of the Court to interfere with the exercise of that discretion. This is of course subject to the general exception that the directors are not to act against the interest of the company or mala fide.

A company was incorporated with an authorised capital of Rs 10 lakhs divided into 10,000 shares out of which 5404 were subscribed by 1945. In February 1945 the directors of the company issued by a resolution the remaining shares and offered them to the existing share-holders in the ratio of 4 to 5, as the shares of the company were held in multiples of five to a larger extent than in any other multiple. The result of fixing this ratio was that 272 shares remained outside the offer. In whatever other proportion the shares were offered still a few shares were bound to remain unoffered.

Held (Per Kania C. J., Das and Mukherjea JJ.) — That on literal construction of the section the directors had not committed any breach of the terms of S. 105C and, therefore, the issue and offer of the further shares could not be held to be illegal.

Per Mahajan J. — On liberal interpretation of S. 105C, it must be held that the resolution of the directors substantially complied with the provisions of the section and, therefore, the issue of further shares did not contravene the section. ● ——S. 105-C—Issue of further shares—Company in need of funds — Another motive to prevent strangers from intruding into affairs of company — Issue of shares, if bona fide.

It is well established that directors of a company are in a fiduciary position vis-a-vis the company and must exercise their power for the benefit of the company. If the power to issue further shares is exercised by the directors not for the benefit of the company but simply and solely for their personal aggrandisement and to the detriment of the company, the Court will interfere and prevent the directors from doing so. The very basis of the Court's interference in such a case is the existence of the relationship of a trustee and of cestui que trust as between the directors and the company. If the directors exercise the power for the benefit of the company and at the same time they have a subsidiary motive which in no way affects the company or its interests or the existing share-holders then the very basis of interference of the Court is absent.

Where a company, being in need of funds, its directors decided to issue further shares and, in doing so, the directors also had another motive, namely, to prevent a certain group, who were strangers to the company, from intruding into its affairs so as to be able to assume a controlling hand in its management for their own purposes rather than for the benefit of the company :

Held (1) that the conduct of the directors could not be judged on the basis of any assumed fiduciary relationship existing between them and the group, that the directors owed no duty to the group and therefore, the motive to exclude the group could not be said to be mala fide per se.

(2) that, assuming that the motive to exclude the group was a bad motive, it did not prejudicially affect the company or the existing share-holders and the presence of such further motive could not vitiate the good motive of finding the necessary funds for the company.

(3) that, therefore, the issue of further shares was bona fide and not illegal or void Nanalal v. Bombay Life Assurance Co., Ltd., 1950 S C J 337 : 52 Bom L R 745 : 20 Com Cas 179 : 1950 S C R 391 : A I R 1950 S C 172 (183, 185) (Pt B) (Prs 42, 50).

● ——S. 105-C – Section, when applies.

The section is intended to cover a case where the directors decide to increase the capital by issuing further shares within the authorised limit, for it is only within that limit that the directors can decide to issue further shares, unless they are precluded from doing even that by the regulations of the company. Therefore the section becomes applicable only when the directors decide to increase capital within the authorised limit by the issue of further shares. 1950 S C J 337 : 52 Bom L R 745 : 20 Com Cas 179 : 1950 S C R 391 : AIR 1950 S C 172 (185) (Pt C) (Pr 54).

● ——S. 105-C — Construction — Section, if should be liberally construed.

Per Das J., Mukherjea J. concurring — It is impossible to construe S. 105C in the light of Regn. 42 in Sch. I, Table A of the Act The cardinal rule of interpretation of statutes is to construe its provisions literally and grammatically giving the words their ordinary and natural meaning It is only when such a construction leads to an obvious absurdity which the Legislature cannot be supposed to have intended that the Court in interpreting the section may introduce words to give effect to what it conceives to be the true intention of the Legislature. It is not any and every inconvenience that justifies adoption of this extreme rule of construction Section 105C literally construed is quite intelligible and may easily be applied to many cases where the further shares issued bear a uniform and round proportion. Merely because a literal construction of the section leads to inconvenient result in a particular case cannot justify the reading of the words "as nearly as circumstances admit" in the section so as to give business efficacy to it. Therefore, on a strictly literal construction of the section the directors must perforce offer all the further shares to the share-holders in proportion to their respective holdings.

Per Mahajan J. — Where the language of a statute in its ordinary meaning and grammatical construction leads to a manifest contradiction of the apparent purpose of the enactment, or to some inconvenience or absurdity, hardship or injustice, presumably not intended, a construction may be put upon it which modifies the meaning of the words, and even the structure of the sentence. Therefore, S. 105C when it says "such shares shall be offered to the members" should be construed liberally and not literally, as such an interpretation would make the section workable and would not in any way affect its intent and purpose, the phrase, "such shares" meaning those shares which admit of being so offered in a business-like way. Nanalal v. Bombay Life Assurance Co., Ltd. 1950 S C J 337 : 52 Bom L R 745 : 20 Com Cas 179 : 1950 S C R 391 : AIR 1950 S C 172 (187, 188) (Pt D) (Prs 59, 60, 61).

——S. 105C—Company issuing new shares—Duty of shareholder who has sold his shares but is still on register of company, towards purchaser pointed out — Renunciation form and application form for new shares — Distinction pointed out — Duty of shareholder towards purchaser, who is in position of cestui que trustee, pointed out.

It is well established that a shareholder who has sold his shares and continues to be on the register of the company is a constructive trustee for the purchaser of these shares with regard to the dividends that he receives on the shares and that he is also bound to carry out the directions of the purchaser with regard to any voting that might take place at any meeting of the company. The shareholder is not only a trustee with regard to these two specific rights, but he is also a trustee with regard to any other right that may attach to the shares which he has sold to the purchaser. In respect of any accretion to the shares by way of bonus or any right which the company may confer upon the holder of shares which he has sold the shareholder is in law constituted a trustee for his cestui que trust, the purchaser.

When a company resolves to issue new shares and supplies to a shareholder who has sold his shares but continues to be on the register of the company, with a form of a letter of renunciation and a form of an application for shares, it is necessary to understand and appreciate the very vital distinction between a letter of renunciation and an application for shares by the shareholder himself. If the shareholder were to apply for shares in respect of these shares which he had already sold, he would be put on the register of the company, and he would be a trustee for his purchaser in respect of the dividends that he would reeeive on these shares. In the case of his executing a letter of renunciation, the position would be different where the directors reserve the right in their absolute and uncontrolled discretion to accept or refuse any application for shares made by a person in whose favour the shareholder might renounce his rights to the whole or any of the shares which he was entitled to have allotted to him in terms of the letter. Therefore, if in such a case the shareholder executes the letter of renunciation in favour of the purchaser, the purchaser's right would be by no means as certain and positive as his right would be if the shareholder applies for the shares in his own name, because having sent this letter he may never get the company to recognise him as a shareholder, and if the company refuses to recognise him as a shareholder, the letter of renunciation would be nothing else than a scrap of paper, and, therefore, it would not be correct to say that the only right in respect of which the shareholder is a trustee for his purchaser is the right of transferring to him the letter of renunciation. The more substantive and the more positive right would be actually to obtain the shares to which the shareholder is entitled by reason of his holding and to hold those shares as a trustee for the purchaser. 51 Bom L R 529 : AIR 1950 Bom 76 (80) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 105C—Company cannot deal with new shares offered to shareholders till the expiry of statutory period of the notice.

As to what the rights of a shareholder and what the rights of a company are when there is a new issue of shares is to be determined by a true interpretation of S. 105C. This is new section which has been introduced into the Act, and there is no parallel to be found in the English Companies Act. Section 105-C makes it incumbent upon the directors when they decide upon increasing the capital of the company to offer the further shares to be issued by them to the members in proportion to the existing shares held by each member and such an offer is to be made by a notice specifying the number of shares to which the member is entitled and limiting the time within which the offer if not accepted, is to be deemed to be declined. After the expiration of such time or on receipt of an intimation from the member to whom such notice is given that he declines to accept the shares offered, the directors may dispose of the same in such manner as they think most beneficial to the company. But it is important to note that the statutory right given to the shareholder to acquire the new shares continues till the time limited has expired and that right can only be lost if he declines to accept the shares prior to the expiry of the time limit. The statutory right does not expire when the shareholder acquires only part of the new shares, but continues till the time limited by notice and the shareholder may again acquire the remaining shares within the time limited. The shareholder who has sold his shares but is still on the registers of the company, becomes a trustee for the purchaser as regards new shares not applied for by him. 51 Bom L R 529 : AIR 1950 Bom 76 (80, 81) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (DB).

Regulation 42 of Table A and S. 105-C did not cover the same field. Regulation 42 did not purport to deal with increase of capital which was within the competency of the directors to decide. No precise form is required for creating a charge or a mortgage whether on immoveable property or moveable property and it is sufficient if it clearly appears to have been the intention of the parties to create a charge or mortgage on the property, and in ascertaining the intention, the form of expression, the literal sense is not to be so much regarded as the real meaning which the transaction discloses: 6 Moo Ind App 393 (P. C.), Foll.

The intention of the parties is not to be gathered by looking only at the ostensible nature of the expressions used by them or from the absence of any specific formal expression such as charge or mortgage. It has to be legitimately ascertained from that which they have chosen to state in express words or by reasonable and necessary implication of the language used and the setting in which they are found and the relevant circumstances attending the transaction.

The main question to be determined is whether the parties have clearly expressed their intention to create a charge or any other incumbrance on the property in question.

The inquiry must in the first instance, consist of a careful and searching examination of the writing itself, with particular reference to the extent of the rights which the obligee has reserved for himself and the restrictions it puts on the rights of the obligor in respect of the property in question.

The writing need not contain any express words giving the obligee the power of bringing the property to sale as the means of securing payment of the moneys advanced but there must be sufficient language in the writing itself from which such power may reasonably be implied. Case-law. Ref.

The Court refuses to read words in a document which are not there when the document as it stands is such that a rational meaning can be given to it. The question is not what the parties may have intended but of ascertainment of the meaning of what they have said they intended.

Lien, strictly, is neither a 'jus in rem' nor a 'jus ad rem', but is simply a right to possess and retain property until some claim attaching to it is satisfied or discharged.

The general rule may be stated to be that a lien whether an off-spring of statute or arising by any usage or custom is essentially a right of retention. Under our law there is not, in case of a lien, any right of bringing the property to sale unless it is expressly conferred by statute. There are some kinds of lien where such right of sale is expressly recognised, e. g., the lien of an unpaid seller or of a pawnee of goods.

But in case of many liens expressly recognised by statute there is no such right of bringing the property to sale and the right remains simply one of retention. It may be that by any usage or custom of trade there may be this additional right to bring the property to sale. But such usage or custom would have to be pleaded and strictly proved.

When the positive general lien of a banker does not confer on him any power of bringing the property to sale, such power cannot reasonably be implied in case of a negative lien, when the parties have not chosen to state that it was their intention that there was to be such right and there are no other words from which such intention could be inferred. 57 Bom L R 850 : A I R 1955 Bom 419 (425, 427, 428, 429) (Pt A) (Prs 9, 16, 18, 19, 20, 22, 23, 24).

——S. 109 (1) (e)—"Moveable property"—Meaning of—Aircraft.

Under a financing agreement between defendant 1 and defendant 2 possession of the aircraft was given to the defendant No. 2 by way of security. Though the defendant No. 2 employed the aircraft for purposes of the partnership, the aircraft continued to be in the possession of the defendant No. 2 as contemplated by clause 10 of the partnership agreement and clauses 1 and 6 of the financing agreement. On the relevant date defendant No. 2 was in exclusive possession of the aircraft.

Held, that there was a bailment of the aircraft to the defendant No. 2 as security for payment of a debt and the transaction satisfied all the essential requirements of a valid pledge. Though a possessory mortgage is not directly a pawn or a pledge, S. 109 (1) (a) of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, contemplated that there can be a mortgage which is not a pledge. The section does not require registration of a mortgage which is also a pledge. The mortgage of the aircraft was therefore not a mortgage or charge not being a pledge and as such it was exempted from the operation of S. 109 (1) (a) of the Indian Companies Act, 1913. (A I R 1943 Mad 73, Rel. on.) Per P. B. Mukherji, J. : "Moveable property of the company" within the meaning of S. 109 (1) (e) of the Company Act, appears to mean the property which belongs to the company. Such property may be the possessory property in the shape of control, custody, possession or management or titular property in the sense of the title or ownership. A right to redeem is not itself such a "moveable" property as is contemplated in S. 109 (1) (e) of the Companies Act. 30 Com Cas 390: ILR (1960) 1 Cal 158: AIR 1959 Cal 117 (120, 122) (Pt A) (Prs 19, 36) (DB).

——S. 109 (1) (e) — Scope — Mortgage or charge on stock-in-trade—Registration.

Section 109 (1) (e) does not require registration of a pledge of any moveable property of the company whatsoever. The words "on any movable property of the company except stock-in-trade" must be read as qualifying the words "a mortgage or charge not being a pledge". All mortgages or charges on the property of the company are not within the purview of S. 109 (1) (e). Section 109 (1) (e) specially deals with and enjoins registration of a mortgage or charge on any movable property of the company. At the same time S. 109 (1) (e) exempts from its operation (1) a mortgage or charge which is a pledge and also (2) a mortgage or a charge on stock-in-trade. ——Ss. 109, 116 and 230—Floating charge—Immovable property acquired after registration of debentures — Charge not effective unless registered both under Companies Act and Registration Act—(Registration Act (1908), S. 17) — (Companies Act (1956), Ss. 125, 126, 134 and 530).

A charge by a company on its general 'undertaking' constitutes a floating charge. Such a charge is an equitable charge on the assets, for the time being, of the company as a going concern. It attaches to the subject charged in the varying conditions in which it happens to be from time to time. It is of the essence of such a charge that it remains dormant until the undertaking charged ceases to be a going concern, or until the person intervenes in whose favour the charge is created. He may intervene whenever he pleases after default, but his right to intervene may be suspended by agreement. The priority of mortgages and charges made subsequently under such a power is a question of construction. There may be also a power to create a second floating charge ranking in priority. When a floating security upon all the property or assets of the company is thus crystallised or fixed, it constitutes a charge upon all the property or assets then belonging to the company. It has priority over any subsequent equitable charges and over unsecured creditors and over moneys advanced to the liquidator to carry on the business of the company, although the advances were made with the sanction of the Court in winding up, and over the costs of the liquidators other than costs of realisation ; but it is subject to all the then existing charges and to the payment of debts which by statute are made payable out of property subject to a floating security in priority to the moneys thereby secured. Other creditors get preferential payment over the debenture-holders under S. 230 (2) of the Companies Act only if at the moment of the winding up it is still a floating charge ; once a receiver is appointed by the debenture holders and he takes charge of the assets of the company, that charge ceases to float and becomes crystallised and fixed, and the provisions of S. 230 (2) of the Companies Act cannot apply. ((S) A I R 1955 Mad 331, Foll.) A floating security or charge, in much the same terms as in England, is recognised regarding limited companies in India, except for the important limitation that a floating charge regarding immovable properties is to be registered both under the Registration Act and also under S. 109 of the Companies Act after 15th January 1937, when the requirement came into force. The fourth proviso to S. 109 (1) of the Companies Act will only exempt the debenture from being registered and not the immovable properties given as security to the debenture holders. Security regarding immovable properties acquired by the Company after the registration of the debenture deed giving floating charge on the properties of the company under the Companies Act will not be valid. The State has no priority in such case on the ground of salvage. (1956) 26 Com Cas 398 : A I R 1957 Mad 169 (178, 180, 181, 183) (Pt E) (Prs 38, 44, 45, 46, 48, 49, 52) (DB).

——S. 109 (1) (e)—Interpretation—Pledge of movable property or stock-in-trade — Requisition - (Interpretation of Statutes)—(Grammatical construction).

A pledge of any movable property including stock-in-trade of a company does not require to be registered under S. 109 (1) (e), Indian Companies Act. The said sub-section must be read by placing a comma after the word 'pledge' and before the word 'on'. Reading the clause that way the result would be that a pledge would not require registration though a mortgage or a charge on movable property would require registration unless it was stock-in-trade. (A I R 1943 Mad 73 and A I R 1949 Bom 262, Foll.) (1955 25 Com Cas 462 : (1956) 1 Mad L J 328 : A I R 1956 Mad 234 (236, 237) (Prs 10, 13).

——S. 109 (1) (e), (f) — Stock-in-trade — Floating charge—Registration.

What clause (e) contemplates is that where there is a mortgage or a charge on the stock-in-trade of a company, which is moveable property of the company such mortgage or charge requires registration. But what is exempted from registration is a pledge of moveable property of the company other than the stock in-trade. A floating charge would necessarily require registration under S. 109 (1). SECTION 109-A ——Ss. 109-A and 120 — Applicability—Case under S. 109-A — Reference to Act of 1956—Relevancy — (Interpretation of Statutes) — (Companies Act (1956) S. 141.)

If a particular case is omitted from the terms of a statute, even though such a case is within the obvious purpose of the statute and the omission appears to have been due to accident or inadvertence, the Court cannot include the omitted case by supplying the omission. The omission of S. 109-A from S. 120 is neither accidental, nor due to inadvertence nor is S. 109-A or S. 120 without the interpolation meaningless or ineffective. (115 E R 455, Rel. on.) Subsequent legislation may be looked at to fix the meaning of the earlier only when the earlier legislation is ambiguous. But there was no ambiguity in S. 120 as it stood before the enactment of the 1956 Act. Legislative intent of the old Act cannot therefore be gathered in the light of S. 141 of the Act of 1956, which applies to Ss. 125 and 127 corresponding to Ss. 109 and 109-A of the old Act. Section 120 cannot therefore be held to apply to cases under S. 109-A of the old Act. 63 Cal W N 467 : (1959) 29 Com Cas 337 : AIR 1959 Cal 464 (469, 470) (Pt B) (Prs 21, 24, 25) (DB).

——Ss. 109-A and 120—Case under S. 109-A—Time extended under S. 120—Order if nullity — (Companies Act (1956), S. 141.)

There is a distinction between exercise of jurisdiction and existence of jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of a Court depends upon three circumstances namely, pecuniary, territorial and jurisdiction over the subject-matter and if these conditions are fulfilled the Court can be said to have jurisdiction. A wrong order made by the Court under such circumstances is an order which is made upon irregular assumption of jurisdiction and is not an order which is made without jurisdiction and as such it is merely voidable and not void. (AIR 1934 Cal 34 (FB), Rel. on.)

Where a Company Judge who has jurisdiction over the subject-matter passes an order under S. 120, Companies Act, extending time in a case under S. 109-A to which S. 120 does not apply, it is a decision given in irregular exercise of his jurisdiction. The order is not void but merely voidable and it can be revoked only at the instance of a litigant who has an interest in the subject-matter of that proceeding. It cannot be challenged by a person who was not only not a party to the proceeding but also had no interest which required protection in the proceeding. 63 Cal W N 467 : (1959) 29 Com Cas 337 : AIR 1959 Cal 464 (469, 470) (Pt C) (Prs 22, 26) (DB).

——S. 120 (1) and (2) (As amended in 1936) — Unsecured creditor — Position of — Locus standi in proceedings under S. 120 — (Companies Act (1956), S. 141).

Under the first sub-section of S. 120, the Court is neither required to protect nor serve any notice upon unsecured creditors, and consequently the second sub-section of S. 120 must be held to be an exhaustive codification of the legal effect of an order made under the first sub-section. The holder of any right which falls outside the second sub-section has no locus standi in a proceeding under S. 120. (1934) A C 254, Rel. on. ; 40 C W N 1171, Explained and Distinguished.) Under the decision of the English Court of Appeal, the unsecured creditors of a company required no protection, and no notice in a proceeding for extension of time. This principle was recognised by the Indian Legislature in enacting sub-s. (2) of S. 120. 63 Cal W N 467 : (1959) 29 Com Cas 337 : AIR 1959 Cal 464 (468) (Pt A) (Prs 18, 19) (DB).

——S. 120—Winding up order relates back to winding up petition. AIR 1955 N U C (Cal.) 410.

——S. 120 — Exercise of discretion.

If a winding up order is made, the unsecured creditors of the company will acquire a right under the order in respect of the properties of the company and such rights will attach as from the date of the presentation of the winding up petition. Assuming that the creditors do not acquire any right in respect of any property under a winding up order it does not follow that the Court is bound to grant relief under S. 120 of the Companies Act. The Court has a discretion and may refuse to grant the relief on the ground that the right of unsecured creditors have been crystallised by the winding up order. The appointment of a Provisional Liquidator is a material consideration in deciding if the discretionary relief should be granted. Held, that the omission to register the mortgage was of a nature to prejudice the rights of the creditors and share holders of the company and it was not just or equitable to grant relief. (AIR 1955 Mad 35, Diss. from.) (1955) 25 Com Cas 473 : 60 Cal W N 64.

——S. 120 (1) — Extension of time — Conditions.

The Court is entitled to extend the time provided the Court is satisfied that any one of the following conditions is satisfied, namely, (1) the omission was accidental or due to inadvertence or to some other sufficient cause, (2) the omission is not of a nature to prejudice the position of creditors or share-holders of the company and (3) on other grounds it is just and equitable to grant relief. These conditions are not cumulative because of the disjunctive 'or'. (1954) 24 Com Cas 489 : (1955) 1 M L J 46 : ILR (1955) Mad 948 : AIR 1955 Mad 35 (36) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 120 (2) — Exclusion of rights of unsecured creditors — Winding up order.

Section 120 (2) obviously excludes unsecured creditors. It also excludes the rights of unsecured creditors even when there is a winding up order. The solvency of the company is not a matter of any consequence in disposing of an application for extension of time. It is true that under the Companies Act of 1913 there is a distinction between the register of members and the register of mortgages including the debentureholders. There may be some difference in the degree of the importance of the two registers but it cannot be disputed that in order to have a correct and overall picture of the affairs of the company so necessary for its proper functioning, it is necessary to have both the registers posted upto date. Apart from it, in view of the mandatory legal requirement, it would be subversive of the scheme of the Act and also violative of commonsense to hold that though the law requires a register of mortgages to be maintained, it does not require it to be posted upto date ; there is no sense in maintaining any register which is not upto date. Besides, the words 'or persons entitled thereto' after the words 'the name of the mortgagees' occurring in S. 123 of the Act clearly reveal that not only the names of the original mortgagees but also those of their transferees, who become entitled by virtue of the transfers, be included in the register which obviously means that the register of mortgages has got to be rectified from time to time. Further, S. 34 (3) clearly legalises and visualises the transfer of debentures also. It would, therefore, be difficult to hold that even though the law requires the maintenance of a register of mortgagees, no entry in respect of the transfer can be made in the registers of the company. Therefore an application by a transferee of debentures made to the District Judge for rectification of the register of mortgages by making an entry in respect of the transfer in his favour is maintainable and the company has no right to refuse registration. ——S. 132 (3)—Duties of auditor — Nature of—Neglect in performing duties under S. 132 (3)—What is —(Companies Act (1956), Ss. 227 and 211).

An auditor has to look into the accounts of a company and to report to the share-holders what the true condition of its affairs is and whether that condition is correctly reflected in the accounts published. If he is merely to accept whatever the Directors say as final, his appointment as Auditor serves no purpose at all.

Where an auditor finds that the accounts presented by the Directors showed that the selling agency commission was paid to the Managing Agents as a separate remuneration for a separate office, he might be expected to ask the Directors to explain to him how they reconciled that view of the selling commission with their agreement regarding Managing Agency remuneration. He might also be expected to ask whether there was any special resolution under S. 87-C (2) sanctioning the payment of selling commission to the Managing Agent if such payment was regarded as a separate remuneration for separate office. His failure to ask for such information and explanations betrays negligence in the performance of his duties with regard to satisfying himself that S. 132 (3), Companies Act, had been complied with in preparation of the Profit and Loss Account. 27 Com Cas 114 : AIR 1957 Cal 33 (42) (Pt D) (Pr 29).

——Ss. 134 (4) and 32 (5) — Charge under, against directors—Compliance with requirements of Ss. 134 and 32 dependent on holding of general meeting — Such meeting not held due to default of directors— Directors cannot plead not holding of general meeting in defence under both charges — Companies Act (1956), Ss. 220 (3), 165.

The absence in S. 32 of the provision corresponding to that relating to the placing of balance sheet before the general meeting which is found in S. 134 does not mean that the requirement under S. 134 of filing copies of the balance sheet is impossible to be complied with unless and until a general meeting is held and the balance sheet placed before it, whereas the filing of the returns under S. 134 is not dependent on the holding of such a meeting. The provisions in S. 32 (3) that the list and summary are to be completed within 21 days after the day of the general meeting clearly indicates that the section does not envisage a list or summary prepared without actually holding the general meeting. Thus the plea of not holding of general meeting is available to the directors in both the cases.

But where the directors of a company are charged with an offence under Ss. 134 (4) and 32 (5), the plea that a general meeting of the company was not held during the year in question, will not be a sufficient defence if it was due to the accused's own default that the general meeting was not held ; AIR 1961 S C 186, Rel. on. ——S. 137— Offences under — Application of provisions of general criminal law not excluded — No implied repealing of Penal Code intended —Penal Code (1860), Ss. 2, 5—General Clauses Act (1897), S. 26.

The Companies Act creates a number of offence some of which are peculiar to the Act itself and some of which are offences similar to ones described in Indian Penal Code and there are certain offences which are not mentioned in the Companies Act at all —Though the Companies Act purports to consolidate statutes relating to companies, it does not intend to amend or alter substantially the Indian Penal Code as applicable to the companies, so as to abolish certain offences described in the Indian Penal Code or to change the elements of some of the offences mentioned in the Code. Penal Code is the general criminal law of the country and there is nothing in the Companies Act to exclude its operation either expressly or by necessary implication.

Moreover it cannot be said that offences mentioned and stated in the Companies Act cover all possible offences for which a person may criminally be held liable in relation to a company under Indian Penal Code. And it is a well-known rule of interpretation that an enactment should not generally be so construed as to lead to the conclusion that the Legislature intended to repeal an important enactment, without expressing an intention to do so unless the Court is compelled to hold so in the circumstances of a case.

When by a special or local Act a new offence is created then the accused must be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of the special or local law. However when a new statute makes an act already punishable under some former law and there is nothing in the later enactment expressly or by necessary implication to exclude the operation of the former Act, then the accused person can be proceeded against, under either of the two enactments. And therefore as the Companies Act does not deal with offences in relation to the companies, accused person can be tried for offences described in the Indian Penal Code even when they relate to companies; it cannot be said under such circumstances that the Indian Penal Code is impliedly repealed to that extent, as the Code has been made expressly applicable to acts which fall within the Code even though these acts may be offences under the Companies Act as well. AIR 1952 Punj 89, Distinguished; (1889) 22 Q B D 622; A I R 1923 Mad 339, Ref. to. I L R (1957) Punj 510 (DB).

——Ss. 137 to 141A and S. 237 — Relative scope — Sections not mutually exclusive.

Section 237 does not lay down a complete procedure for investigation and for initiating criminal proceedings so as to exclude the consideration of any other provision in the Act. It does not lay down the procedure to be adopted after the Central Government has completed the enquiry under S. 237 (3). The Central Government after receiving the report can only act under S. 141 and under S. 141A. There is no provision in the Companies Act which can make such an inquiry effective unless the Central Government can invoke the provisions of Criminal Procedure Code. It cannot therefore be said that S. 141A is not applicable to proceedings taken under S. 237.

The words 'in the course of winding up' do not denote point of time and do not mean after the commencement of winding up; the phrase only means in the process of. No doubt the section does not apply to a company which is a going concern but it neither expressly nor by necessary implication excludes the provisions of Ss. 137 to 141A to the affairs of a company, and if any investigation has already been started under S. 138 before the liquidation, the same is not rendered incompetent by reason of subsequent liquidation.

Section 237 does not authorise the liquidator or the Court to prevent the Registrar from taking criminal proceedings against an alleged offender under S. 137, when proceedings have already been started under S. 137 then any discovery of an offence by the Inspectors cannot be said to be an offence, which has come to light when the liquidator or the Court were dealing with the matter in the course of winding up.

Considering the provisions of Ss. 141 and 141A, S. 237 (5) and S. 237 (6) (7) it becomes clear that the Legislature did not intend to exclude the applicability of provisions of Ss. 137 to 141A to a company which has gone into liquidation. Besides there is no provision in the Act which automatically stays proceedings under S. 137 or any other section when the company goes into voluntary liquidation and therefore it cannot be held that the proceedings initiated under S. 137 cannot be continued after the company had gone into voluntary liquidation.

The provisions relating to investigation of an offence are matters of procedure and they should be so construed as to carry out the legislative intention to promote speedy and effective investigation. I L R (1957) Punj 510 (DB).

——S. 137 read with S. 237 — Offences under — Investigations by Registrar — Procedure prescribed in S. 237 — Application of Chap. XIV of Criminal Procedure Code not excluded thereby — Criminal Procedure Code (1898), Ss. 1 (2), 5.

There is no provision in the Companies Act expressly excluding the application of Ch. 14 of the Criminal Procedure Code to offences under the Companies Act. Chapter 14 of Cr. P. C deals with information to Police and their powers to investigate while S. 137 of the Companies Act deals with investigations by the Registrar and S. 237 lays down procedure for prosecuting officers of the company in the course of winding up. But a reading of S. 1 (2) and S. 5 of the Criminal Procedure Code makes it clear that subject to any special enactment in force all offences must be investigated, enquired into and tried in accordance with the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code and therefore as the Companies Act does not lay down any provision regarding trial of offences, Criminal Procedure Code governs the trial of offences whether they relate to companies or are created by the Companies Act. The Companies Act merely prescribes a mode of investigation into affairs of a company, which may disclose criminal liability of certain persons connected with the company. It is difficult to hold that by enacting Ss. 137 to 141A the legislature intended to abrogate the provisions contained in Ch. 14 of Cr. P. C. when offences have been committed in relation to companies and unless stronger reasons are forthcoming it is difficult to hold that a statute or a section has been repealed by implication.

Proceedings under the Companies Act do not necessarily conflict with those of the Criminal Procedure Code. The proceedings under S. 137 and onwards are not exclusively or primarily criminal. The investigation under Ss. 137 to 141A may disclose several liabilities of the officers of the company or may disclose commission of several offences. The object of proceedings under the Companies Act being absolutely different from the object of the investigation under the Criminal Procedure Code, it is difficult to see how proceedings under Companies Act conflict with the mandatory provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code. ——S. 141A (2) – Investigation by police after report under the section — No discrimination — Constitution of India, Art. 14.

The nature of inquiry under the Companies Act is different in its scope from investigation under Criminal Procedure Code and in a particular case an inquiry under the Companies Act may be considered to be not as effective as an investigation under the Criminal Procedure Code. And therefore the argument that if the police can still investigate after a report has been made under the section, there would be successive investigations resulting in undue hardship to suspects and then it will be open to prosecuting agencies to get investigation made either under S. 137 or under the Criminal Procedure Code at their sweet will and thus introduce discrimination in procedure has no force. ——S. 141-A (2) — Scope — Meaning of proceedings and criminal prosecution — Not mandatory provision.

Section 141A (2) contemplates that after the officer concerned has come to the conclusions that certain persons ought to be prosecuted, he shall cause proceedings to be commenced. It does not state the kind of proceedings that are to be commenced, but it is clear that they must be taken to further the officer's decision that certain persons should be prosecuted.

The word proceedings in the section is a word of very wide connotation and it is much wider in import than 'Criminal prosecution'. The words of this section thus do not exclude the possibility of the officer from taking any proceedings which may be a stage earlier than the institution of a prosecution. The legislature, while using these wide words intended to lay down that it was open to the Registrar to start proceedings by laying information to the police or by filing a complaint in Court according to the circumstances of each particular case.

The words used in Ss. 137, 141A (2) and 237 are directory and not mandatory and the provisions of these sections are enabling rather than mandatory or exclusive. They do not take away the right of the police to investigate into offences. ILR (1957) Punj 510 (DB).

——S. 145 (2), (3)— Duties of auditors — Bank audit —Omission to verify cash in hand — Use of enigmatical language in report about bank's position — Certifying balance sheet before receiving confirmation of cash balance — (Chartered Accountants Act (1949), Ss. 21, 22).

The Companies Act in S. 145 (2) says nothing as to what the auditor is to do in the course of his audit in order to form an opinion on the affairs of the company except that it is indirectly suggested that he must call for information and explanations. In the case of a company, the terms are to be found in the Articles of Association, but such terms, while they may lay down the duties of the auditor more specifically or even provide an immunity for him in respect of certain matters, cannot exempt him from any statutory duty or liability. An auditor has to ascertain and report not merely whether the balance sheet of a Joint Stock Company exhibits the true state of the company's affairs as shown in the books of the company but also whether the books of the company themselves exhibit the true state of the company's affairs. ((1895) 2 Ch 673, Ref.) The auditor must of course examine the books of the company to see what they contain, but he must also ask for further information and for explanations when such are required. In performing that function, he is required on the one hand to employ reasonable skill and care, but on the other hand, he is not required to do more. What is reasonable care and skill must depend on the circumstances of each case. Where there is nothing to excite suspicion, less care and less severity of scrutiny may be considered reasonable, whereas reasonable care and skill may be regarded as not exercised when, in spite of the presence of unusual features in the accounts or other prima facie reasons for believing that the affairs of the company may not be in order the examination is perfunctory and not sufficiently detailed. One aspect of the question of reasonable care and skill is whether the auditor may properly rely on the statements of director-in-charge or the managing director. Where the auditor is himself deceived, he will not be held to have failed in the discharge of his duties. Provided the auditor exercises reasonable care and skill, he will be regarded as having discharged his duty properly, even if his certificate turns out to be inaccurate, either as to the true position of the affairs of the company or as to the correctness of the balance-sheet in relation to the books. The audit of a banking company has been called a balance sheet audit, because on account of the multitudinous character of the transactions of a bank, it is not ordinarily possible to examine everyone of them. But the existence of the assets must be stictly verified, cash in hand by actual counting, cash in banks by reference to the pass book or letters of confirmation, securities by inspection and uncashed cheques by presenting them for being cashed. In the case of securities if some of them may be said to be in the hands of a third pariy, the auditor has to see whether the alleged custodian is a party in whose hands the securities might normally be placed under the approved commercial practice or in the ordinary course of the bank's business, and if that condition is satisfied and the party is also a trustworthy party the auditor may accept a certificate from him instead of verifying the existence of the securities by actual inspection. But verification of the existing assets in some satisfactory form is essential. The next duty of an auditor is to make a report to the shareholders. The Companies Act does not intend that a report may be a mere certificate to the effect that the auditor has been satisfied as to the particular matters specified in S. 145 (2). His duty is to give information and not merely means of information. He must communicate facts so that on those facts, the share-holders may judge the position for themselve. Vis-a-vis the shareholders, the auditor holds a position of trust. Whether or not an auditor conveys all material information in his public report or in a report confidentially made, his duty is to make a full, careful and truthful report, in default of which he must be held to have failed in the discharge of his obligations. In a bank audit, the cash balance claimed by the management must be verified by the auditor. (1898) 2 Ch 279, Disting. Negligence in respect of carrying out the work of audit is one thing, negligence in giving full information to the share-holders is another. Where the auditor did not inform the shareholders frankly and directly what the facts were which had caused misgivings in his mind, but he chose to employ some euphemistic or enigmatical language which might or might not be taken by the share-holders to be of any significance and which conveyed no definite information, a finding of negligence against the auditor is justified. Where the auditor, after feeling the necessity of confirmation of cash balance and asking for it, from the branches of the bank, hurried to certify the balance-sheet before the confirmation was received, the auditor is guilty of negligence in performing his duties with the requisite skill and diligence. (1955) 25 Com Cas 413: 60 Cal W N 124 : A I R 1956 Cal 414 (419, 420, 421, 422, 423) (Pt A) (Prs 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 20, 21, 23, 24) (DB).

——S. 145—(Companies Act, 1 of 1956, S. 227) — Duties of auditor — Scope and purpose of audit — Chartered Accountants Act (38 of 1949), Ss. 21 and 22 and Second Schedule—Professional misconduct—Failure to inquire into circumstances exciting suspicion—Chartered Accountant accepting statement of persons in management and certifying to correctness of balance sheet and Profit and Loss Account—Effect—Gross negligence—Effect.

The true purpose of an audit is to examine the accounts and records maintained by the company whose accounts are under audit with a view to establish whether the former completely reflected the transactions to which they purported to relate. Under S. 145 of the Companies Act, 1913 (S. 227 of the Act of 1956) the duty of on auditor is to ascertain and state the true financial position of the company at the time of the audit, by examining the books of the company. He does not discharge his duty by doing this without inquiry and without taking any trouble to see that the books themselves show the company's true position. He must take reasonable care to ascertain that they do so.

When an auditor finds sufficient material to excite his suspicion, the least that he should do is to appraise the shareholders in his report of the circumstances which surround the matter. When he finds that in a particular year, large sums of money due from others are consolidated and written off as bad debts, while the very same debts were shown in previous years as good ones, he is bound to investigate into the circumstances leading up to the writing-off, to ascertain whether there were vouchers for such debts, and if he is of opinion that they were valueless he is bound to disclose that fact in his report and not merely give a clean certificate to the balance sheet. When he fails to do so, he must be held guilty of gross negligence in the discharge of his duties. If he accepts statements and assurances without inquiry, he fails in his duty, and he is guilty of professional misconduct, viz., gross negligence in the discharge of his duties under Ss. 21 and 22 of the Chartered Accountants Act of 1949. ——S. 153 — Shareholders can propose arrangement or compromise.

It is true, a company is not like a joint Hindu family which is an association of individuals. It is a distinct juristic person, completely separate from its members or shareholders but S. 153 itself provides that the Court may order a meeting of the creditors or class of creditors or the members of the company or class of members, as the case may be, to be called, held and conducted in such manner as the Court directs for deciding whether a proposed arrangement or compromise should be concluded on behalf of the company or not. If the members have a right to be present in the meeting and decide whether or not a compromise or an arrangement should be accepted, they certainly, either collectively or individually, have a right to make a proposal. An arrangement or a compromise can be proposed even by shareholders. ILR (1964) 2 All 477 : (1964) 1 Com L J 166 : A I R 1964 All 473 (475) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

Ordinarily the rule is that when a matter is closed a person cannot come subsequently and ask that he might be added to it in order to give him an opportunity of fighting out the proceeding afresh. But if a share-holder can be allowed to appear there is no bar in principle to allowing him to agitate the matter in the Court of first instance. A person who is invited to appear and who under the rules is entitled to specific clear notice of a particular direction cannot be shut out by giving him inadequate notice and then telling him that the matter has been disposed of. 1957 Mad W N 98 : (1956) 26 Com Cas 73 : A I R 1956 Mad 586 (588, 589) (Pt E) (Prs 11, 13).

——S. 153 — Permission to convene meeting—Grant of.

Application under S. 153 by official liquidator of a company for permission to convene a meeting for considering a proposal for reconstruction of company — Large sum of money belonging to company was in Court and there were no subsisting liabilities — Court held was not justified in rejecting such application as if it were one for sanctioning scheme — Fact that 74 out of 190 members opposed the scheme does not necessarily mean that none of them would change their views when all aspects of the question are discussed at the meeting — Even if scheme is approved by majority it cannot come into force unless sanctioned by Court who will have to consider all the objections at the time of sanctioning. (1953) 23 Com Cas 549 : AIR 1953 Trav-Co 357 (358) (Pr 2) (DB).

——S. 153 (1) — Company being wound up — Right to make application.

The introduction of the words "in the case of a company being wound up, of the liquidator" is intended to provide an additional and not an exclusive person who could make the application. If a company, or a member, or a creditor may make the application under S. 153 (1) proposing a compromise or arrangement in the case of a company which is not under liquidation there is no reason why any of them should not be competent to make the application in the case of a company which is being wound up. A resolution by the directors of a company authorising a director or some other person to represent the company at the creditors' meeting does not make him 'present in person' in law for that company at the meeting. 1920 W N 274, Dist. The delay on the part of the opposing creditors in not taking the objection as to the validity of the votes in such a case cannot justify the chairman or the Court in disobeying the requirements of S. 153 (2) and refusing to entertain the objection at a late stage. ——S. 153—Scheme under—Interference in working by management—Effect.

Where in the case of a Bank a scheme was sanctioned by the Court and the affairs of the Bank were to be managed by the directors appointed by the creditors but the old management continued to interfere with the working of the Bank by the directors in an effort to regain Control over the management.

Held, that these facts alone constituted a sufficient ground for ordering the winding up of the Bank on just and equitable grounds and further the fact that the approval of the creditors for the scheme of arrangement was obtained by presenting a greatly over-optimistic and false picture of the Bank's financial position was also a ground falling under the category. AIR 1955 N U C (Punj) 4983.

——S. 153—Company—Transaction by company not ultra vires — Minority of share-holders bound in absence of fraud.

If an act is not ultra vires of the company and it is capable of being ratified or being approved of by the company it is not open to a minority of share-holders to object to any transaction unless it is a fraud or the majority have abused their powers and are depriving the minority of their rights. — S. 153 — Scheme of amalgamation between two banking companies—Validity.

A scheme according to which Bank B undertakes to pay the deposits of Bank A and against this, Bank A is to hand over to Bank B its assets is not ultra vires of the Banking company A and is not illegal.

Even if the power to do this is not vested in the Directors it is an act which is capable of being ratified and approved and therefore no objection can be taken to it. 53 Pun L R 469 : (1951) 21 Com Cas 326 : AIR 1951 Punj 79 (87) (Pt F) (Pr 38).

——S. 153 (1) — Tyranny of majority — Change in voting power.

If X persons hold the large majority of shares they can easily out-vote the minority whether the voting power be per share-holder or per share because, upon the hypothesis they are numerically the majority share-holders and are the owners of the majority of the shares as well. If the tyranny of the majority over a helpless minority was the ground of the liquidation the remedy that the voting power shall be, one vote not per share holder but per share would be shadowy and not substantial in such a case. The arrangement proposed does not afford a remedy for the evil which occasioned the order for winding up. ——S. 153 (1)—Application under—Consent of legal representatives.

The fact that the legal representatives of the petitioner on whose application the order for winding up was passed, support the application under S. 153 (1) is of no moment at all. The consent of the legal representatives of the petitioner for winding up, to the arrangement proposed under S. 153 does not affect its consideration except as showing the consent of another member to the said arrangement, and it cannot be said that the order asked for in such a case must be made as a matter of course. See Ibid, S. 185. A I R 1955 S C 441.

——S. 153 — Duty of Court while sanctioning scheme.

The Court cannot sanction any arrangement or compromise with the creditors of a company under S. 153 of the Companies Act, which necessarily involves the doing of any act which is 'ultra vires' the Finance Corporation, a creditor of the company, being in excess of its corporate powers as defined in the Industrial Finance Corporation Act. ((1939) 1 Ch 41, Foll.). ILR (1955) 1 All 563 : (1956) 26 Com Cas 99 : AIR 1956 All 14 (17) (Pt F) (Pr 20).

——S. 153 — Scheme — Sanction of Court—Discretion when not to be exercised.

If a power has been given by the share-holders or the creditors to the Court to modify the scheme passed by them, the Court can exercise that power. But that power is to be exercised judiciously and not arbitrarily. Thus, the Court will not exercise its power if it finds that by modifying the scheme the Court will be permitting something which is not warranted by the Industrial Finance Corporation Act or which is something against the interest of the Finance Corporation, which is one of the creditors of the company. (AIR 1929 P C 258 ; 57 M L J 833 (PC); AIR 1934 Cal 816; AIR 1937 Cal 401 and AIR 1937 Cal 667, Rel. on). ILR (1956) 1 All 568 : (1956) 26 Com Cas 99 : AIR 1956 All 14 (18) (Pt H) (Pr 25).

——S. 153 (2) — Scheme — Sanction of — Procedure — Powers and duties of Court—Banking Companies Act (1949) (as amended by Act of 1950), S. 45 — Effect of modification — Extent of — Substantial modification of scheme by Reserve Bank — Jurisdiction of Court to sanction modified scheme — High Court Rules — Calcutta High Court Rules (Original Side), App. 7, Rr. 40 to 47.

Under S. 153, Companies Act, the sanction of the majority as required by S. 153 (2) is pre-requisite for confirmation of the scheme by the Court. The scheme of course is not effective and binding on the shareholders or creditors unless it is confirmed by the Court.

Rules 40 to 47, App 7 of the Original Side Rules framed under the Companies Act provide that the petition for confirmation must clearly show the compromise or arrangement recite the order for the meetings, the result of the meetings and the necessity for the compromise or arrangement. All proper materials must be placed before the Court to show that the scheme or arrangement is one which would be accepted by an ordinary reasonable and prudent man of business.

The Court does not sanction a scheme merely because it has been approved by the requisite majority. The Court does not sit merely to see that the majority are acting bona fide and thereupon to register the decision of the meeting. But, at the same time the Court would be slow to differ from the meeting, unless either the class has not been properly consulted or the meeting has not considered the matter with a view to the interest of the class which it is empowered to bind, or some blot is found in the scheme.

Section 153 (2) allows the decision of the majority to bind the minority and therefore it is incumbent on the Court to see that that decision does not act oppressively on the minority. In sanctioning a scheme the Court must see that it is a reasonable scheme and it is a practicable scheme.

In the case of Banking Companies, S. 45 of the Banking Companies Act, 1949, as amended in 1950 imposes a further condition in respect of schemes which relate to the Banks. By reason of this section the Court has been deprived of its jurisdiction to confirm a scheme of arrangement or compromise even though it has been sanctioned by the requisite majority under S. 153 (2) of the Companies Act but has not been certified by the Reserve Bank, This certificate has first to be obtained before a scheme can be presented to the Court for its approval. But the Reserve Bank has a very limited power in the matter of granting the certificate. The certificate is limited to the Reserve Bank certifying that the scheme is not detrimental to the interests of the depositors of the company. No power is given to the Reserve Bank to modify a scheme which has been sanctioned under S. 153 (2) of the Companies Act. If in any particular case the Reserve Bank does modify such a scheme it is tantamount to refusal to grant a certificate.

If a scheme has been sanctioned under S. 153 (2) of the Indian Companies Act and that scheme has not been certified as it is, but has been modified by the Reserve Bank and that modified scheme is presented to the Court for confirmation, without being sanctioned as required under S. 153 (2), the Court is not entitled to confirm it, because the Court has no jurisdiction to grant sanction to such a scheme. Of course if the changes made by the Reserve Bank are nominal only, then these observations will not apply. In other words, the changes made by the Reserve Bank which deprive the Court of its jurisdiction must be substantial changes.

Held on consideration of the scheme that it was not practicable at all and as such it could not be sanctioned. 55 Cal W N 206:(1951)21 Com Cas 315: AIR 1952 Cal 133 (134, 135, 136) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 11, 12, 23) (DB).

——S. 153 — Creditors' meeting — Resolution that company be reconstituted without any liability imposed on members — If can be given effect to — Power of Court — (Companies Act (1956), S. 391).

Where the purport of the resolutions passed in a meeting allowed to be held by the Court under S. 153 is that the reconstitution of the company to be effected should be without any liability whatsoever to the members, such a resolution cannot, under the law, be given effect to. It is impossible to reconstruct the company in the manner in which the resolutions of the members demand. All that the Court can in such a case do is to withhold its approval if such a reconstitution is not possible under the law. It cannot say that there shall be a reconstitution with such liability on the members as the law might impose. 1957 Ker L J 970 : 1957 Ker L T 1294 : (1958) 28 Com Cas 146 : AIR 1958 Ker 314 (315) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

Where it is intended to alter the Articles of Association by any compromise between the company and its members or any class of its members, the procedure laid down in S. 153 should be followed. Neither the directors of a company nor the share-holders by merely coming to Court and saying that they consent to a particular order can by-pass the requirements of S. 153. 1957 Mad W N 98 : (1956) 26 Com Cas 73 : AIR 1956 Mad 586 (588, 589) (Pt D) (Pr 11).

——S. 153 — Scheme of arrangement — The scheme of arrangement was that first mortgage debentures secured on the assets of the company should be issued to all the creditors to the extent of their dues, the debentures to carry interest at six per cent tax free from the date of issue; that the company should pay the debenture holders every year commencing from the third year of the working of the factory at the rate of 20 per cent of the debenture amounts and the interest due on the entire debentures and that the company should have the option to repay the debentures even earlier. It was held that the proposed scheme was neither reasonable nor beneficial to the company and hence could not be approved by the Court. AIR 1955 N U C (Mad) 3208 (DB).

——S. 153 (2) — Sanction of Court — Essentials — Duty of Court — (Companies Act (1956), S. 391 (2)).

The sanction of the Court, which is a sine qua non for the compromise or arrangement being binding on all the parties concerned, is dependant on the fact that at least on the very face of it the report does not suffer from any non-compliance of the rule of law as laid down in S. 153 of the Companies Act, 1913. One of the essential conditions to give jurisdiction to the Court to accord its sanction to a scheme is that it should have been passed by a majority as required under S. 153 (2) and that the proxies filed at the meeting were valid in law. An objection on the ground of absence of signature on the copy of the resolution produced by the person representing a creditor company in support of his authority is too belated and cannot be taken into consideration when raised for the first time at the final hearing of the matter. ——S. 153—There cannot be provisional sanction or partial sanction or sanction with condition. (Per Kapur J.)

(Per Kapur J.)—In S. 153 (2) all that is provided is that the scheme, if sanctioned, shall be binding as provided in that clause. It clearly allows the sanctioning or not sanctioning a scheme. ——S. 153 (1)—First application—Order to be made.

On the first application, it cannot be said that the order asked for has to be made as a matter of course

The special formalities required for a resolution with respect to reduction of share capital under S. 55 cannot be overridden by any direction of the Court given under S. 153. It is manifest that S. 153 and S. 55 deal with two separate classes of special matters, and as a matter of construction both these special provisions are equally important and neither of the special provisions can be nullified or overridden by each other. It follows, therefore, that if there is a scheme or a proposed compromise which involves a dealing with reduction of share capital, the formalities prescribed not only by S. 153 but also by S. 55 have got to be complied with. (1918 WN 323, Rel. on.) Reading Ss. 81 (2) and 55 together, it is manifest that a resolution which involves a reduction of share capital can only be considered at a meeting of which not less than 21 days' notice has been duly given. Where there has been a violation of S. 81 with regard to the period of notice the meetings held for considering the modification of the scheme must be held to be illegal and invalid. A vesting order, as contemplated by Ss. 153 and 153-A of Act, is made in order to facilitate the amalgamation or in other words, in aid of amalgamation of the scheme of arrangement; but the actual transfer is effected by the act of parties, that is, by the transferor company to the transferee company. The Court merely accords its sanction to the arrangement entered into between the transferor company and the transferee company. The vesting order does not do away with the necessity of the formalities of execution of instruments or conveyances or other formalities which are necessary for effectually vesting the property or rights of the transferor company in the transferee company. It cannot be said that because the transfer of a right of suit was effected by a vesting order under S. 153-A it is a transfer by operation of law and not a transfer inter vivos and, hence, S. 6 (e) of the T. P. Act would have no application. ('57) 100 Cal L J 70.

● ——S. 153 — Scheme not of the kind mentioned in S. 153-A or S. 153-B sanctioned by Court otherwise than in the course of winding up—Court sanctioning scheme has no jurisdiction to entertain application for enforcing scheme or modifying scheme or to adjudicate upon rights of parties arising under or out of scheme—Parties to assert their right in regular suit.

(1) When a scheme is sanctioned by the winding up Court in the course of winding up, the Court may stay the winding up except for the purpose of giving effect to the scheme. In such a case the Court may exercise the powers of the winding up Court in matters arising under or out of the scheme as matters arising in winding up.

(2) When a scheme is of the kind mentioned in S. 153A or S. 153B and is sanctioned even otherwise than in the course of winding up, even then the Court may by the order sanctioning the scheme or by any subsequent order make provision for all or any of the matters mentioned in the several clauses of sub-s. (1) of S. 153A or in S. 153B.

(3) Where a scheme which is not of the kind mentioned in S. 153A or S. 153B is sanctioned otherwise than in the course of winding up, the Court sanctioning the scheme has no further seisin on the scheme and has no jurisdiction or power as the company Court to entertain any application for enforcing the scheme, or modifying the scheme or to adjudicate upon the rights of parties arising under or out of the scheme and parties claiming under the scheme or dehors the scheme must assert their rights in regular suits or other proceedings as may be permissible in law.

(4) Neither the Company, nor the creditors nor the members can, by a provision in the scheme which is within cl. (3) above, confer jurisdiction on the East Punjab High Court which the East Punjab High Court does not either under the East Punjab High Court Order read with the Letters Patent of the Lahore High Court or under the Companies Act or otherwise possess.

(5) Nor can the Court by sanctioning a scheme which comes within cl. (3) above including a clause reserving power to the Court to entertain applications subsequent to the sanction arrogate to itself powers and jurisdictions which it does not either under the East Punjab High Court Order read with the Letters Patent of the Lahore High Court or the Companies Act or otherwise possess.

Hence, where a scheme sanctioned by the Court comes under cl. (3) above, the High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain applications, by creditors of a bank working under the scheme for payment of instalments that have fallen due under the scheme but not paid or for adjudicating upon their claim to priority as preferential creditors or for like reliefs. SECTION 153-A ——S. 153-A (as amended by Act XXII of 1936) — Amalgamation of two or more companies—Effect—Difference between reconstruction and amalgamation—On facts, held there was no amalgamation of two companies concerned—Companies Act (1956) S. 394.

Under a scheme of amalgamation one Company in effect absorbs the other. The word 'amalgamation' has no definite legal meaning. It contemplates a state of things under which the two companies are so joined as to form a third entity, or one company is absorbed into and blended with another company. Amalgamation does not involve the formation of a new company to carry on the business of the old company. The difference between reconstruction and amalgamation is that in the latter is involved the blending of two concerns one with the other; but not merely the continuance of one concern. (1936) 1 Ch D 587, Rel. on.

Held, on facts, that the arrangement entered into between the two companies concerned did not amount to amalgamation of the companies so as to make the liabilities of D2 Company that of D1 Company which took over D2 Compary as its department. (1963) 2 Comp L J 61 : (1963) 2 Andh W R 112.

——S. 153-A (2) — Scheme of amalgamation — Property of A company transferred to C Company — Suit by A company pending—Application by C company for substitution — If allowable — (C P. Code (1908), O 22, R. 10) — (T. P. Act (1882), S. 6 (e))— (Companies Act (1956), S. 394 (2)).

The Court sanctioned a scheme of amalgamation of A company and B company with C company. The Judge also ordered that (a) the whole of the undertaking and property and all the assets and liabilities of A and B companies as mentioned in the Scheme of Amalgamation be transferred to and do vest in C company; (b) that suit or other legal proceedings, if pending in any Court by or against A and B companies be continued by or against C company; (c) that A and B companies do stand dissolved without being wound up. This order was made under S. 153-A read with S. 153 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913. Thereafter C company applied for an order that its name be brought on record as plaintiff in the suit instituted by A company against the defendant company in place and stead of A company on the strength of the above order. While dismissing the application, it was held that all that was purported to be transferred to the applicant was the right to sue for damages for breach of contract and nothing else and that the transfer could not take effect in view of S. 6 (e) of the Transfer of Property Act.

Held (1) that the transfer being by an order of Court of competent jurisdiction, S. 6 (e) of the Transfer of Property Act had no application having regard to S. 2 (d) of the Transfer of Property Act; (2) that independently of O. XXII, R. 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the order of the Court, read with S. 153-A (1) (c) of the Companies Act, 1913, entitled the applicant to continue the suit; (3) that an accrued right to sue for damages was not a right which by its very nature was incapable of being transferred. Such a right might be transferred with property to which it was incidental without infringing any rule of law. ILR (1960) 1 Cal 615 : (1959) 29 Com Cas 357: AIR 1959 Cal 352 (353, 354, 355) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 7, 19) (DB).

——S. 153-A – Right to sue upon breach of contract — Power of Court to transfer by vesting order — S 153—(Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 6).

Section 153-A of the Indian Companies Act confers very wide powers on the Court sanctioning a scheme of arrangement or reconstruction under S. 153 of the Act. The word "property" also has been given a very wide meaning under the section so as to include rights of every description. But, it cannot be held that the legislature in enacting Ss. 153 and 153-A intended that the Court, by a vesting order made under the provisions of S. 153-A, could transfer rights and properties which are in law not assignable or transferable. The section should, therefore, receive a restricted interpretation so as not to give power to the Court to transfer, by a vesting order, a mere right to sue such as a right to sue for damages upon a breach of contract of carriage. A payee or holder of a demand draft on another branch of the Bank issuing the draft is to be regarded as an ordinary creditor for the purposes of the scheme under which the bank is working, unless he can show that the bank had received the money in trust. The object of a person in purchasing a draft on another branch of the Bank may be to remit the money to himself, but that is only a unilateral act or intention of the person himself and is not sufficient to create a trust or the relationship of principal and agent. A special agreement to create a trust or an agency must be specifically alleged and proved. (AIR 1953 Punj 194 and 54 Cal W N 744, Rel. on.) ——Ss. 153-B and 208-C (3) — Difference in language of — (Companies Act (1956), S. 395 and S. 494 (3)).

Section 153-B deals with a case of a transfer of shares of a company which is a going concern and which has not been wound up or directed to be wound up; whereas S. 208-C deals with a case where the company is proposed to be, or is in the course of being wound up altogether voluntarily and it is in the case of such winding up that the whole or part of the business or the property of the company is proposed to be transferred or sold to another company. In the case of company which is not being wound up it is appropriate to speak of the shares as being acquired the price being the price of the shares at the market-value but when the company is being wound up there can be no question of sale or acquisition of shares as such. Hence the use of the word 'interest' in S. 208-C. 72 Mad L W 609 : ILR (1959) Mad 859 : (1960) 1 Mad L J 199: (1960) 30 Com Cas 340 : AIR 1960 Mad 43 (47, 48, 49) (Pt C) (Pr 10) (DB).

——S, 153-B – Duty of Court – (Companies Act (1956), S. 395).

Section 153-B gives the transferee company a right to acquire the shares held by the dissenting members of the transferor company unless the Court otherwise orders. A Court cannot take away the right which the law confers on a person without good and adequate cause. What will be good and adequate cause the statute does not say, and, this probably for the reason that it is impossible to visualise and provide for every possible contingency. Obviously, however, certain circumstances are relevant. Where on examining an arrangement the Court feels that it is a wicked thing to do, it will naturally deny to the transferee the right to claims under this section. So too if the transaction appears to the Court to be manifestly oppressive or unjust or unconscionable. Similarly also where the Court is satisfied that the sanction of the majority has been obtained by fraud, deception or other improper means. SECTION 153-C

● ——Ss. 153-C and 162 (vi)—Management—Petition by share-holder—Consent of more than one-tenth of total number of members — Withdrawal of consent after presentation of petition—Effect—Appointment of administrators—Whether interference with internal management—Winding up—Grounds for winding up—(Companies Act (I of 1956), Ss. 397, 398 and 433 (f)).

Where the number of members of a company who give their consent to the filing of an application for relief against mismanagement in a company (i. e.) more than 1/10 of total number of members, satisfies the condition laid down in Section 163-C (3) (a) (i) of the Companies Act, the petition does not cease to be maintainable merely because some members withdraw their consent after its presentation and thereafter the condition laid down in that section is not satisfied. The validity of a petition must be judged on the facts as they were at the time of its presentation, and a petition which was validly presented cannot, in the absence of a provision to that effect in the statute, cease to be maintainable by reason of events subsequent to its presentation. Where the facts proved do not make out a case for winding up under Section 162, no order can be passed under Section 153-C. Where the vice chairman of the Board of Directors of a company grossly mismanaged the affairs of the company and had drawn considerable amounts for his personal purposes, arrears due to the Government for supply of electric energy was about Rs. 3 lakhs, large collections had to be made, the machinery was in a state of disrepair, and the share-holders outside the group of the chairman were apathetic and powerless to set the matters right : Held, that the High Court had power to direct the winding up of the company under Section 162 (vi) of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, and was justified in passing an order appointing administrators under Section 153-C, as circumstances exist and the conditions are satisfied on which the winding up order can be made under S. 162.

Courts will not, in general, intervene at the instance of share-holders in matters of internal administration, and will not interfere with the management of a company by its directors, so long as they are acting within the power conferred on them under the articles of association. But this rule can by its very nature apply only when the company as a running concern is sought to be interfered with. In that situation, there is no scope for the rule that the Court should not interfere in matters of internal management. The words "just and equitable" in Section 162 (vi) are not to be construed ejusdem generis. Whether mismanagement of directors is a ground for a winding up order under Section 162 (vi) is a question to be decided on the facts of each case. (1924) A C 783, followed. An order passed by a single Judge of a High Court appointing an interim receiver under S. 153-C (8), Companies Act, read with O. 40, R. 1, C. P. Code pending the final disposal of an application under S. 153-C is not open to appeal under S. 202, Companies Act. Since the relief under S. 153-C is an alternative relief in place of the winding up of the company, it cannnt be said that the order is made in the matter of winding up of company so as to come within the purview of S. 202.

Though such an order is appealable under S. 104 read with O. 43, R. 1, C. P. Code, the provisions of which are applicable to High Courts it does not mean that they give any right to an appeal from an order by a Judge or Judges of that Court to a large number of Judges of the same Court independently of the Letters Patent of the Court. Hence such order would not be appealable unless it is a judgment within the meaning of clause 10, Letters Patent (All). AIR 1921 PC 80 ; 9 Cal 482 (PC) ; 26 Cal 361, Rel. on.

Such an order is not a judgment within the meaning of Clause, Letters Patent (All) and as such is not appealable. A I R 1953 All 647 (648, 649, 650, 652) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 8, 9, 11, 22) (DB).

——S. 153-C (3) (as amended by Act LII of 1951) — Construction—'Consent in writing', meaning of.

The expression "consent in writing" in S. 153-C (3), Companies Act, obviously implies that the writing itself should indicate that the persons who have affixed their signatures have applied their minds to the question before them and have given their consent to certain action being taken. If a petitioner obtains another share-holder's signature on a blank piece of paper and wishes to supplement it by an affidavit or an oral sworn statement of himself or his agent, the signature on the blank paper does not become consent in writing.

The law requires that the consent should be in writing, i. e., in the form of a document. Therefore, the document itself should prove that the consent has been given. No evidence, either by way of affidavit or of oral sworn statement in Court can be given under S. 91, Evidence Act, to prove that such consent was given. (1953) 23 Com Cas 100 : 1952 All L J 749 : ILR (1954) 1 All 131 : AIR 1953 All 326 (326, 327) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 8).

——S. 153-C (3) (as amended by Act LII of 1951) — Scope—'Consent in writing'—When to be obtained.

Under S. 153-C the obtaining of the consent is a condition precedent to the making of the petition and must have been obtained prior to the presentation of the application. ——S. 153-C—Scope of S. 153-C—Alternative remedy —Conditions for exercise of power—Extent of power —(Companies Act (I of 1956), Ss. 397 and 398).

Section 153-C is intended to confer alternative power on a Court to make suitable orders without winding up the company in a case where the facts justify the making of a winding up order but where the making of it would unfairly and materially prejudice the interests of the company or any part of its members. This power will be exercised on an application filed by a member of the company with the consent of the requisite number of share-holders, alleging that the affairs of the company are being conducted in a manner oppressive to some part of the members. The Court may also exercise this power on an application made by the Central Government. The power under this section is very comprehensive. If the conditions laid down are satisfied, the Court can exercise this power by making suitable orders to put an end to the matters complained of. What are suitable orders would depend upon the circumstances of each case. 1956 Andhra L T 207: (1956) 26 Com Cas 55 : 1956 Andhra W R 123.

——S. 153-C — Internal management of company — Power of Court to interfere under S. 153 C — (Companies Act (I of 1956), Ss. 397 and 398).

So long as a company is not wound up, a Court will not interfere with the internal management of that company. But this is true before the Court is called upon to interfere in exercise of its powers under S. 153 C of the Act. The power conferred under that section is exercised in cases where the company can be wound up. Instead of resorting to the drastic remedy of winding up, the Court, without liquidating the company, is given very wide powers to pass all orders necessary for putting an end to the mismanagement. Its power is only conditioned by the provisions of S. 153-C and can be exercised to bring to an end matters complained of. 1956 Andhra L T 207 : (1956) 26 Com Cas 55 : 1956 Andhra W R 123.

SECTION 154.

——S. 154 — Private Limited Company — Conversion into public limited company by alteration of some of its articles of association — Has not effect of changing identity of company.

When under S. 154 of the Companies Act, a Private Limited Company is converted into a Public Limited Company the company's identity is not changed, but only its nature. A Private Limited Company can be converted into a Public Limited Company by merely changing two or three of its Articles of Association, the original Articles of Association continuing to be operative. A Company can alter some of its Articles of Association. Such an alteration does not affect the identity of the company. ——Ss. 155 and 156 — Scope — Company going into liquidation pending second appeal — Liquidator if can be brought on record as legal representative — (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 22, R. 8).

Where the company went into liquidation after the filing of the second appeal and during its pendency, the liquidator cannot be brought on record as the representatives of the erstwhile company as appellant.

Sections 155 and 156, Companies Act show that the right which the liquidator has against the contributory is a statutory one and not a contractual one between the share-holders and the company. That being so, there is no cause of action which survives to the liquidator in a matter of this kind. But since that right is a new one created by the statute as soon as the liquidators make a call and settle the list of contributories, a period of six years will enure in their favour for filing a suit for enforcing the liability. 9 Ch 595 and AIR 1933 P C 63, AIR 1935 Lah 335 and ILR 10 Bom 483, Rel. on. 69 Mad L W 294: ILR (1956) Mad 858 : (1956) 26 Com Cas 166 : (1956) 1 Mad L J 486 : AIR 1956 Mad 448 (Pr 1) (DB).

——Ss. 155 and 235 — Section 235 is not restricted to winding up by Court but applies to all the three modes of winding up specified in S. 155 (1) by virtue of S. 155 (2) — There is nothing in S. 235 or scheme of Act to indicate a contrary intention.

The language of S. 235 is general and applies to all the three modes of winding up of a company contemplated by S. 155 of the Act. The expression

"in the course of winding up of a company" refers to all the three modes in which a company can be wound up under S. 155. The word "liquidator" in S. 235 is used in a comprehensive sense so as to take in not only the Official Liquidator but also other liquidators such as a liquidator appointed in voluntary winding up. There is no reason, nor is there any indication of a contrary intention either in the language of S. 235 or in the scheme of the Act to exclude its applicability to the case of a company which was wound up voluntarily especially when cl. (2) of S. 155 expressly makes the provisions relating to winding up of a company applicable to winding up of a company in any of the three modes indicated in cl. (1) unless there is a contrary intention. (1949) 2 Mad L J 147 : 62 Mad L W 556 : 1949 Mad W N 700 : ILR (1950) Mad 411 : AIR 1950 Mad 68 (69) (Pt A) (Pr 5) (DB).

(Companies Act (1913), S. 156).

1. Nature of liability.
2. Extent of liability.
3. Contributory.

1. Nature of liability.

——Ss. 156 and 105-A — Member, Liability of — Liability is ex lege and not ex contractu. See Ibid, S. 105A. AIR 1958 Assam 86.

——S. 156 — Member — Liability of — It is ex lege — Is liable as contributory after commencement of winding up, even though allotment was void or was result of fraud. AIR 1955 NUC (Assam) 3634.

——Ss. 156 and 159 — Call if can be made by liquidator — Suit to recover unpaid calls — Bar of limitation — Amendment of plaint — Amended cause of action stated to be to realise statutory debt created by S. 156 — Suit, if maintainable — Limitation Act (1908), Art. 102. See Ibid, S. 159. AIR 1950 Bom 386 (DB).

——Ss. 156, 186 — Applicability of S. 186 to liability created by S. 156—Section 186 has no reference to the statututory liability created by S. 156. See Ibid, S. 186. AIR 1950 Bom 386 (DB).

——S. 156—Liability of contributory to contribute—Nature of.

On a winding up order being made the liability of a contributory to contribute to the assets of the company to the extent set out in S. 156 becomes an absolute liability which arises by reason of statute and not by reason of contract. But that liability is not confined to the amount of the calls made and which were not paid. The liability extends, in the case of a shareholder of a company limited by shares, to the unpaid amount of the shares. 52 Bom L R 559: 20 Comp Cas 325: AIR 1950 Bom 386 (388) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

——Ss. 156 and 187—Contractual and statutory debts due to company — Distinction — Procedure to realise debts.

A clear distinction must be made between debts due to the company which are contractual debts and debts due to the company which are statutory debts by reason of S. 156. A liquidator is under no obligation to follow any particular procedure or to obtain the sanction of the Court in order to realise a contractual debt. If the liquidator wants to recover a debt which is a statutory debt created by reason of S. 156 he cannot recover it by any other method except by the mode laid down in S. 187. The reason for this distinction is that contractual debts constitute the assets of the company, and the assets of the company have got to be realised by the liquidator on the company being wound up. The statutory liability of a contributory under S. 156 is entirely a different matter. It is not to be realised in the ordinary course, but it is only to be realised after the Court has applied its mind to various considerations laid down in S. 187. It is only when the Court is satisfied that a contributory should be called upon to discharge his statutory liability that the Court may make a call and ask him to pay the liability. 52 Bom L R 559: 20 Comp Cas 325: AIR 1950 Bom 386 (388, 389) (Pt C) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 156—Liability under—Ex lege liability.

The liability of a member of a company under S. 156 is not ex contractu but ex lege. It is by reason of the fact that the name of a certain person appears on the register of a company that he becomes liable as a contributory. It is, therefore, no answer for the contributory against the claim of the company to say that although his name appears on the register he is not liable because he has sold his shares to a purchaser who has not got his name registered in the register. In the absence of rectification of the register under S. 38, his liability is absolute under S. 156. 52 Bom L R 40: (1950) 20 Comp Cas 26: AIR 1950 Bom 217 (218, 219, 220) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 8) (DB).

——S. 156—Scope—Ss. 155 and 156 show that the right which the liquidator has against the contributory is a statutory one and not a contractual one between the shareholders and the company. See Ibid, S. 155. AIR 1956 Mad 448.

——Ss. 156 and 101 — Applicability— Person nominally applying for shares to inveigle real subscribers entered on the register of shareholders — Liability to be included in the list of contributories—Private company.

Mere dishonourable conduct like a person nominally applying for shares in order to inveigle other real shareholders into subscribing for shares in the company, would not be a bar to considering the legal objections urged by him to be made liable as a contributory or share-holder. Thus a man may subcribe nominally and bogusly a big sum for a charitable purpose, with a clear understanding with the persons who went to him for subscrip'ion, that not a pie should be demanded from him, and that his subscription was only intended to make other men act on it as if it were real and pay up real amounts, though of smaller figures and yet he may not be liable to pay a pie if he set up and proves the above dishonourable conduct or understanding. But it is obvious that any such dishonourable conduct or understanding will not also relieve him from legal liability where it exists otherwise.

Section 101 of the Companies Act, as to the conditions for applications for and allotment of shares, applies only to public companies and not to private companies. It is not necessary to produce the order of allotment to prove the validity of an entry in the register of share-holders, though it is desirable to do so.

The liability of a member of a company to be included in the list of contributories under S. 156 of the Companies Act is not ex contractu but ex lege, and arises by reason of the fact that the name of the person appears on the register of members of the company, and it is therefore no answer for the contributory against the claim of the company to say that, although his name appears on the register, he is not liable, because the allotment to him was void, or because he has sold his shares to another, and in the absence of rectification of the register by an application by him under section 38 soon after he comes to know that his name is entered in the register of members fraudulently or without sufficient cause, his liability becomes absolute under S. 156 of the Companies Act, all the more so when winding up also has supervened. Where a person allows his name to remain on the register, without having it removed promptly (on some ground or other) he will be liable on the doctrine of holding over.

Authorities reviewed. (1951) 1 Mad L J 488: 64 Mad L W 683: ILR (1952) Mad 108: (1951) 21 Comp C 201: AIR 1951 Mad 890 (892, 893) (Pts A, B) (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

——S. 156—Member, liability of—Name entered in register of share-holders to knowledge of person—Name not removed till winding up started—Doctrine of holding out.

If any person whose name is included in the register of share-holders of a company becomes aware that circumstances are such that, if proceedings are brought against the company, he would succeed in having his name removed and the register rectified he must do so promptly. He must not stand by and wait and then, at a later stage with knowledge that he has been held out to the public as a share-holder of the company, seek to have his name removed. 63 MLJ 859 (P C); (1939) 2 MLJ 122; AIR 1950 Bom 217; AIR 1950 All 508 Rel. on.

The result of this doctrine of holding out is that if a person's name is on the register with his consent, and he claims to have it removed on some ground or other, he must exercise the right promptly, otherwise, he forfeits it. Even where a name is, pursuant to a void contract placed on the register, delay after knowledge may be fatal. 1951-21 Com Cas 201: 64 Mad L W 683: ILR 1952 Mad 108: 1951 Mad W N 266: 1951-1 Mad L J 488: AIR 1951 Mad 890 (893, 894) (Pt C) (Prs 6, 7) (DB).

——S. 156—Voluntary winding up — Liability as contributories of present member—Notice making call issued—Balance of share money not paid—Company then going into voluntary liquidation—Contractual liability of members is turned into statutory liability—Suit to enforce such liability—It is governed by Art. 120 and not by Art. 112, Limitation Act.

Once a call is made by the directors with regard to the unpaid share amount and the date of payment has passed, it ordinarily assumes the character of a debt due to the company. However, by reason of the provision in S. 156, Companies Act, 1913 the nature of his contractual liability becomes a statutory one on the company being wound up Thus such a member will be liable to contribute to the assets of such company under the statutory liability imposed on him. The mere fact that the directors had given a notice calling upon the shareholder to pay the unpaid share amount before winding up does not make it a contractual liability after the supervening event of the voluntary winding up of the company. AIR 1932 P C 240, Rel. on; AIR 1942 All 136, Disting.

To a suit, therefore, brought by the liquidator to enforce this statutory liability and recover the balance of call money, Art. 120 and not Art. 112 of the Limitation Act applies. (1963) 1 Com L J 154: (1963) 33 Com Cas 713: AIR 1963 Mys 61 (63, 64) (Pt C) (Prs 9, 10, 11, 12).

——Ss. 156, 179 (a), 212 and 159 - Liability on winding up—Nature of - Suit by liquidator to enforce liability — Limitation — (Limitation Act (1908), Art. 120) —(Companies Act (1956), Ss. 457 (1) (a), 512, 426 and 429). See Ibid, S. 179 (a). AIR 1956 Nag 204.

——Ss. 156, 158, 159, 186 and 187 — Claim under S. 187—Limitation —(Companies Act (1956), Ss. 426, 428, 429, 469 and 470)—(Limitation Act (1908), Art. 112).

The debt under the statute is a new creation quite distinct and apart from any pre-existing contractual liability. When the application made by the Liquidator is for making a call under S. 187 of the Act, and not one for enforcing a pre-existing contractual liability under S. 186, the application cannot be held to be barred by time. AIR 1956 Nag 204 ; I L R 20 Bom 654; ILR 31 Mad 66, Rel. on. 1957 M P L J 77 (Nag) : ILR (1956) Nag 803.

——Ss. 156 and 187 — Company — Winding up — Liability of shareholder in respect of unpaid calls—Calls can be recovered even if time-barred when winding up order is made — Companies Act (1956), Ss. 426, 470.

On a winding up order being made, the liability of a contributory to contribute to the assets of the company to the extent set out in S. 156 becomes an absolute liability which arises by reason of statute and not by reason of contract. Hence, the liability to pay calls which was a contractual debt as between the shareholders and the company becomes a statutory liability to contribute to the assets of the company when the winding up order is made.

If the liquidator wants to recover a debt which is a statutory debt created by reason of S. 156 he cannot recover it by any other method except by the mode laid down in S. 187. Unpaid calls can be recovered even though they are barred by limitation when the winding up order was made. The liability of the member is not extinguished on the expiry of the period of limitation for enforcing the call made by the company before liquidation. A I R 1950 Bom 386, Rel. on. (1964) 32 Com Cas 470 : AIR 1962 Punj 526 (528, 529) (Pt A) (Prs 6, 8) (DB).

2. Extent of Liability.

——Ss. 156, 54A, 55—Liability of member — Surrender of shares by a subscriber to memorandum resulting in reduction of share capital — No sanction of Court—Surrender is illegal. See Ibid, S. 54A. AIR 1955 Madh Bha 166.

——Ss. 156 and 187—Calling of entire unpaid capital —(Companies Act (1956), Ss. 426 and 470).

The liability to contribute to the assets of the company is limited to an amount sufficient for the purposes indicated in S. 156 and the Court must consider it necessary for the purposes indicated in S. 187; and the amount of the call has to be determined with reference to the facts of each case. The mere fact that Rs. 5 per share remains unpaid from the contributory does not warrant the making of a call of the entire sum. The Court cannot act upon the supposition that it may be necessary for the success of the proposed scheme that there would be a prompt payment by everyone concerned. The Court cannot lose sight of the fact that recovery may involve considerable delay and expense. There would be no point in realizing the entire sum and incurring 15 per cent of that sum as commission when the total sum is not shown to be necessary for the purposes stated in S. 187. 1957 M P L J 77 : I L R (1956) Nag 803.

——Ss. 156, 158 and 166 — Fully paid-up shareholder is not contributory — Cannot apply for winding up.

Section 156, Companies Act, clearly says that every present and past member shall 'subject to the provisions of this section' be liable to contribute, and by virtue of Cl. (iv) a fully paid-up share-holder is not liable to contribute. Consequently, reading Ss. 158 and 156, it can be clearly seen that a fully paid-up share-holder is not a contributory and as such has no locus standi to file a petition for winding up under S. 166 of the Act. (Difference between the English Act of 1862 and the Indian Act pointed out.) AIR 1930 Mad 240; A I R 1934 Mad 476; A I R 1938 All 613; A I R 1942 Bom 231; A I R 1916 Lah 78 (2) and A I R 1954 Cal 195, Not Foll. A I R 1950 E P 328, Rel. on.

Even if a fully paid-up share-holder has, under the law, locus standi to file an application for winding up he cannot maintain such an application without an allegation and proof of there remaining some assets after the winding up in which he can claim some payment. Hence, where there is not only no proof that there would be any surplus left, but on the other hand there is a clear admission in the petition itself that the Company is in a state of insolvency, the application for winding up filed by fully paid-up share-holders on the allegations made cannot be and ought not to be accepted. ILR (1955) Cut 363 : AIR 1955 Orissa 84 (90, 91, 92, 93) (Pt B) (Prs 27, 37, 43).

——S. 156—Set-off —Dividends due whether can be adjusted against amount due as contributory.

There is no authority to apply other principles in suitable cases and to allow a member to set-off a sum due to him on account of dividends or profits against the sums due from him as a contributory although such a claim cannot be deemed, in view of S. 156 (1) (vii), to be a debt of the company payable to a member. A perusal of sub-S. (1) (vii) of S. 156 and other provisions relating to contributories in part 5 of the Companies Act does not suggest that S. 156 (1) (vii) was intended to give any relief of any kind to contributories.

On the contrary its object appears to be to impose further hardship on these persons since its effect is that they are not even permitted to rank as creditors of the company in respect of any sums due to them on account of dividends or profits and that such sums can only be claimed by them if and when all the debts of the company have been discharged and there remains a surplus available for distribution among the contributories when the stage contemplated by S. 192 of the Act is reached. 57 Punj L R 511 : (1955) 25 Com Cas 476 : ILR (1955) Punj 1258 : AIR 1955 Punj 249 (250) (Pr 5).

3. Contributory.

——Ss. 156, 158, 166, 167, 211, 228 and 270 to 272—Company incorporated outside India, carrying on business in India — Winding up as unregistered company — Foreign creditors can prove their claims.

In view of the specific provisions of Ss. 156, 158, 166, 167, 211, 228 and 270 to 272 of the Companies Act, 1913, and of the general principles, foreign creditors of a company which is incorporated outside India (in England) and carried on business in India can prove their claims in the winding up proceedings of the company as an unregistered company in India. A I R 1952 Mad 136, Affirmed. Such winding up of the business in a country other than the country in which the company was incorporated is really an ancillary winding up of the main company whose winding up may have already been taken up in that country or may be taken up at the proper time.

Sub-s. (3) of S. 271 says that the company incorporated outside India may be wound up as an unregistered company when it ceases to carry on business in India. All the creditors and contributories are really creditors and contributories of the company incorporated outside India and therefore all of them on principle, should be able to do what creditors and contributories resident in India can do in the winding up proceedings. ——Ss. 156, 158 and 30—Persons acting as directors—Provision for acquisition of qualifying shares within specified time—Failure—Directors ceasing to be such before specified time—Subsequent winding up —Liability to be placed on list of contributories.

Held, on facts that the directors had two months locus penitentiae to acquire the necessary qualification and their failure was to result in automatic vacation of office. In fact they had ceased to function as directors even within these two months and there after there could be no obligation imposed by Art. 100 on them to acquire the shares. Hence it could not be said that there was any implied contract between them and the company that the latter will allot the shares to them and put them on the register. As the acceptance by the Company by the allotment of shares was necessary to bring into existence a contract and there was no such allotment within the material time it could not be said that there was any contract between them and the Company. The appellants were not on the register of the Company and the liquidator was seeking to place them on the register which he was not entitled to do in the circumstances of the case. 59 Bom L R 591 : ILR (1957)

——S. 156—Member, liability of—Name entered in register of share-holders to knowledge of person—Name not removed till winding up started—Doctrine of holding out.

If any person whose name is included in the register of share-holders of a company becomes aware that circumstances are such that if proceedings are brought against the company, he would succeed in having his name removed and the register rectified he must do so promptly. He must not stand by and wait and then, at a later stage with knowledge that he has been held out to the public as a share-holder of the company, seek to have his name removed : A I R 1932 P C 240; A I R 1939 Mad 803; AIR 1950 Bom 217 and AIR 1950 All 508, Rel. on.

The result of this doctrine of holding out is that if a person's name is on the register with his consent and he claims to have it removed on some ground or other, he must exercise the right promptly otherwise he forfeits it. Even where a name is, pursuant to a void contract, placed on the register delay after knowledge may be atal. 1951 M W N 266 : 1951-1 Mad L J 488 : (1951) 21 Comp Cas 201 : 64 Mad L W 683 : ILR (1952) Mad 108 : AIR 1951 Mad 890 (893, 894) (Pt C) (Prs 6, 7) (DB).

All the three appellants held the position of directors of the company from the very beginning. They subscribed to the memorandum of the association of the company dated some time in April 1949. The company was actually registered on 5th May, 1949. A resolution of the company was passed on 2nd January, 1950, according to which formally shares were allotted to directors. All this was not without the knowledge of the appellants. The Company went into liquidation some time in April, 1950. The names of the appellants had been in the register of the members of the company and, before the winding up, not one of them took any proceeding to have the register rectified and his name removed therefrom. After the winding up, the situation had altered; the rights of third persons had come in and the liability of the appellants arose under the law and not only under the contract. The appellants were subscribers to the memorandum and it was not a case of no contract between them and the company.

Held, that each one of the appellants being a subscriber to the memorandum of association of the company and being a member of it on its register after the start of the winding up of the company, they had to be shown in the list of contributories of the company. All that S. 159 does is to specify the nature of the liability of the contributory, the extent of which is laid down in S. 156 and it further lays down the point of time at which the liability of the contributory is crystallised. The nature of the liability is that it is a debt and the point of time is the time which is specified in the calls. The section does not confer any power upon the liquidator to make a call and there is no other section in the Act which confers such powers. A call which can only be made by the Court and, therefore, there is no liability upon a contributory to pay any such call made by the liquidator.

Where, therefore, a suit was instituted by the liquidator of a company for recovering the debt due by the defendant to the company in respect of the unpaid calls, but it being realised that the suit. as it stood, was liable to be dismissed by reason of the statute of limitation the plaint was amended and the amended cause of action was that on the winding up order being made the liability of the defendant to pay the amount of the calls became a statutory liability, and such liability was not barred by limitation :

Held, that the suit filed by the liquidator, if looked upon as a suit to recover a contractual debt, was barred by limitation. If looked upon as a suit to realise a statutory debt created by S. 156, then the suit was not maintainable because no call in respect of that liability was made by the Court, and in the absence of any such call the statutory liability could not be realised by the liquidator. 52 Bom L R 559 : 20 Comp Cas 325 : A I R 1950 Bom 386 (388, 391) (Pt: A) (Prs 3, 10) (DB).

(Companies Act (1913), S. 162.)

1. Scope.
2. Winding up on resolution of company.
3. Suspension of business.
4. Inability to pay debts.
   (a) Inability should amount to commercial insolvency.
   (b) Non-payment of disputed debts.
5. Just and equitable.
   (a) Disappearance of substratum of company.
   (b) Complaints relating to management.

1. Scope.

——S. 162—Scope — A Court should not entertain a petition for winding up of a company which was formed in contravention of S. 4 (2). A I R 1954 All 555.

——S. 162—Discretion of Court—'May'—Effect.

As the section begins with the word "may" its effect, read by itself, is to confer a discretion on the Court to order or not to order a winding up even when the inability of a company to pay its debts is proved. (1954) 24 Com Cas 283 : 58 Cal W N 517 : A I R 1954 Cal 583 (585) (Pt A) (Pr 16) (DB).

Where the application was not in proper form not being a verified application supported by a separate affidavit, the defect alleged is one that the Court can excuse and the appellate Court cannot interfere with the order that was made. on this ground. 91 Cal L J 98 : A I R 1954 Cal 195 (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 162—Verification of the application.

Where it cannot be made out on a perusal of the petition which of the statements have been ascertained from searches, and so it is impossible to know which statements are affirmed by the deponent to be true to his knowledge, solemn affirmations of such nature are worse than useless. This kind of affirmation cannot be too strongly condemned. 91 Cal L J 98 : A I R 1954 Cal 195 (196) (Pt B) (Pr 5) (DB).

——S. 162 — Petition for winding up — It is discretionary with Court to admit it—Debt on which petition founded disputed bona fide — Presentation of petition is abuse of process of Court.

If a proper case is made out, the Court may at the time of the presentation of the petition for winding up (a) refuse to admit the petition or (b) may admit the petition and adjourn the hearing of the petition until such time as the Court thinks fit. There is nothing in the Act or Rules which deprives the Court of the discretion which it has in every other case, so that the Court may, if it thinks fit, refuse to admit a petition for winding up or as an alternative course, give the company concerned notice that a petition has been presented, so that it may take proceedings to restrain the petitioner from proceeding with his petition. The Court has also the power instead of admitting the petition ex parte to direct service of notice on the company and to decide in the presence of both parties whether the petition should be admitted and, if so, on what terms and whether the Court should stay the further hearing of the petition. This procedure has the merit of simplicity and of avoiding multiplicity of litigation. The order for admission of the petition is a judicial order and such order may be made either ex parte or on notice to and in the presence of the party who is vitally affected by the order.

The presentation of a petition for winding up is an abuse of the process of the Court if the debt on which the petition is founded is disputed bona fide. The Court will not allow its process of winding up an insolvent company to be used as an instrument for extorting a claim which is disputed bona fide. The Court will at least stay the hearing of the petition where there is ground for supposing that there is bona fide dispute as to a substantial part of the claim.

Where the real object of the petitioner is to put pressure on the company and not to wind up the company, the Court will stop it, if its continuance is likely to cause damage to the company. 39 Bom 16, Relied on. (1952) 22 Com Cas 62 : 56 Cal W N 29.

See Insurance Companies Act (1938), S 53. AIR 1963 Mad 297.

——Ss. 162, 166 — Scope — Petition by directors for winding up without sanction of general meeting — Maintainability.

There is nothing in S. 162 or S. 166 which compels one to come to the conclusion that the directors of a company cannot present a petition for winding up without the sanction of the general meeting.

Even assuming that this cannot be done, the petition cannot be dismissed, but it should be adjourned to enable the directors to summon a meeting of the share-holders and obtain their authority. AIR 1953 Pepsu 195, Not Foll.

The argument that the directors only cannot put an end to the company's existence by filing a winding up petition does not appeal because the Court is not bound to direct a winding up merely because the directors have presented a petition. The Court will make a winding up order only if it is satisfied that the requirements of the law are satisfied and the facts justify the course. Moreover, it will be open to the share-holders to oppose the petition and to apprise the Court of the fact that the majority of the share-holders are opposed to the petition. It will be then open to the Court before passing final order to have a meeting of the share-holders convened to ascertain the wish of the majority

There is no statutory provision expressly requiring the consent of a general meeting for the presentation of a winding up petition. It follows therefore that the directors have the power to do what the company could have done, namely, to present the petition. ——S. 162 — Applicability — Petition for winding up by secured creditor.

A secured creditor is as much entitled as of right to file a petition for winding up as an unsecured creditor. The rule in bankruptcy that before a secured creditor can file a petition for winding up he has to abandon his security or to value the security and aver that after giving credit to such value there would be a balance due and payable to him does not apply in winding up. (1899) 10 Ch D 681. Rel. on.

The general rule is that a creditor who cannot get paid has a right to a winding up order, whether he be a secured or an unsecured creditor. But this right of the creditor is always subject to the discretion of the Court. The Court may, nevertheless, refuse to make a winding-up order having regard to the wishes of the majority of the creditors. The order will also be refused if it would not benefit the creditors generally, but only the petitioning creditor.

While prima facie a person having an unsatisfied debt due from company has a right ex debito justitiae to a winding-up order nevertheless the Court would not make an order for the winding up if there was a large mass of other creditors opposed to the winding up.

Where the secured creditor had ample security for his debt and there was no averment that his security was insufficient and he never demanded additional security of the company on the ground that the security had become insufficient, though the mortgage deed contained a provision enabling him to demand such additional security and except for him no other creditor desired that the company should be wound up :

Held, that no useful purpose will be served by the winding up at his instance except the realisation by him of his security. (1882) 21 Ch. D. 769, Rel. on.

In such a case winding up will not be ordered. (1954) 24 Com Cas 249: (1954) 2 Mad L J 467 : 1954 Mad W N 405 : 67 Mad L W 1100 : ILR (1954) Mad 1187 : A I R 1955 Mad 582 (583, 584) (Prs 3, 5, 7) (DB).

——S. 162—Applicability—Company which has been struck off under S 247 (5) can be wound up. See Ibid, S. 247 (5). (1954) 1 Mad L J 468.

——S. 162 — Applicability — Conditions—Provisions of section when can be invoked.

An order for winding up a company is a compulsory process to be thought of when the conditions mentioned in the section are satisfied and implies exercise of discretion. It is not to be sought for as a short-cut and cheap device to coerce payment and stifle contest. The mere failure of payment cannot be treated as a decisive factor to entitle a party invoking the aid of the section or as a ground for the Court embarking on an elaborate inquiry for the purpose of determining complicated questions as if it is a suit to be tried though no Court-fee is paid. ——Ss. 162, 203, 218 — Voluntary liquidation — Effect.

A voluntary liquidation of a company under S. 203 is no bar to its being compulsorily wound up under S. 162 at the instance of creditors or contributories as laid down in S. 218. In construing the scope and effect of S. 218, the principle is well settled that, in spite of the fact that voluntary liquidation is valid, a creditor might apply for compulsory winding up of a company, though his right is not prejudiced by such voluntary liquidation, while the contributory could only apply for it, if his right as such has been prejudiced by voluntary liquidation. It therefore follows as a corollary that, if the voluntary liquidation be void ab initio, then even the contributory could make an application for compulsorily winding up the company under S. 162, even though his right might not have been prejudiced by such voluntary liquidation. Held, on facts that when the financial position of the company is such that against the admitted assets of the value of Rs. 10,00,000 there is a debt of Rs. 8,00,000 only, it can by no means be said that the company is unable to pay its debts. 93 Cal L J 271 : (1954) 24 Com Cas 507 : A I R 1954 Cal 499 (502) (Pt B) (Prs 14, 16) (DB).

4 (a). Inability should amount to commercial insolvency.

——S. 162 (v)—Commercial insolvency.

A company becomes commercially insolvent when its assets are such, and its existing liabilities are such, as to make it reasonably certain—as to make the Court feel satisfied—that the existing and probable assets would be insufficient to meet the existing liabilities. (1869) L R 9 Eq 122, Rel. on. ('50) 55 Mys H C R 107 (DB).

——S. 162 (v)—Commercially insolvent—Meaning— Company heavily indebted — No chance of being able to carry on its business — Directors and some officers of company accused of black-marketing — Company held was commercially insolvent.

The expression "commercially insolvent" means that the assets of the company are such, and its existing liabilities are such, as to make it resonably certain as to make the Court feel satisfied that the existing and probable assets would be insufficient to meet the existing liabilities.

A company was heavily indebted to various creditors and all its assets were in mortgage or in pledge. There was no chance of its being able to carry on its business. As a matter of fact, the balance-sheet and the state of affairs of the company proved that the substratum was gone and that there was no possible chance of profit being made. The fact that some of the directors of the company and some officers were being accused of black-marketing and some trial was going or had been going on showed that they were not persons who could be entrusted with the management of the company, or, at any rate, they would not inspire any confidence of the persons who were likely to come forward to finance the working of the company:

Held, that it must be held that the company was commercially insolvent, and a winding up order should be passed. 20 Com Cas 311 : AIR 1950 East Punj 142 (148, 149) (Pt C) (Prs 22 to 24).

Where a company is a private company and particularly where it is nothing more than a partnership converted into a company, the Court in winding up will apply to a very great extent the rules applicable to winding up a partnership. A I R 1955 N U C (Cal) 402 (DB).

——S. 162 (vi)—Just and equitable—(Companies Act (1956), S. 433 (f)).

Where a company's capital is not distributed amongst the members of one and the same family and some of the shareholders are total strangers, the company by no means be regarded as a "domestic or family concern" and hence the circumstances which justify the dissolution of a partnership would not apply to wind up such company. (1957) 27 Com Cas 340 : A I R 1956 Pepsu 89 (91, 92) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 8).

——S. 162 (vi)—Just and equitable—(Companies Act (1956), S. 433 (f)).

In deciding whether it is just and equitable to wind up a company, interest of the general body of shareholders is a matter of primary consideration in such cases. (1957) Com Cas 340 : A I R 1956 Pepsu 89 (97) (Pt M) (Pr 30).

——S. 162 (vi)—Just and equitable—(Companies Act (1956), S. 433 (f)).

It is true that the "just and equitable" clause ought not to be confined to circumstances ejusdem generis with those set out in the foregoing clauses of S. 162. But, wide as the powers are, they ought to be exercised with greater care and circumspection. There must be very strong grounds for exercising the discretion, particularly at the instance of a shareholder and against the unanimous view of all the rest of them. (1957) 27 Com Cas 340 : A I R 1956 Pepsu 89 (97) (Pt N) (Pr 31).

——Ss. 162 (v) and (vii), 153 — Banking Companies Act (1949), S. 38 — Receipt by creditors of instalment under scheme sanctioned under S. 153 - Petition by them under S. 162 is technically barred but winding up petition on allegations that Bank cannot meet its liabilities can be allowed on just and equitable grounds. A I R 1955 N U C (Punj) 4983.

——S. 162 (vi) —Power under when to be exercised—Withdrawal of petition filed under S. 162 (vi) —Substitution under R. 11 (i) of Rules framed under S. 246 — When permitted—(Companies Act (1913), S. 246) —Rules under. R. 11 (i).

The power given by clause (vi) of S. 162 to the Court should not be exercised unless there is very strong ground for acting upon it because Companies are governed by majority of their own members and where there is a domestic tribunal which has powers to decide upon a question, it should, if possible, be left to the domestic tribunal.

Where in an extraordinary general meeting of share-holders of a Bank a resolution is passed by a majority of votes and a petition for winding up of the Bank is made under S. 162 (vi) but is withdrawn, the Court will not permit substitution under R. 11 (i) of Rules framed under S. 246 unless it is shown that the majority of the share-holders who have the voting power have used that power for their own commercial interests outside the Bank in disregard of the interest of the minority. In such a case there is no obligation on the Court to substitute another person as petitioner merely because he is desirous of prosecuting the original petition. Rule 11 (i) leaves the matter to the discretion of the Court for otherwise the door would be laid open to unlimited opportunities for blackmail, especially in times of financial panic. (1952) 22 Com Cas 279 : A I R 1952 Punj 132 (133) (Prs 14, 16).

——S. 162 (vi)—Just and equitable—Test—No likelihood that company will carry on or that its object will be attained—It is just and equitable to wind up company.

In considering whether it is just and equitable to wind up a company the decisive question must be the question whether at the date of the presentation of the winding up petition there was any reasonable hope that the object of trading at a profit, with a view to which the company was formed, could be attained. It is, therefore, for the company to satisfy the Court that there was any reasonable hope of the company working at a profit. If a company has not got enough credit in the market and has not got sufficient means even to pay its employees, it is not likely that it will be able to carry on and its object would be attained and it is just and equitable to wind up the company : A I R 1936 P. 5 (a). Disappearance of substratum of company.

——S. 162 (vi) — Disappearance of substratum of company—When ground for winding up order.

A creditor will not ordinarily be heard to urge that a winding up order should be made because the substratum of the company is gone, not for the reason that he is technically and as a matter of law barred from taking that ground at all, but for the reason that it is not a proper ground for a creditor to urge, except in very special circumstances.

Whether the substratum of a company is gone and the object with which it was formed, has become impossible of further pursuit, is usually the proper concern of only of its share-holders and contributories; a creditor cannot properly be allowed to use it as a ground for breaking up the company unless by the disappearance of the substratum the recovery of his debt has been imperilled.

Further the reason that the substratum of a company is gone is not one of the specific grounds given in S. 162 of the Act for making a winding up order. The disappearance of the substratum is a circumstance in view of which the Court may, in a given case, consider it just and equitable that a winding up order should be made. (1947) 2 All E R 104, Rel. on. 93 Cal L J 271 : (1954) 24 Com Cas 507 : A I R 1954 Cal 499 (503, 504) (Pt C) (Prs 17, 19) (DB).

——S. 162—"Just and convenient."

If the substratum of the company is gone and there is no reasonable chance of the company starting business again it is just and convenient that the company should be wound up. 91 Cal L J 98 : AIR 1954 Cal 195 (196) (Pt C) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 162—Just and equitable ground for winding up—Substratum of company gone — It is just and equitable to wind up company — Application of principle.

When the substratum of the company is gone, it is just and equitable to wind up the Company. It is when the whole of the business which the company incorporated to carry on, had become impossible, Court might order the company to be wound up. (1867) 2 Ch A 737; and (1882) 20 Ch D 151 and (1947) 2 All E R 104 and (1882) 20 Ch D 169 and (1889) 61 L T 785 and (1947) S C 446, Rel. on. The impossibility must be either physical or legal impossibility or it may even amount to reasonable probability of the company not being able to carry out the main or dominant object. It is, however, necessary for the application of the principle that the main or primary object must have become impossible of fulfilment. The abandonment of the main or dominant object may be treated as one of the circumstances leading up to the commercial impossibility of the venture but it is not sufficient to support a petition for winding up on the ground that the substratum of the company is gone. (1946) 1 All E R 435 (439), Rel. on.

The difficulty in many cases is to determine which is the main or primary object or purpose or the substance of the venture, particularly having regard to the fact that the objects clause of the Memorandum is usually drawn in a very wide form. According to the rule of construction one or more paragraphs are taken as embodying the main or dominant object of the Company, and all other paragraphs are treated as merely ancillary. This rule may be referred to as the main objects rule of construction.

Every rule of construction contains by implication the saving clause "unless a contrary intention appear by the document." The Court is bound to give effect to the intention expressed. ——Ss. 162, 175—Provisional liquidator — Appointment of — Provisional liquidator not to be appointed pending order on winding up application on ground of deadlock in management.

An application for the appointment of a provisional liquidator is not ordinarily allowed except on the petition of a creditor who has been unable to obtain payment of his money, or unless the company asks for or agrees to the appointment. The dangers involved in appointing a provisional liquidator and then finding that there is no justification for making a winding up order are obvious. The consequences to the company of the making of a wrong order in such a matter are far more serious than the granting of an injunction which has ultimately to be dissolved. The object in appointing a provisional liquidator is to ensure that there will be a fair distribution of the assets of the company and that one creditor will not be permitted to benefit at the expense of the others. A public company cannot be wound up on the ground of a deadlock in the management and pending the making of a winding up order a provisional liquidator cannot be appointed with full power to carry on the business. If there is an honest difference of views between a director and the other directors and he on that account, has lost confidence in them, the view of the majority must prevail; and he can have no cause for any justifiable complaint. His remedy would ordinarily lie in appealing to the general body, which forms the domestic tribunal in case of a limited concern. Where there is no allegation, much less proof, of any misappropriation or malversation of funds by the directors or that any one of them, because of the preponderance of his voting power, a managing the affairs of the company for his personal advantage, the mere fact that a director can be or is being out-voted by the majority in the internal management of the company, or that he is being singled out by the rest of the directors, ought not to be regarded a sufficient ground to wind up the company under the just and equitable clause. ——S. 162 (vi)—Just and equitable.

If the company or any of its members satisfies the Court that the Company could be continued without the conduct of its business being subject to the com-

5 (c). Other grounds.

——S. 162 (vi) — Just and equitable ground — Dishonest conduct or unauthorised business resulting in profits to company — (Companies Act (1956), S. 433 (f).)

In a case where the legal rights are not clear and the company in its own interests acts in a particular way but the other party has his remedy by a regular civil suit, it is a dispute, which can be the subject-matter, of a civil suit, and as such cannot be the basis for holding that there was any dishonesty in the conduct of the company as such : (1924) A C 783, (Distinguished.) There is no just and equitable ground to wind up the company simply because, in the past, they had carried on unauthorised business when that business has only resulted in profit to the company. An ultra vires transaction on the part of the directors is of itself no ground for a winding up order. It follows that an ultra vires transaction which was to the benefit of the company and its share-holders would still less be sufficient justification for a winding up order. AIR 1932 P C 1, Rel. on. SECTION 163

——Ss. 163 and 162—Unable to pay its debts — Dispute as to liability for immediate payment—Practice of Court.

The principle on which the Court will forbear deciding the dispute and making a winding up order in case it decides it against the company, is that winding-up proceedings are not intended to be exploited as a normal alternative to the ordinary mode of debt realisation and that it is more convenient that claims should be investigated and decided in a regular action. The basis of an order for winding up against a company is that the company has ceased to be commercially solvent and accordingly, it is fit and proper in the interest of the creditors and share-holders not to allow it to function further as a company. When there has been a failure to pay a debt in accordance with a statutory notice of demand, insolvency is to be presumed, but it may also be proved in other ways. The basis of a winding-up order on the ground of a company's inability to pay its debts is, however, always insolvency. When a company has failed to pay a debt, but it appears that the failure occurred, not because the company was unable to pay, but because it disputed the liability on a substantial ground and there is nothing to show that if the dispute is decided against the company it will not or will be unable to pay the debt, there is no present proof of insolvency and therefore no sufficient basis for making a winding-up order. In such a case the winding-up Court will only see if the grounds on which the liability is disputed are substantial and if the dispute is in that sense 'bona fide'. If it finds the issue regarding the bona fide in favour of the company, it will ordinarily not proceed further and decide the dispute itself and determine whether or not a debt exists and has become payable. In such a case, the Court will either dismiss the petition for winding-up or keep it pending till the creditor has established his claim in a regular action. A company which has to sell its capital assets in order to pay its debts cannot ordinarily be said to be commercially solvent, unless the assets are surplus assets. On the other hand there could not be an order for winding up merely on the basis that if there had been debts immediately payable the company would be unable to pay them. 57 Cal W N 689 : ILR (1956) 2 Cal 95 : AIR 1955 Cal 273 (274, 275, 276) (Prs 6, 7, 10) (DB).

See Ibid, S. 162. AIR 1962 Guj 269.

——Ss. 163 and 166 — Petition for winding up — Petitioners stating therein that they were creditors to extent of certain amount—Company not disputing amount but stating that it had counter claim which was vague - Petitioners held were creditors.

In the petition for winding up, the petitioners had definitely alleged that they were creditors to the extent of a certain amount. Along with their petition they filed a photographic copy of the account and also the letter which the company had sent in reply to the notice of demand sent by the petitioners. It was never denied in the letter that the amount as such was not due. What was claimed was that the company had a lien on this debt because there were certain claims which the company had against the petitioners. Even in the reply filed in Court it was admitted that the books of the company showed a certain credit to the petitioning creditors but there again some counter-claim had been made by the company against the petitioners and all they said was that the accounts required scrutiny and that the petitioners were not presently entitled to the sum claimed, why it was not clearly stated :

Held, that there was no bona fide dispute with regard to the amount due from the company to the petitioners. It was open to the company to adduce evidence to show the correctness of their allegations but they never did anything of the kind. On the other hand, their reply to the petition showed that they were not very serious in their opposition to the winding up order. The petitioners were, therefore, creditors within the meaning of Ss. 163 and 166 and had locus standi to bring the application ; (1870) 11 Eq 149, (1880) 16 Ch D 246 and AIR 1929 Lah 651, Rel. on. 20 Com Cas 311 : AIR 1950 East Punj 142 (146, 147) (Pt B) (Prs 17, 18).

——S. 165 (vi)—Just and equitable.

An application for compulsory winding of the company was filed under Ss. 162 and 166, Companies Act, by certain persons who were fully paid-up share-holders of the company. None of the creditors of the company in spite of the active canvassing by the petitioners had joined the application for winding up. On the other hand they had filed affidavits into Court, saying that in the interest of the Company, no winding up order should be made. According to the oral and documentary evidence adduced in the case, the Company was carrying on its business successfully, getting the accounts audited regularly and was also paying dividends to the share-holders, and was meeting its current demands. Petitioner No. 1 and petitioner No. 14 were directors of the Company till 1950 and they never complained against the managing agents or about the management of the company. Many of the resolutions regarding the management of the Company now questioned were passed when they were directors. The evidence disclosed that the petitioners began to evince dissatisfaction of the Company's management only after 1950 when petitioner No. 14 constructed another Cinema house.

Held, that it was not just and equitable to order a winding up of the company as the petitioners had failed to make out a case for winding up. The application was due to the instigation of petitioner No. 14 and was not a bona fide application but on the other hand was a mala fide one. ——S. 166—Simultaneous applications for winding up—Maintainability—(High Courts (Punjab) Order (1947), Art. 13).

On 1st May, 1946 A filed an application in the High Court of Lahore for winding up a private limited company incorporated in 1941 with its registered office at Karnal. While it was still pending, A and other creditor B filed in December 1951, a second application for winding up the company in the East Punjab High Court. On an objection that the second application was not maintainable in view of the pending petition in the Lahore High Court.

Held, that Art. 13 of the High Court (Punjab) Order, 1947, had the effect of vesting jurisdiction in the Lahore High Court in respect of the petition pending there and the decision of that High Court in respect of that petition was as binding as a decision of the East Punjab High Court.

(2) That there was however no rule debarring a a person from instituting two or more identical suits in the same Court or different Courts of concurrent jurisdiction, and there was therefore no reason why two winding-up applications more or less identical could be maintained at the same time.

(3) That the only rule regulating such matters is contained in S. 10, C. P. Code, but that rule did not apply to the present case and what is more, the rule does not contemplate the dismissal of either suit or proceeding but merely the stay of the one for the other.

(4) That on general grounds too, there were several considerations why the appellant should not be debarred from seeking his remedy in the East Punjab High Court merely because another Court of competent jurisdiction is yet considering a similar prayer by him.

(5) That the old maxim of law that a Judge must extend his jurisdiction does not mean that he should usurp jurisdiction where none exists but does mean that he ought to amplify as far as possible the remedies he can grant.

(6) That there was therefore no legal bar to the maintaining of the second petition in spite of the previous application in the Lahore High Court. 56 Pun L R 8 : (1954) 24 Com Cas 77 : ILR (1954) Punj

2. Application by company.

——Ss. 166, 162 (1) and 174—Winding-up—Special resolution—Necessity of—Lacuna is fatal—S. 174 is no remedy.

Section 166 and S. 162, Cl. (1) should be read together and if they are so read, there can be little doubt that it is the company that can apply for compulsory winding up and in that case the company can be wound up only when its members assembled in a general meeting decide to present a petition for winding up by the Court. The Managing Director or for the matter of that any number of Directors, cannot constitute the company for the purposes of making an application for winding up. It may be that the Directors in case they find the company to be insolvent or unable to pay its debts, or in case there is any other urgent or important matter affecting the company which requires an investigation by the Court, would be justified in applying to the Court for compulsory winding up, but if they make such an application they would be doing so in their individual capacity and not in the name of the company. The company means the company as composed of all its members. It is true that the Managing Director does under the Articles of Association possess the power to institute or defend suits or other litigation on behalf of the company; but that power does not include the power to make an application for winding up in the name of the company; as it is the company itself which will decide whether to apply for compulsory winding up or not. Of course, if it decides to do so, it might authorise the Managing Director or any other member or person to make the necessary petition.

Section 174 of the Indian Companies Act and its compliance cannot make up for the fatal lacuna. For the meeting held by the Commissioner of the contributories and creditors combinedly cannot by any stretch of imagination or words be a substitute for a general meeting of the members. 4. Contributory's application.

——Ss. 166, 162 — Share-holder's petition for winding up — Majority of share-holders against winding up—Considerations for Court.

As between share-holders the wishes of the majority shall prevail. It is very important that the Court should not, unless a very strong case is made, take upon itself to interfere with the domestic forum which has been established for the management of the affairs of a company. The fact that the majority of the share-holders including an independent share-holder like the Government are against the winding up of the company and desire the company to continue is an important circumstance which must weigh with the Court in deciding whether it should or should not make a compulsory winding up order against the company. Of course if it holds that the substratum of the company is gone, this consideration would be entirely irrelevant for in such a case the majority cannot force the minority to continue the company. ——Ss. 166 and 170—Winding up petition by fully paid-up share-holder.

The right of a contributory to present a petition for winding up is declared in unqualified terms in S. 166. To annex a further condition to the exercise of that right that there should be an allegation and proof, that there would be surplus assets available for distribution, would be to add to the section and not to interpret it. When the applicant for winding up is a fully paid-up share-holder and no rights of creditors are involved the Court has always a discretion to decide whether it is in the best interests of all the persons concerned that the company should be wound up. Want of assets may be an element in determining whether the petition is bona fide or not but except to that extent it would not be a relevant consideration for deciding whether winding up should be ordered or not. Where a share-holder has made out a case for winding up a company the petition is not liable to be thrown out merely on the ground that he has not established that there will be surplus assets available for distribution and that is precisely what S. 170 enacts. Where the share-holders themselves passed a resolution for winding up the concern there cannot be any doubt that it is just and equitable that it should be wound up, upon a petition by a share-holder even though there is no allegation and proof that there would be surplus assets available for distribution. A I R 1955 N U C (Mad) 3935 (DB).

—— Ss 166 and 170 — Fully paid-up share-holder — Petition for winding-up by — No limitations apart from the Statute — Prima facie case of available assets on winding up — Tangible interest therein — If limited by.

Fully paid-up share-holder is a 'contributory' and can under S. 166 of the Companies Act file a petition for winding up as any other contributory. (A I R 1930 Mad 240; AIR 1938 All 613, Rel. on.)

In view of S. 170 of the Act, the fully paid-up share-holder is under no compelling necessity to prove the existence of available assets in which he has a tangible interest; the only limitations are those provided under S. 166 and the above restriction on his right to apply (held necessary in early English cases) is not to be found therein. His petition must be treated just like any other petition filed by any creditors or other contributory. A I R 1952 Mad 557 (559) (Prs 1, 5, 7).

The word 'contributories' in S. 166 of the Companies Act, 1913, includes a fully paid up shareholder, and since no limitation is placed by the section itself, a fully paid up share-holder need not allege or prove that in the case of winding up there will be substantial surpuls for distribution among the share holders. ((1950) 20 Com Cas 246, (doubted.) In the case of joint share-holders, there is nothing inherently wrong in a petition for winding up by one of the joint share-holders on his own behalf and in respect of those shares. If a fully paid-up share-holder presents a petition he must allege and prove to the extent of a prima facie case, that there are assets of such amount that in the winding up he will have a tangible interest.

Where a contributory who is a holder of fully paid up shares files an application for winding up and (1) does not allege that there is a surplus and (2) does not give prima facie evidence of the likelihood of there being some tangible surplus, he is not entitled to bring under the law a winding up petition because he has no interest in winding up and is not a contributory within the meaning of S. 166, although for the purpose of adjustment he will come within the definition of the word "contributory." 52 Pun L R 415 : 20 Comp Cas 246 : AIR 1950 East Punj 328 (333, 334) (Prs 27, 31).

——Ss. 166 and 218 — Registrar's right to apply — (Jammu and Kashmir Companies Act (1977), Ss. 166, 218.)

Under S. 166, Companies Act, the Registrar is entitled to present an application for winding up of the company where it is carrying on its business and not after it has gone into liquidation. There is no other provision in the Companies Act by which the Registrar has the right to institute an application for compulsory winding up of a Company when it has already been voluntarily wound up. On the other hand while the right of applying to the Court for winding up has been given to the Company or to any of its creditors or contributories or the Registrar under S. 166 of the Jammu and Kashmir Companies Act, 1977, S. 218 of the Act expressly lays down that winding up of a Company shall not bar the right of a creditor or a contributory to have it wound up by the Court. The omission of the Registrar from the provision of S. 218 is exceedingly significant and shows that the Registrar has no right to take initiative in such matter. AIR 1955 J & K 32 (33) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

—— S. 166 (aa)—Petition after voluntary liquidation.

Section 166 is applicable only in case the company is carrying on its business.

After the company has gone into voluntary liquidation the Registrar cannot ask for compulsory winding up of the company. AIR 1954 J & K 10 (11) (Pr 3).

●——Ss. 167, 156, 158, 166, 211, 228 and 270 to 272—Company incorporated outside India, carrying business in India — Winding up as unregistered company — Foreign creditors can prove their claims—See ibid, S. 156. AIR 1962 S C 500.

In India and Pakistan in view of the absence of reciprocity between these two countries, the unqualified application of the English rule of equal distribution of Indian assets among all creditors Pakistani and Indian will not be reasonable or equitable. The reasonable thing to do, where the bank in India has gone into liquidation, but the branches in Pakistan are doing business, is to allow proof of only such debts in the Indian liquidation which can either by the application of the rule of 'lex situs' or by the application of what is known as the proper law of the contract, be said to be properly recoverable in the Indian Union alone. If applying such principles of private international law any Pakistani debt is found to be recoverable in the Indian Union, proof of it may be allowed in the Indian liquidation subject to such terms and conditions as may be thought fit to be imposed in the particular facts of each case. If on the other hand it appears from the necessary course of business between the parties that a bank had localised its obligation to its customer or creditor, so as to confine it primarily, to a particular branch in the Indian Union, such a debt or claim must necessarily be provable in the Indian liquidition. Therefore the reasonable method of lessening the rigour of the rule which requires the giving of equal opportunities of participation to the foreign and the Indian creditors in an India liquidation is to allow only such Pakistani creditors to prove their claim in the winding up whose debts are properly recoverable in the Union of India according to the principles of International law of 'lex situs' on the 'proper law of the contract.' ——S. 168—Scope — Order of winding up—Relation back.

Under S. 168, Indian Companies Act the order of winding up dates back to the date of the application. Transactions subsequent to that date are not binding on the liquidator except with the specific sanction of the Court. ILR (1952) Cut 309 : (1953) 23 Com Cas 369: AIR 1954 Orissa 7 (Pr 13).

——Ss. 168 and 227 (2)—Raison d'etre of provisions contained in sections — (Companies Act (1956), S. 441).

The raison d'etre of the provisions contained in Ss. 168 and 227 is to prevent disposition of the property of the company made after presentation of the petition for compulsory winding up, without permission of the Court, with a view to avoid fraudulent preferences and to prevent other abuses attendant on transfer of assets of the company in contemplation of its liquidation. The terminus a quo for purposes of a statutory bar under S. 171 against commencing and continuing legal proceedings dates from the winding up order. It cannot be held that S. 168 controls the bar of limitation with respect to suits and other proceedings against a company. The words 'when a petition for winding up order is made' cannot be read in the words 'when a winding up order has been made' in S. 171. The doctrine of relation back is restricted in scope and cannot be extended for all purposes. In particular, it will not be correct to extend it, so as to interfere with the law of limitation and especially with the rule embodied in S. 9 of the Limitation Act. Moreover, if the scope of the doctrine of relation back is widened that will introduce considerable uncertainty regarding the termination of the period of limitation. For purposes of limitation the material date is the date of the winding up order. If the claim had become time-barred after the presentation of the petition for winding up but before the passing of the winding up order, the claim would become time-barred and the party would not be able to avail of the provisions of S. 171, for extending the period of limitation. (1958) 28 Com Cas 216 : AIR 1958 Punj 341 (344, 346) (Pt D) (Prs 15, 16, 19, 30, 31).

——Ss. 169, 171 and 232—Object and scope—Leave under S. 171 — Necessity — (Companies Act (1956), Ss. 442, 446 and 537).

The policy of law in enacting Ss. 169, 171 and 232 of the Act is to protect the assets of the Company for equitable distribution amongst those entitled and to prevent the administration being embarrassed by a general scramble of creditors. Therefore, leave under S. 171 is necessary in respect of a suit or proceeding against the Company. The material time with reference to which the question of leave is to be considered is the date of winding up order. Where, at the commencement of the suit the action was against the Company, but when the winding up order came to be passed there was already a decision in favour of the opposite party, and it was the Company which was interested in prosecuting a protective proceeding to relieve itself from the effect of an adverse decision no leave is necessary. ——Ss. 169 and 171 — Scope — (Companies Act (1956), Ss. 442 and 446).

The stay contemplated by S. 171, of suits and other legal proceedings, is of a peremptory nature. Under S. 169 the Court had a discretionary power to restrain proceedings against the company during the interval between the presentation of the petition for winding up of a company and making of an order for its winding up. Sections 169 and 171 deal with separate stages. Section 169 refers to the powers of the Court during the period between the presentation of the petition and the passing of an order for the winding up of a company. Institution of suits against a company after the presentation of the petition is within contemplation of S. 169. The second stage is reached when a winding up order has been made, in which case there is a statutory bar against commencement of proceeding with a suit or other legal proceedings. (1958) 28 Com Cas 216 : AIR 1958 Punj 341 (344) (Pt C) (Pr 15).

——S. 169 — Applicability.

Section 169 applies only at a stage previous to the winding-up order and is not applicable after the winding-up order is made. Once the order is made the Court has no jurisdiction to stop the commencement or continuance of the proceedings by issuing an injunction. SECTION 170

——Ss. 170 (1) and 227 (2) — Winding up proceedings — Order to keep pending—When to be made —(Companies Act (1956), S. 443).

The Court will not except in special circumstances, order a petition to stand over for a long period. It will either make an order or dismiss the petition ; for if, after adjournments a winding up order is made, the order would date back to the presentation of the petition, and avoid, therefore, or imperil, anything done by the company in the meantime. Besides it is not fair to a company that winding up petition should be kept hanging over its head indefinitely : (AIR 1920 Cal 1004 ; AIR 1952 Cal 323 and AIR 1952 Cal 323, Disting.) ——S. 170 — Scope of inquiry — Winding up — Matters to be taken into account.

Where on a petition for winding up the petitioners have made out a case for the winding up of the company by placing sufficient materials before the Court which would satisfy the Court that the company is insolvent and that its substratum is gone, it is the duty of the Company Judge to come to a conclusion whether on the materials placed before it a case has been made out or not for the winding up of the company. In such a case the motive of the petitioners in filing the petition is entirely irrelevant and should not be taken into consideration. 57 Bom L R 378 : (1955) 25 Com Cas 227 : ILR (1955) Bom 550 : AIR 1955 Bom 355 (361) (Pt C) (Pr 20) (DB).

——S. 171—Scope.

The Legislature has enacted S. 171 with the intention of safeguarding the company's assets against wasteful or expensive litigation in regard to matters which are capable of determination more expeditiously and more cheaply in the winding up. AIR 1933 Cal 433 (2), Rel. on.

This section prevents the commencement of new proceedings or the continuation of pending proceeding against the company after the appointment of a provisional liquidator or after the making of a winding up order, without the leave of the winding up Court. 68 Mad L W 67 : (1955) 25 Com Cas 49: AIR 1955 Mad 449 (450) (Pt A) (Pr 5).

——S. 171 (before amendment by Act 22 of 1936) —Sale in contravention of section — Void or voidable — Who can take advantage of section.

A sale held in contravention of S. 171 is voidable at the instance of the liquidator. That means, the contravention, if any, under this section does not make the sale void or nullity. As such the voidability of the sale is open to be waived by the liquidator. The safeguard which is provided in S. 171 is only for the protection of those who are parties to the proceeding in liquidation. As such if the contravention of that section is to make the proceeding voidable, then the only person who can take advantage of this section in challenging that proceeding on the ground of its being voidable is the person who is a party to the proceeding like the liquidator and not a third party who has no concern with liquidation proceeding. 1959 B L J R 475 : ILR 38 Pat 1080.

S. 10 (1) of the Industrial Disputes Act is not controlled by S. 171 of the Companies Act and the State Government is not bound to apply for the leave of the High Court under S. 171 of the Companies Act before making a reference of an industrial dispute for adjudication of the Industrial Tribunal. ——S. 171—Order appointing liquidator — Attempt by creditor to interfere with his possession — Contempt — (Contempt of Court) — (Companies Act (1956), S. 446).

The position of a liquidator appointed by the Court under the provisions of the Indian Companies

Act, 1913, is somewhat stronger than that of a mere receiver and interference with the possession of the official liquidator would constitute contempt of the authority of the Court under which the company is being wound up. Where the creditor was not acting in the bona fide belief of his alleged legal rights but was deliberately trying to overreach the process of the High Court and interfere with the property of the Bank in liquidation in the hands of the liquidator, there is a deliberate attempt to recover property under control of the Court which constitutes a direct contempt. 1958 Cri L J 1439 : I L R (1958) Punj 2014 : AIR 1958 Punj 445 (451, 452) (Pt C) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 171 (as amended by Companies Amendment Act (1956))—Object of appointment of provisional liquidator — (Companies Act (1956), S. 446).

The object of appointment of provisional liquidator is the protection of the property of the company and prevention of fraudulent preferences, and in such an eventuality after the amendment of 1956, suits or other legal proceedings could not be commenced or continued without the leave of the Court. The legislature in its wisdom did not choose to extend the operation of S. 171 to all suits and other legal proceedings filed or pending after the date of the winding up petition. ——S. 171 — Leave for execution proceedings in another Court — (Companies Act (1956), S. 446).

The word 'proceedings' used in S. 171 includes execution proceedings also. Section 171 makes no distinction between a suit or legal proceedings decided by the Court itself or by some other Court. Section 171 does apply even to the order of the Court which is sought to be enforced not by a petition in the winding up but by instituting execution proceeding in some other Court. It is immaterial in such cases that the claim or debt which is the subject-matter of the suit or other legal proceedings came into existence after the date of winding up. Where the claim for rent was, by consent of parties, decided by the Company Court itself it will be assumed that the leave of the Court was implicit so far as the proceeding in the High Court was concerned. But no such implied leave can be inferred for the initiation of the execution proceedings in the Court of the District Judge. 1956 All L J 470 : 1956 All W R (HC) 450: (1956) 26 Com Cas 332 : AIR 1956 All 586 (588) (Pt A) (Prs 8, 9) (DB).

● ——S. 171—Construction — 'Other legal proceedings', meaning of — 'Against the company'—Decree obtained by company — Subsequent winding up proceedings — Review application by defendant — Permission of Company Judge is not necessary. AIR 1941 All 154, AIR 1941 All 335, Overruled.

The meaning of the words 'other legal proceedings' in S. 171 must not be confined within narrow limits and need not necessarily be proceedings analogous to a suit initiated by means of a petition similar to a plaint.

The words 'against the company' in S. 171 do not mean that if the company is arrayed as the opposite party, permission of the Company Judge will be necessary whenever any legal proceeding has to be instituted or continued against the company. They mean a proceeding where a liability is intended to be fastened on the company or its assets and not a proceeding commenced by a person with the object of escaping liability arising out of a proceeding commenced by the company itself.

Liquidation proceedings under the Companies Act are for making available the assets of the company in 'pari passu' satisfaction of its liabilities, and if persons, other than secured creditors, are allowed to enforce their claims without any control exercised by the Company Judge, it may defeat or delay that object. But where a company has initiated a proceeding in a Court of law whether before or after the winding up order, no permission of the Company Judge is needed for anything done by the defendant or the opposite party to escape the liability thus intended to be fastened on him.

Where a winding up order is made in respect of a company after it has obtained a decree in a suit instituted by it and after an appeal preferred by it against an order allowing defendant's objection under S. 47, Civil P. C. has been decreed, an application for review of the aforesaid judgment of the appellate Court can be made by the defendant without obtaining leave of the Company Court under S. 171 of the Companies Act. ——S. 171—Applicability to execution cases—Leave obtained for continuing suit — Fresh leave for levying execution of decree—If necessary.

Section 171 requires permission not only for the filing of a suit against a company which has been wound up by a Court but in regard to all other proceedings. Execution petitions are also within the contemplation of S. 171. Leave of the Court is a condition precedent to the levying of execution of decree even in a case where leave had already been obtained for continuing the suit. ——Ss. 171, 232 — Companies Act (1956), Ss. 446, 537 — Execution of mortgage decree, against property in which company had puisne mortgage, is proceeding against company — Waiver of requirements of S. 171 — Effect.

An execution proceeding for executing a mortgage decree over property in which the company in liquidation, had a puisne mortgage, would be a proceeding against the company within the meaning of S. 171 (S. 446 of the new Companies Act).

In such a case the company is also a debtor of the first mortgagee as the company is liable to pay the first mortgage debt and consequently an execution of that kind would be an execution levied against the estate of the company within meaning of S. 232 (S. 537 of the new Act). AIR 1944 Mad 84, Relied on.

The requirement as to leave of Court mentioned in S. 171 can for certain purpose be waived by the Official Liquidator of the company. The effect of waiver of the requirement as to leave would not compel the liquidator to admit a claim rendered ineffective or inoperative by reason of the bar imposed by S. 171. Section 232 really should be read jointly with S. 171. It merely lays down the effect upon any sale held without the leave of the Court of any of the properties of the company after the commencement of winding up proceeding. No doubt it says that such sale shall be void. But it could not govern the operation of case where either leave was obtained or the want of leave was validly waived by the liquidator of the company. In this view, the provisions of S. 232 would not apply to the case. (1914) S C 913, Relied on.

Where the official liquidator had notice of the sale and had taken part in the proceeding and obtained adjournment of the sale for enabling them to save the estate of the company in liquidation, the conduct of the official liquidator amounts to waiver. Therefore, even though no leave of the liquidation Court was obtained for the institution of the execution proceeding in the case, that bar having been validly waived by the official liquidator, the execution sale cannot be affected either by the provisions of S. 171 or by the provisions of S. 232 of the old Companies Act. 1963 Mad W N 596 : 76 Mad L W 680 : (1963) 33 Com Cas 543 : AIR 1963 Mad 308 (309, 310) (Prs 3, 4, 5, 6) (DB).

——S. 171 — Applicability — Leave to continue proceedings before Rent Controller—Necessity.

A proceeding under S. 4 of the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act of 1951 for fixation of fair rent, started at the instance of the lessees of the company is a legal proceeding within the meaning of S. 171 and leave to continue the same should be applied for and obtained.

The right to have the fair rent fixed under the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act is a right vested in both the applicants and the respondents and that right is not taken away by reason of any agreement between the parties. The order fixing a fair rent has to be made only by the Rent Controller after taking into consideration the various factors set out in the section and it is in the exclusive jurisdiction of the Rent Controller to fix the rent. But no order could be passed by the winding up Court. 68 Mad L W 67 : (1955) 25 Com Cas 49 : AIR 1955 Mad 449 (451) (Pt D) (Pr 13).

——Ss. 171, 232—Applicability—Sale by mortgagee under powers in the deed during winding up proceedings—No leave of Court—Validity of.

A sale by a mortgagee or receiver for debentureholder effected in pursuance of the power vested in him in that behalf by the mortgage deed or the debenture trust deed, as the case may be, without the sanction of the Court cannot be avoided as falling under either S. 171 or S. 232 of the Indian Companies Act. A private sale effected by a Receiver or a mortgagee is not a legal proceeding which cannot be commenced or continued without the sanction of Court under S. 171 and cannot be hit by S. 232. AIR 1946 F C 16, Rel. on.

A secured creditor realising his security without seeking the assistance of the Court is thus outside the winding up and no leave of Court is needed when a receiver appointed by a mortgagee exercises his power of sale under S. 69 (3), T. P. Act. If there is no allegation of want of bona fides for recklessness or fraud against the receiver in exercising such a power, it would follow that the sale held by the receiver is valid and effectual to convey title to the purchaser and that such a sale cannot be avoided on the ground either of want of due notice given by the receiver before effecting the sale or on the ground of undervalue. The adjudication is really by the Tribunal, and the award is the formal expression of that adjudication. The declaration made by the Government cannot be held to be a legal proceeding. Further S. 171, Companies Act, would have no application to enquiries, investigations and orders made either by Government or statutory bodies in exercise of statutory powers. ——S. 171—Winding up order—Effect—Companies Act (1956), S. 446.

It is an elementary proposition of law that no proceeding could be instituted or continued against a company in liquidation without the leave of the Court which was seized of the winding up proceedings and the said proposition applies with particular force to execution of decree. The winding up order must, therefore, be deemed to have had the effect, even in the absence of any formal order, of automatically confirming an interim stay order. 1958 Cri L J 1439: I L R (1958) Punj 2014: AIR 1958 Punj 445 (449, 450) (Pr B) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 171 — Legal proceeding — Meaning of—Bombay Evacuees (Administration of Property) Act (24 of 1949), Ss. 4 and 6.

An order passed by a custodian of evacuee property under Bombay Act 24 of 1949 vesting certain property in him is merely an executive act and cannot be termed as a legal proceeding within the meaning of S. 171, Companies Act, and therefore no leave under S. 171 is necessary for such action. 52 Pun L R 185 : (1950) 20 Com Cas 141 : AIR 1950 East Punj 204 (208) (Pt E) (Pr 25) (DB).

3. Suit or proceeding against the company.

——S. 171 — Suit against directors for fraud practised on plaintiffs in inducing them to purchase shares—Bar of.

Where the plaintiffs are not seeking any relief against the company, under the contract of allotment of shares or otherwise but are content to sue the directors as individuals on the ground that they have suffered damage on account of the fraud practised by them on the plaintiffs, such a suit against the directors and the agent of the company who actually practised the fraud is not barred under S. 171, Companies Act, 1913. 1960 M P L J 865 : 1960 M P C 481 : 1960 Jab L J 965 : AIR 1960 Madh Pra 323 (330) (Pt J) (Pr 26) (DB).

4. Defensive actions.

——S. 171—Set-off—Leave if necessary.

A defendant pleading a set-off in defence is not commencing or proceeding with a suit or other legal proceeding against the company within the meaning of S. 171, Companies Act, and leave of the company Judge is not required to entitle him to resist or defend a suit filed by the Official Liquidator by pleading a set-off in his written statement. Where the claims advanced by the Official Liquidator and the defendant against each other are money claims which fall within the purview of S. 229 the set-off claimed by the defendant is really a defence to the plaintiff's claim for recovery of money and S 171 does not apply (1951) 1 Mad L J 340 : (1951) 21 Com Cas 162 : ILR (1952) Mad 60 : 65 Mad L W 1243 : 1951 Mad W N 206 : AIR 1951 Mad 783 (785, 787) (Pt A) (Prs 9, 19) (DB).

5. Leave is in the discretion of Court.

——S. 171—(Companies Act (1956), S. 446)—Leave to continue suit—Discretion of Court—Principles.

Where a shareholder bona fide commences his action against the company and its directors or promoters for rescission of his contract to take shares and for rectification of the register of the company before the winding up then ordinarily leave ought to be granted. But where the action is commenced long after the cause of action had arisen and also subsequent to the commencement of the proceedings of winding up and in anticipation of the winding up order the leave ordinarily ought not to be granted. This is particularly so where it is fully realised that the question of settlement of list of contributories is bound to come up for consideration before the winding up Court. If the action is commenced by a suitor not for forestalling the winding up orders it is but just that his right as it exists at the date of commencement of his action be allowed to be determined by the forum of his choice. Further where the action is for rescission and rectification of register of the company persons responsible for inducing the plaintiff to apply for shares are bound to be parties to the action but on that ground alone even after the winding up order the leave is not granted. 1958 M P C 802 : 1959 Jab L J 64 : 1959 M P L J 315 : AIR 1959 Madh Pra 316 (319, 320) (Prs 26, 27, 35).

——S. 171—Discretion—Principles on which leave is granted.

The leave of the Court cannot be obtained merely for the asking. It is not to be granted automatically or as a matter of course. The Court has got to examine the facts of each case separately and exercise its discretion reasonably and not arbitrarily or capriciously.

The Court may in the exercise of its discretion grant leave unconditionally or may impose terms as a condition of granting leave.

In cases in which the company is the sole defendant, as a general rule unless the question at issue in the action or proceeding is one which cannot be properly determined in the winding up, leave will be refused. (1874) 17 Eq 268 and (1863) 33 Beav 123, Rel. on.

Where, however, the question at issue is such that it cannot be conveniently gone into in the winding up, leave will generally be given. (1867) 36 L J Ch 312, Rel. on.

In cases where the company is a necessary party to the action bu there are other defendants as well, the Courts generally grant leave.

The Court usually insists however upon an undertaking by the plaintiff that he will not enforce against the company any judgment which he may obtain without the leave of the Court.

In a proper case a Court may revoke the leave already granted. AIR 1925 Cal 916, Rel. on 68 Mad L W 67 : (1955) 25 Com Cas 49 : AIR 1955 Mad 449 (451) (Pt C) (Prs 9, 10, 11, 12).

6. Applications of secured creditors.

●——Ss. 171, 229 and 232 — Scope of — Rights of secured creditor.

The secured creditor is outside the winding up and he can realise his security without the intervention of the Court by effecting a sale of the mortgaged premises by private treaty or by public auction. It is only when the intervention of the Court is sought either by the putting in force any attachment, distress or execution within the meaning of S. 232(1) or proceeding with or commencing a suit or other legal proceedings against the company within the meaning of S. 171 that leave of the Court is necessary and if no such leave is obtained the remedy cannot be availed of by the secured creditor. ——S. 176 — Application for removal of official liquidator—Charges — Enquiry into if can be postponed to stage of discharge—(Companies Act (1956), S. 451).

In an application for the removal of the official liquidator certain charges were levelled by the applicant against the liquidator. The lower Court found in favour of the liquidator on all the charges and dismissed the petition. In an appeal from the dismissal order both sides assured the High Court that practically all the assets of the company have been brought into Court and almost all the liabilities met leaving a balance in Court deposit. Hardly anything remained to be done, and the liquidator had little chance of acting to the detriment of the company in the future, whether or not he had done so in the past. Held that it was unnecessary to adjudicate on these charges at present since the appellant or any other person interested would have an opportunity of presenting them and making the liquidator liable in respect of any loss caused to the company when the question of his discharge would come up. The reservation of such a right would amply safeguard the interests of the company. 1957 Ker L J 970 : 1957 Ker L T 1294 : (1958) 28 Com Cas 146 : AIR 1958 Ker 314 (315, 316) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 177-A — Statement of affairs of company — Duty of delinquent director to call for inspection from Liquidator.

If a delinquent Director thinks that he is unable to submit the statement of the affairs of the company without an inspection of accounts, it is for him to ask for such inspection. It is not the duty of the Liquidator to go about offering inspection without being asked for it. Under the Indian Companies Act it is the statutory obligation of every Director to furnish a statement of the affairs of the bank under S. 177-A and if a Director fails to comply with the requirement of the section he cannot turn round and say that it was the business of the Liquidator to gather knowledge of the assets of the bank. ——Ss. 177-A (5) and 278—Winding up proceedings — Court authorised to, cannot impose penalty under S. 177 A (5) — (Companies Act (1956), Ss. 454 (5) and 622).

The word "offence" has not been defined in the Act itself but it means an act or omission made punishable by any law for the time being in force. Contravention of the provisions of S. 177-A amounts to an offence according to the definition of the term noted above. The Court acting under the Companies Act cannot be considered to be a Criminal Court as contemplated by S. 278 of the Act. A fine is a pecuniary penalty and it cannot be regarded as anything otherwise than a punishment. Since there appears no provision in the Companies Act to authorise the Court in winding up proceedings to impose a penalty under S. 177A (5) the Court has no jurisdiction to impose a fine itself without prosecuting the defaulter in a competent Criminal Court. 1958 Raj L W 430 : I L R (1958) 8 Raj 361.

——S, 178—Winding up — Custody of Company's property. See Companies Act (1 of 1956), S. 456. AIR 1957 All 143 (DB).

——Ss. 178, 208-A (2) and 209-D (2) — Company in liquidation — Provisional liquidator — Refusal to file suit on behalf of company — Power of Director to file suit.

Section 178 clearly shows that once the official liquidator is appointed, even if provisionally, it is his duty to take into his custody and control all the property, assets, effects and actionable claims of the company and even if he does not take possession as he should, all the property and effects are to be deemed to be in his custody. The mere appointment of an Official Liquidator does not, however, entitle him to institute a suit for realisation of an asset or effect or actionable claim of the company unless the Court specially sanctions such institution. The director's powers cannot be exercised once the company goes into liquidation or its property and assets come under the custody of the Court under the provisions of the Indian Companies Act, 1913. The remedy of the directors, should the liquidator cause a loss by refusing to file a suit, would be against the liquidator himself and wilful refusal might be a proper ground for his removal : 39 Ch. ——Ss. 178 and 179 — Company — Liquidation — Power to sue — Shareholder and creditor Locus standi to sue or to appeal for relief in regard to property or assets of company.

A company in liquidation retains its corporate powers including the powers to sue and such powers are exercised by the liquidator who has to sue in the name of the company when the suit is for recovery of the property of the company. Once a liquidator is appointed, even the directors cease to have the power to sue on behalf of the company. A shareholder or a creditor of the company is not entitled to maintain an action when a liquidator is functioning. He may possibly move the Court to give directions to the liquidator to sue. Where the reliefs sought for in a suit or in appeal are those which the company alone is entitled to ask for, a suit or an appeal by a creditor or shareholder is incompetent. ——Ss. 178, 167 — Winding up order — Effect — Difference between effects of winding up and bankruptcy.

Unlike in the case of bankruptcy, when a company is wound up the estate does not vest either in the court or in the liquidator appointed by court, but still remains in the company itself. Section 178 of the Companies Act only provides that all the properties and effects of the company shall be deemed to be in the custody of the court from the date of the order of winding up and that the official liquidator shall take into his custody or under his control all the assets of the company. In the case of bankruptcy, when a person is adjudicated insolvent, all his assets vest in the official receiver. SECTION 178-A ——S. 178-A—Committee of Inspection—Position of members—Purchase of property by member without disclosure—Liability of.

The liability of a member of a committee of inspection rests not on the express provisions of the Act or Rules but is founded on general equitable principles. The members of the committee are in the position of trustees for sale and are debarred from buying or trafficking in the trust property. The duty of the committee of inspection in essence is to assist in the administration of the assets of the Company in liquidation. The position held by a member impresses him with a fiduciary character. His disqualification to buy the property without making a full disclosure is not affected by the fact that he has paid a fair price for the property. If there is no disclosure the official liquidator is entitled to the return of the property. 1958 All L J 682 : (1959) 29 Com Cas 471 : AIR 1959 All 196 (197) (Prs 7, 8, 9, 11) (DB).

——S. 179 - Power to go behind adjudications of competent tribunals.

No doubt the Official Liquidator can refuse to accept a debt, though it is the subject of a decree against the insolvent if there is evidence that the decree was fraudulent and collusively obtained and there was no real debt at all. But in the absence of fraud and collusion, or apparent miscarriage of justice, the Official Liquidator would have no power to go behind the decrees and adjudications of competent courts and tribunals. Thus the Official Liquidator cannot be permitted to examine the correctness of the adjudication of the Industrial Tribunal or a reference to which the company was a party represented by the debenture trustees, when there is no allegation of fraud or collusion. Every error of law would not result in miscarriage of justice. 22 QBD 88, Rel. on. 21 Com Cas 251 : 64 Mad L W 705: 1951-1 Mad L J 185 : AIR 1951 Mad 987 (991) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

3. Sanction of Court.

——S. 179—Sale subject to confirmation by Court — Exercise of discretion by Court.

Where the property is sold by public auction by the official liquidator subject to the confirmation by the Court, the question whether the sale should or should not have been confirmed is a matter which lies within the discretion of the Court, and the discretion cannot be interfered with unless sufficient grounds have been disclosed which would justify the conclusion that the Court's discretion was not judicially exercised. 1951 RD (UC) 342 : 1952 All W R (HC) 134 : 1952-22 Com Cas 75 : AIR 1952 All 113 (114) (Pt A) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 179—Sale by Official Liquidator—Subsequent high offer.

When property is sold by an Official Liquidator subject to confirmation by the Court, the subsequent offer of a higher bid should not be a ground for refusing confirmation of the sale provided the price is adequate.

In the case of sales effected by an Official Liquidator, a reserve price should if possible be fixed ; and in that event, the purchaser at the sale, provided his price exceeds the reserve and there has been no fraud or irregularity would be entitled to have the sale confirmed notwithstanding the subsequent receipt of a higher offer. ——Ss. 179 and 237 — Sanction for prosecution of managing agent, for offences under Ss. 409 and 477-A, Penal Code, is not necessary.

Sanction of the company Court is not necessary for the prosecution of the promoter and managing agent for offences alleged to have been committed by him under Ss. 409 and 477-A, Penal Code. Sections 179 and 237 (1) of the Companies Act, 1913, are merely intended for the control of the Company Court over the liquidator in the discharge of his functions under the Act and have no bearing on the validity of proceedings instituted by the liquidator in other Courts. No doubt in order to determine whether leave ought to be given to institute criminal proceedings under S. 237 (1), a Court has to consider whether it is a case in which a good citizen desirous of doing his duty to the State thinks that he ought at his own expense institute a prosecution. The Company Court acts incorrectly if it finds solely on the fact that there is a prima facie case with regard to the offence. A I R 1955 Cal 29, Foll.; AIR 1947 Mad 343, Rel on ; AIR 1948 P C 82, Disting. (1962) 32 Com Cas 466 : 1961 (2) Cr L J 615 : AIR 1961 Andh Pra 493 (494, 495) (Prs 5, 6).

——Ss. 179, 237— Prosecution under S. 237 — Sanction—Necessity.

The argument that when the liquidator does prosecute in pursuance of a direction under S. 237 (1), he will have to do so in the form laid down in S. 179, will not apply in a case where there is no general sanction under S. 179, but only a direction under S. 237 (1). In any event, the effect of the provision in the Companies Act that the liquidator may, with the sanction of the Court, institute a prosecution in the name and on behalf of the company is not that the criminal Courts cannot entertain a prosecution by the liquidator in any other form. 59 Cal W N 1 : 1955 Cri L J 107 : (1954) 24 Com Cas 539 : A I R 1955 Cal 29 (33) (Pt B) (Pr 10) (DB).

——S. 179—Sanction of Court.

——S. 179—Application for leave to sue under S. 179 (1)—Court if can decide case on merits.

It is true that S. 179 was intended to prevent frivolous and wasteful litigation by an Official Liquidator. At the same time, the Court, when approached by the Official Liquidator for sanction to institute a suit, cannot decide on the merits of the case. 1951-21 Com-Cas 249 : 1951 Mad W N 819 : 1951-2 Mad L J 499 : 64 Mad L W 1096 : AIR 1952 Mad 58 (58) (Pt A) (Pr 1) (DB).

——S. 179 – Application by official liquidator for leave after preparing his case.

While leave of the Court under S. 179, is not a mere formality, there is nothing improper in the Official Liquidator, if he bona fide believed that there was a fair claim which he could put forward on behalf of the company, making every preparation (like issuing suit notices and preparing a plaint) for the institution of the suit. There is no reason why the Official Liquidator should first apply and obtain the sanction of the Court and thereafter begin to prepare his case.

Section 179 does not contemplate a formal application which has to be decided after notice to the opposite party. An application under that section is strictly between the Official Liquidator and the Court. It is unreasonable that the party against whom a suit is proposed to be filed should be given an opportunity to oppose an application by the Official Liquidator to institute the suit. 21 Com Cas 249 : 1951 Mad W N 819 : 1951-2 Mad L J 499 : 64 Mad L W 1096 : AIR 1952 Mad 58 (59) (Pt B) (Pr 1) (DB).

——S. 179 (1) (a)—Who may complain.

The provisions of the Companies Act which deal with the subject of the liquidator taking criminal proceedings are concerned only with the powers of the liquidator under the Act. They purport to control him alone but not also the Criminal Court. 59 Cal W N 1 : 1955 Cri L J 107 : (1954) 24 Com Cas 539 : A I R 1955 Cal 29 (32, 33) (Pt A) (Pr 9) (DB).

——Ss. 179, 237— Absence of prior direction by the Company.

The relevant provisions have only internal application. They aim at keeping the liquidator within certain limits and leading him along certain lines in the discharge of his functions under the Act and as between him and the persons interested in the Company as creditors or share-holders, the propriety or validity of his acts must be judged by the conditions they prescribe. If he fails to observe those conditions or exceeds his statutory powers, he will be answerable to the Company Court which may hold his acts to be unauthorised or refuse him his costs or even remove him. But these provisions of the Companies Act have no bearing on the competency of the liquidator as a suitor in the other Courts or the validity of proceedings instituted by him, except when they say so, either expressly or by necessary implication. There is nothing in the general scheme of the Companies Act or the status of the liquidator thereunder which compels or justifies the conclusion that in the absence of a prior direction by the Company Court, a criminal prosecution instituted by the liquidator against an officer or a member of the Company for offences committed in relation to the Company's affairs, would be invalid. 59 Cal W N 1: 1955 Cri L J 107: (1954) 24 Com Cas 539 : AIR 1955 Cal 29 (34) (Pt D) (Pr 13) (DB).

——Ss. 179, 237—Sanction under S. 179—Necessity.

Neither S. 179, nor S. 237 (1) has anything to do with the validity of a criminal prosecution instituted by a liquidator, but it authorisation by the Company Court is at all required for the validity of such a prosecution, the liquidator could validly institute any prosecution without further reference to the Court if he has a sanction under S. 179, provided the sanction is in unrestricted terms. A I R 1953 Cal 153, Rel. on. 59 Cal W N 1 : 1955 Cri L J 107 : (1954) 24 Com Cas 539 : AIR 1955 Cal 29 (37) (Pt H) (Pr 24) (DB).

——S. 179—Construction—Powers of liquidator.

It cannot be said that an order under S. 179 only authorised the liquidator to use the name of the Company because there are several clauses in the section which have nothing to do with the use of the Company's name but deal with specific powers of the liquidator to do certain specific acts. Cl. (a) of the section should therefore be read as really empowering the liquidator to institute or defend legal proceedings, doing so in the name of the Company, provided he has the sanction of the Court. 59 Cal W N 1 : 1955 Cri L J 107 : (1954) 24 Com Cas 539 : AIR 1955 Cal 29 (37, 38) (Pt I) (Pr 24) (DB).

——Ss. 179, 237 — 'Any person' — If includes liquidator.

As S. 237 is expressed it cannot properly be said to contemplate an application by the liquidator himself for directions. It is difficult to hold that 'any person' contemplated by the section may include the liquidator himself, for, the person applying and the peson to be directed on such application appear to be clearly different persons. Even assuming, in view of the firmly established practice, that the liquidator also may apply under the section it is clear that the section is concerned only with the powers of the Court to direct the liquidator and is not intended to provide the liquidator with authority to institute a prosecution. It follows that even assuming further that it is essential to the validity of a criminal prosecution by a liquidator that there should be a permission by the Company Court to institute the prosecution, there is no need to procure a direction under S. 237 (1) when there is already a general sanction under S. 179. There is nothing to warrant the view that S. 179 (a) is limited to legal proceedings against outsiders. 59 Cal W N 1 : 1955 Cri L J 107 : (1954) 24 Com Cas 539 : AIR 1955 Cal 29 (38) (Pt J) (Pr 24) (DB).

——S. 179 (a) — Recital of order permitting prosecution.

No recital of any order of authority in the complaint itself is technically necessary, although it is always desirable. If a party wants to challenge the complaint on the ground of legal authority, it is for him to show that there is absence of any requisite legal authority and for that purpose the Court can look into and examine the orders of the Company Courts duly passed even though such orders of the Company Courts are not mentioned before the Magistrate. 59 Cal W N 1 : 1955 Cri L J 107 : (1954) 24 Com Cas 539 : AIR 1955 Cal 29 (44) (Pt O) (Pr 55) (DB).

——Ss. 179 and 237 — Prosecution of officers of bank — Direction by Company Judge is not always necessary.

Where the Court gives unrestricted power to the official liquidator under S. 179 (a), then the liquidator is entitled, without any further reference to the Court, to institute any prosecution such as one under S. 409, Penal Code against the officers of the Bank. Neither in S. 179 nor in S. 237 is there anything to indicate that if the liquidator takes action without a direction of the Court, the action would be in any way illegal or invalid. Neither section in express terms takes away the liquidator's power which he has in common with any other citizen, to file in Court a complaint that another person has committed a criminal offence. ——Ss. 179, 186 — Application by liquidator to recover debt due to the bank—Maintainability—Limitation—Banking Companies Act (1949), (as amended in 1950), S. 45B.

There is nothing in the Companies Act or the Banking Companies Act, which permits a liquidator to recover debts from debtors of a Banking Company by summary proceedings such as an application to the Company Judge. The Liquidator, if he wishes to recover what is due to the bank from its customer must bring a suit and the period of limitation for such a suit will be governed by the appropriate article in the Limitation Act read with S. 45F of the Banking Companies Act.

——S. 179 — Company in liquidation — Suit by Official Liquidator in the name of company — Creditor and shareholder of company made co-plaintiffs upon their request — Suit dismissed — Appeal by shareholder alone and without leave of winding up Court—Not competent.

A company in liquidation retains its corporate powers, including the powers to sue, and such powers are exercised by the liquidator who has to sue in the name of the company. A shareholder is not entitled to maintain an action when a liquidator is functioning. He may possibly move the Court to give directions to the liquidator to sue.

A creditor and a shareholder of a company requested its Official Liquidator to institute a suit to declare certain decrees and execution proceedings started against the company, as invalid and not binding on the Company. They requested the Liquidator also to join them in the suit as co-plaintiffs. Upon the sanction of the winding up Court for joining them as co-plaintiffs, the suit was instituted by the Official Liquidator in the name of the company as plaintiff No. 1. The creditor and the shareholder were made plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3. After the suit was dismissed by the trial Court the third plaintiff preferred an appeal without asking for or obtaining leave of the winding up Court to file an appeal on behalf of the company. The Company did not figure as a party to the appeal :

The liability of a contributory on a winding up to pay unpaid share money arises by operation of law and not out of contract. Under S. 159 the liability of a contributory creates a debt payable at the time specified in the calls made on him by the liquidator. Thus, the debt under the statute is a new creation, quite distinct and apart from any pre-existing contract a liability. A suit for the recovery of this debt is governed by Art. 120, Limitation Act, and limitation must be held to run from the time specified for payment in the calls made on the contributory by the liquidator. A company in liquidation retains its corporate powers including the power to sue, although such powers must be exercised through the liquidator under authority of the Court. Hence, a claim petition on behalf of a company in liquidation ought to be made in the name and on behalf of the Company and not in the name of the joint liquidators.

The Court will allow the petitioners to amend the petition so as to bring it in conformity with S. 179(a). 21 Com Cas 30:52 Pun L R 455 : AIR 1951 Punj 144 (Prs 3, 4, 6).

The power of the Official Liquidator to sell the properties of the Company which is being wound up cannot in any way be limited or circumscribed by anything found in the Articles of Association. For the purpose of effectually discharging the debts, it would generally be necessary for the Official Liquidator to sell the properties of the Company. Section 179 (c) gives him the power to sell the movable and immovable properties of the Company by public auction or private contract. The power of sale conferred under S. 179 (c) is a statutory power and not one derived by virtue of any right as an agent of either the Court or the directors. Once the Court sanctions the sale, the Official Liquidator would not be bound by the limitations imposed by the Articles of Association. He would, therefore, be entitled to sell any property of the Company if he considers it necessary for administering the affairs of the Company, the sale, however, being subject to sanction by the Court.

The existence of a provision in the Articles of Association that 'the Liquidator on any winding up may, with the sanction of an extraordinary resolution divide among the contributories in specie any part of the assets of the Company, and may, with the like sanction, vest any part of the assets of the Company in trustees upon such trusts for the benefit of the contributors as the Liquidator, with like sanction shall think fit, is no ground for holding that the unpaid call money should first be called up and the claim of creditors paid off and thereby the properties preserved with a view to their distribution amongst the shareholders and on that ground to challenge a sale held by the Liquidator of the immovable properties in due conformity with law, and confirmed by the Court, after considering every conceivable objection put forward to the sale and after due investigation of the same, when there has been no appeal from the order confirming the sale. Where the appellant, who was himself the Chairman of a Banking Company, bought shares in the names of different members of his family, some of whom were minors and the company was at no stage apprised of this fact and there was evidence that the appellant had been borrowing from the accounts of the bank for himself in order to make payments of those shares, it cannot be held that the allotment of the shares in the names of those persons who were all members of family, even assuming that they were minors, was void and as such the liability arising for contribution in respect of those shares could not be enforced at all. The appellant who purchased those shares in those names could still be substituted under the law as a contributory in respect of those shares. (AIR 1956 Punj 41, Disting.) Where in fact the company is not aware of the persons to whom the shares are issued as being minors, and a person buys certificates in their names using their names merely as a benamidar or as aliases for himself, the person could be made responsible as a contributory. —Ss. 185 and 153—Scheme framed subject to sanction of Court—Sanction not obtained—Sales of shares belonging to company by trustees appointed for that purpose—Preference share-holders to be paid out of sale proceeds—Rights of liquidator to claim proceeds—Relationship of company and trustees. AIR 1953 Pat 390, Reversed.

In a suit by a director of a company against its managing director, the parties under an agreement framed a scheme regarding future working of the business of the company. They agreed to pay off the debenture-holders and the preference share holders and thereby to reduce the capital of the company. Two persons were appointed as trustees for the purpose of selling the shares of a sugar company belonging to the company and to utilise the sale proceeds for redemption of the preference shares. Steps were to be taken for sanction of the Court and of the shareholders for implementing the scheme. Neither the meeting of the creditors was held in pursuance of the agreement nor was sanction of the court taken for reduction of the capital, with the result that the proposed scheme was never implemented. The two persons, however, who were styled as preference trustees were handed over the shares of the sugar company and they were sold by them. The company was subsequently wound up and the official liquidator who was appointed to take charge of the affairs of the company made an application for an order to recover the amount realised by the preference trustees.

Held, (1) that till the scheme was formally approved by the share-holders and creditors and was sanctioned by the court and the share capital was thus reduced, the preference share-holders could not acquire any rights under the scheme and the ownership of the shares remained in the company and the amount realized by the sale of those shares remained the property of the company. In this situation the covenants and directions contained in the agreement were mere proposals.

(2) that the two persons styled as preference trustees were the agents of the company for selling the shares and keeping the sale proceeds with them, till the scheme was sanctioned and if the scheme was not sanctioned, they remained agents of the company in custody of the sale-proceeds. The relationship of principal and agent need not be expressly constituted and can be brought about by implication of law on a particular situation arising or from the necessity of a case. The money belonged to the company and was thus in the hands of the agents of the company, and the official liquidator was entitled to its return under the provisions of S. 185.

(3) that the two persons had no right of their own in the shares or in the money and they could not act in their own right in selling the shares of the sugar company and in keeping the sale proceeds in their custody.

(4) that the scheme propounded in the agreement was lawful. AIR 1953 Pat 390, Reversed Gaya Sugar Mills Ltd.v. Nandkishore Bajoria, (1955) 25 Com Cas 24 : AIR 1955 SC 441 (445, 446) (Prs 12, 13).

A person may be a director of a company but unless he has received any money in his capacity of a director the provisions of S. 185 would not be attracted. Hence where the liquidator has paid certain amounts due to the directors of the company not in their capacity as directors but as creditors of the company, S. 185 does not apply and they cannot be ordered to refund the money. 1958 Nag L J 139 : (1958) 28 Com Cas 195 : AIR 1959 Bom 474 (475) (Pt A) (Pr 3).

The powers of the Court under Ss. 185 and 195 of the Companies Act 1913 should not be allowed to be invoked by one Director against another director particularly when the director invoking the section is actuated by personal spite and hostility towards the director who is sought to be proceeded against. The Court under either section has a discretion in the matter and will not exercise its discretion in favour of the applicant when he himself was a director at all material times relating to the transaction and was equally responsible with the respondent for the transaction impeached and when the applicant himself was a party to the regulations passed at the meeting of the Board of directors which culminated in the transactions on the basis of which the application is made. (1961) 1 Mad L J 204 : (1962) 32 Comp Cas 643 : AIR 1961 Mad 172 (174) (Prs 3, 4) (DB).

——S. 185—"Trustee"—Meaning of—Express trustee and not constructive trustee—(Trusts Act (1882), Ss. 3 and 95).

A company has no power to purchase its own shares by diverting its capital, in order to reduce the share capital. 12 A. C. 409, Relied on.

An agreement between the company and director debenture-holder, which agreement is later on ratified by a resolution of the company, whereby the shares held by the company in another company were to be sold, and the sale proceeds utilised for paying off the preference share-holders, and the appellants who were holders of a great number of preference shares were to be trustees for purposes of carrying out the agreement, the agreement cannot be given effect to either by the directors or share-holders, either by alteration of the charter of the company or the Articles of Association, the purpose of the agreement being illegal. If the purpose is illegal, then no trust is created by the memorandum of agreement or the resolution of the board of directors, and S. 83 of the Trusts Act will have no application.

Section 185, Companies Act, is confined to trustees as defined in S. 3, Trusts Act, that is, to expres trustee and not constructive trustee.

Section 95 of the Trusts Act does not refer to liabilities under any other Act. The section itself makes a distinction between a trustee as defined in section 3 of the Trusts Act and a person who holds property subject to an obligation in the nature of a trust. The very enactment of S. 95 shows that there is a distinction between an express trust and a constructive trust. Section 95 by itself will not make the appellants a trustee within the meaning of S. 185 of the Companies Act, on the contrary, S. 95 shows that the appellants are not trustees within the meaning of the word as defined in S. 3 of the Indian Trusts Act.

In other words the Court has no jurisdiction to pass an order against the appellants under S. 185 of the Companies Act. AIR 1953 Pat 390 (393, 394) (Prs 8, 11, 12, 14) (DB).

——Ss. 186 and 156 — Applicability of S. 186 to liability created by S. 156.

An order under S. 186 can only be made in respect of contractual debts due by the contributory to the company. Section 186 has no reference whatever to the statutory liability created by S. 156. It is only those debts which a liquidator can realise by means of a suit that can be ordered to be paid by the Court under S. 186. Therefore, if a liquidator's claim is barred by limitation in respect of a contractual debt due to a share-holder he cannot obtain an order under S. 186. 52 Bom LR 559: 20 Comp Cas 325: AIR 1950 Bom 386 (389) (Pt D) (Pr 5) (DB).

—— Ss. 186 and 187 — Applications under — Distinction.

There is a clear distinction between an application made under S. 186 and an application made under S. 187. An application under S. 186 is to recover a contractual debt in respect of which the liquidator could have filed a suit. Instead of filing a suit he resorts to the summary procedure, and in an application under S. 186 the Court has not to consider the sufficiency of the assets or the extent to which the contributories should be called upon to contribute to the funds of the company. But when the liquidator comes under S. 187, the position is entirely different and the Court has to apply its mind to various other things. 52 Bom LR 559: 20 Comp Cas 325: AIR 1950 Bom 386 (391) (Pt F) (Pr 9) (DB).

——Ss. 186 and 187 — Realisation of calls made prior to winding up — Liquidator's powers.

The liquidator has his own powers whether a call made prior to the winding-up is within time or is barred by limitation. If the call is within time, he might file a suit or proceed under S. 186. If the call is barred by limitation, he has to go to the Judge in Chamber under S. 187 and satisfy him that the position of the company is such that that call should be enforced by a call made by the Court in the winding-up proceedings. 52 Bom LR 559: 20 Comp Cas 325: AIR 1950 Bom 386 (391) (Pt G) (Pr 11) (DB).

——S. 186 — Applicability — Recovery of debt from debtor of Banking Company — Proper remedy of Liquidator — Application or suit — Limitation — Banking Companies Act, S. 45-F.

There is nothing in the Companies Act or the Banking Companies Act which permits a liquidator to recover debts, from debtors of a Banking Company by summary proceedings such as an application to the company Judge. The Companies Act, for example, in S. 186 provides for the recovery of what is due from contributories and no suit is necessary. But there is no provision in these Acts entitling a liquidator to recover debts from debtors of the Bank in any way other than the ordinary way, namely, by suit, and the period of limitation for such a suit will be governed by the appropriate article in the Limitation Act read with S. 45-F of the Banking Companies Act. 55 CWN 400: ILR (1951) 2 Cal 396: (1952) 22 Com Cas 73.

——Ss. 186, 187 — Applicability — Share-money called but not paid still remains call-money — Recovery — Liquidation — S. 187 and not S. 186 applies.

The share money which has been called by the directors but not paid will still be call-money. Both in respect of a claim in regard to a call made prior to winding up and that made subsequently a suit would lie. Ss. 186 and 187 provide a summary remedy as an alternative to the normal remedy by way of suit. S. 178 would apply also to cases of calls made before liquidation. Therefore those calls should fall outside S. 186. S. 186 specifically excludes from its operation call monies due under the Act. Thus S. 186 would apply only to the case of a claim ex contractu other than call money whether due or yet to be called, while S. 187 would apply for the recovery of all call monies, whether exigible at the time of liquidation or otherwise. The fact that interest is payable on the unpaid calls according to the articles of association cannot avail the liquidator to claim interest. Interest is not claimable merely because moneys have been withheld. Section 34 of the Code of Civil Procedure is of no avail because it is limited to suits. In view of S. 159 (1) of the Companies Act, the liability of a contributory is a debt payable at the time specified in the calls made on him by the liquidator. But the Act makes no provision for payment of interest. The liquidator can invoke S. 3 of the Interest Act by intimating a contributory when sending the notice that the call, if not paid on the date specified, would carry interest till payment, and the Court may be moved to award interest. 1957 MPLJ 77 (Nag): ILR (1956) Nag 803.

That a shareholder acquires a right to participate in the profits of the company may be readily conceded but it is not possible to accept the contention that the shareholder acquires any interest in the assets of the company. A shareholder has not got a right in the property of the company. The true position of a shareholder is that on buying shares as an investor he becomes entitled to participate in the profits of the company in which he holds the shares if and when the company declares, subject to the Articles of Association, that the profits or any portion thereof should be distributed by way of dividends among the shareholders. He has undoubtedly a further right to participate in the assets of the company which would be left over after winding up but not in the assets as a whole. Though the Court has power under Section 195 to pass an order directing a non-resident foreigner to appear before the Court and submit himself for examination it should naturally be reluctant to do so as more often such order is likely to be ignored and in such circumstances the Court will be helpless without being able to enforce it. 1951-21 Com Cas 138: AIR 1952 Mad 481 (483, 484) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 6).

——S. 199 — Balance order on contributory — Enforcement — Appointment of receiver — Power to transfer case for execution — Exclusive jurisdiction of High Court — (Banking Companies Amendment Act (1950), Ss. 45-H, 45-A, 45-B — C. P. Code (1908), O. 40, R. 1, Ss. 42, 51, 39 (1) (b) and (c)).

In Company jurisprudence a balance order is a summary statutory proceeding for the purpose of enabling the liquidator to get payment from a contributory in lieu of proceeding by action. This, however, does not mean that the execution by appointment of a Receiver at once becomes the ordinary remedy in such cases. The ordinary method of execution by attachment and sale should even here be normally adopted and a Receiver will not be appointed in execution unless there are some grounds at least shown which will indicate that the ordinary methods of execution by attachment and sale are not the proper mode in the particular case. An enforcement order calling upon the contributory to pay is an order which is executable under S. 199 of the Companies Act and S. 45-H of the Banking Companies Amendment Act, 1950, as a decree under the Civil Procedure Code by attachment and sale by the High Court. The High Court does not ordinarily appoint a Receiver to sell properties which are outside the jurisdiction of this Court. This Court certainly has the power and jurisdiction to adopt that course. But the question is one of propriety and whether it is proper to do so in a particular case.

Obiter— By making the "same manner" of enforcement as a decree, available to orders under the Banking Companies Act, it should be thought S. 45-H meant such manner as delivery, sale, receiver, arrest and detention in prison and such other manner as the nature of relief may require and as are provided in S. 51 of the Civil Procedure Code for execution of decrees. But it does not recreate jurisdiction in the Court, may be a transferee Court for execution, for dealing with a matter in respect of which statute has expressly and manifestly taken away jurisdiction under Sections 45-A and 45-B of the Banking Companies Act.

High Court cannot make an order of transfer of an execution case relating to a Banking Company in liquidation to another Court. Such Court has no power to determine the same issue when it comes to that Court by transfer of execution from the High Court: Sections 45-A and 45-B of the Banking Companies Amendment Act override S. 42, C. P. Code.

Accordingly the High Court should exercise exclusive jurisdiction and the words of the statute cannot be controlled by consideration of higher costs of execution or absence of machinery of execution. 57 CWN 448: (1953) 23 Com Cas 295: AIR 1953 Cal 610 (612, 613) (Prs 13, 14, 15, 17).

——Ss. 202 and 227 (2) — Transfer of shares — Court's jurisdiction to order that transaction is good — Vacating or recalling of order.

It is within the jurisdiction of the Court at any time after the transfer of the shares to order that the transaction is a good transaction and shall stand. If, therefore, a Division Court finds that the transaction was a good transaction no question of vacating or recalling the order of the Judge under S. 227 (2) ex debito justitiae or on the ground that it was made ex parte can arise. 2. Conditions regulating right of appeal.

● ——Ss. 202, 183 (3) and 184 — Order under Ss. 183 (3) and 184 according sanction to sale — Whether administrative or judicial — Order deciding lis between parties and passed after hearing it on merits — Order is judicial — Distinction between administrative and judicial orders.

The mere fact that the order is passed in the course of the administration of the assets of the company and for realising those assets is not by itself sufficient to make it an administrative as distinguished from a judicial order. An order according sanction to a sale undoubtedly involves a discretion and cannot be termed merely a ministerial order, for before confirming the sale the Court has to be satisfied particularly where the confirmation is opposed, that the sale has been held in accordance with the conditions, subject to which alone the liquidator has been permitted to effect it, and that even otherwise the sale has been fair and has not resulted in any loss to the parties who would ultimately have to share the realisation.

That the power is entrusted to or wielded by a person who functions as a Court is not decisive of the question whether the act or decision is administrative or judicial. But it is conceived that an administrative order would be one which is directed to the regulation or supervision of matters as distinguished from an order which decides the rights of parties or confers or refuses to confer rights to property which are the subject of adjudication before the Court. One of the tests would be whether a matter which involves the exercise of discretion is left for the decision of the authority particularly if that authority were a Court, and if the discretion has to be exercised on objective, as distinguished from a purely subjective, consideration, it would be a judicial decision.

Therefore, where the Court confirmed the winding up sale after hearing two view points by two contending parties or interests and the order confirming sale vitally affected the rights of the parties the Court acted in a judicial way and the order was not merely procedural but judicial and therefore not inherently incapable of being brought up in appeal. Shankarlal Aggarwala v. Shankarlal Poddar, (1964) 1 SCR 717: (1965) 35 Com Cas 1: AIR 1965 SC 507 (511) (Pt A) (Prs 11, 12, 13).

P. Code (1908) and Letters Patent, Cl. 15. AIR 1928 Cal 295, Overruled.

The second part of S. 202 which refers to 'the manner' and 'the conditions subject to which the appeals may be had' must be construed as merely regulating the procedure to be followed in the presentation of the appeal and of hearing them, the period of limitation within which the appeal is to be presented and the forum to which appeal would lie, and not as restricting or impairing the substantive right of appeal which has been conferred by the opening words of that section. The words 'order or decision' occurring in the first part of S. 202 though wide, would exclude merely procedural orders or those which do not affect the rights or liabilities of parties. Therefore orders passed by District Court or by Single Judge of the Calcutta High Court, in the matter of winding up petitions are appealable under S. 202 independently of the provisions of Ss. 96 and 104 or that of Letters Patent, Cl. 15. It is sufficient if the order is judicial as distinguished from administrative or ministerial order. AIR 1955 Bom 355 and AIR 1959 Bom 386, Approved. In a winding up petition before a Single Judge of the High Court a preliminary point was referred to the Division Bench. The Bench decided the point and sent back the petition to the Single Judge for decision. In an appeal from the decision of the Single Judge it was contended that the decision of the Division Bench was binding on the appellate Division Bench and that the latter could not re-examine the point in appeal.

Held, that the Division Bench to which matter was referred was exercising the jurisdiction which was vested in the Single Judge also, and was consequently exercising concurrent jurisdiction with the Single Judge. That decision of the Bench was, therefore, in exercise of the same jurisdiction which was vested in the Single Judge and hence could be treated as a part of the decision of the Single Judge by which the winding up petition was finally disposed of. (Allahabad) (1866) — (Companies Act (1956), Ss. 483 and 543 (1)).

In order that an appeal may lie under S. 202, Companies Act, the order or decision made or given in the matter of the winding up of a company by a single Judge of the High Court must be a "judgment" within the meaning of Ch. 8, R. 5 of the Rules of the Court. Rule 5, Ch. 8 of the Rules of the Court is practically the same as paragraph 10 of the Letters Patent. The word 'judgment' in the Letters Patent of the High Court, in civil cases, means a 'decree' and not a judgment in the ordinary sense. (AIR 1925 PC 155 and AIR 1953 SC 198, Rel. on.). Thus where in a petition under S. 235, Companies Act, filed by the official liquidator before a Single Judge, the plea that the petition is barred by limitation is rejected, the order does not dispose of finally any of the rights of the parties. It is therefore a mere interlocutory order and not a judgment within Ch. 8, R. 5. Hence no appeal from it lies to the Division Bench. 1956 Cri LJ 369: (1956) 26 Com Cas 126: 1956 All WR (HC) 808: 1956 All LJ 92: AIR 1956 All 222 (223, 224) (Pt C) (Prs 10, 21, 22) (DB).

——S. 202 — Manner and condition — Meaning.

The word 'manner' in S. 202 refers to the procedure to be followed in the matter of institution and hearing of the appeal. The word "condition" has reference to the nature, quality, qualifications of the order or decision itself against which an appeal is proposed to be filed and the other circumstances touching the right of appeal. The requirement that in order that an appeal should lie, the order or decision must be a final order, or a judgment or a decree or an order of a particular nature is certainly a 'condition' of the right of appeal. 1956 Cri LJ 369: (1956) 26 Com Cas 126: 1956 All WR (HC) 808: 1956 All LJ 92: AIR 1956 All 222 (223) (Pt A) (Pr 8) (DB).

Section 202 confers an important and valuable safeguard in respect of orders made in the winding up of a company. The scheme of the Companies Act is that whereas with regard to other matters specific appeals are provided, under S. 202, every order and decision in winding up is made subject to appeal. But it does not follow that a purely procedural order made by a Judge in a winding up is subject to appeal. Where on the face of the petition of winding up of a company no case for winding up is made out, instead of dismissing the petition, the Company Judge passes an order under R. 751 of the High Court of Bombay (Original Side) Rules directing the petition to be advertised, the order is fraught with serious consequences to the company and is appealable. ——S. 202 — Scope — Order of substitution made by Judge — Appeal allowed to be time-barred — Order if can be challenged in appeal from another order — (Companies Act (1956), S. 483).

If an order of substitution passed by a Company Judge in a winding up proceeding is not a proper order, it is open to the company to appeal against that order. If it does not do so and allows the appeal to become barred by limitation, it cannot challenge it in appeal from another order passed by the Judge. The appellate Court cannot apply the analogy of the provisions in the Civil Procedure Code with regard to an appeal which permit all interlocutory orders to be challenged when an appeal is preferred against a final order. The order of the Judge is not final in the sense in which a Court passes a decree. 60 Bom LR 1288: (1959) 29 Com Cas 133: ILR (1959) Bom 295: AIR 1959 Bom 386 (388) (Pt B) (Pr 7) (DB).

——S. 202 — Construction and scope — Right of appeal — Order under S. 170 adjourning winding up petition after hearing it on merits — Appealability.

An order passed by a single Judge on the Original Side of the High Court under S. 170, Companies Act refusing to wind up the company and adjourning the petition after hearing it on merits to a future date is an order which is appealable under S. 202 of the Companies Act.

The first part of S. 202 confers a substantive right upon a party aggrieved by an order made or a decision given by a Company Judge in winding up. The second part of S. 202 does not in any way cut down or impair the substantive right already conferred by the first part of S. 202. The second part which deals with the manner and the conditions in which an appeal may be preferred only refers to the procedural subject of an appeal and the forum to which the appeal would lie.

But to suggest an argument that the right of appeal conferred under the first part of S. 202 must be construed and interpreted by the second part would in many cases practically and substantially deny the right of appeal to a party affected by an order made in the winding up. ——S. 202 — Scope — Order under S. 183 (3) — Appeal.

If the order made is administrative in nature an appeal would not lie under S. 202. If the Court has treated the matter as one of dispute between the parties to be judicially determined the order made by it under S. 183 (3) should be considered as a judicial order. ——Ss. 202, 235 — Misfeasance proceedings — Company Judge directing some of Directors of Company to appear and give evidence — Appeal to Division Bench is maintainable under S. 202 of the Companies Act, 1913, read with S. 4 of the Mysore High Court Act, 1961.

Where in the course of the winding up proceedings started before the commencement of the Companies Act of 1956, misfeasance proceedings under S. 235 (S. 543 of the 1956 Act) were initiated by the Official Liquidator, and in those proceedings the Company Judge tentatively deciding to require the presence of some of the Directors of the Company for giving evidence on oath in open Court, after hearing the counsel, directed accordingly by an interlocutory order, an appeal is maintainable against such order to the Division Bench of the High Court under S. 202 of the Companies Act (1913) read with S. 4 of Mysore High Court Act.

The contention that matters relating to winding up of companies are within the exclusive jurisdiction of Parliament coming under Entries 43 and 45 of List 1 of Sch. 7 of the Constitution, and the Mysore High Court Act being an enactment of the State Legislature under Entry 65 of List 2, S. 4 of that Act had no application to the matters relating to winding up of companies is untenable. Right of appeal from orders made in winding up proceedings is derived from S. 202. The machinery for appeal is, however, provided by the enactment of the State Legislature and that machinery is to be used for appeals provided by the Companies Act. When S. 202 of the Companies Act, 1913 is read with S. 4 of the Mysore High Court Act, it is manifest that a party aggrieved by any order of decision made or given in the matter of the winding up of a company by a single Judge in the exercise of the original jurisdiction of the High Court has a statutory right of appeal to a Bench consisting of two other Judges of the High Court. The question, whether the High Court should interfere in the appeal when the order is interlocutory and does not decide the rights of parties, is a matter relating to the merits of the appeal and does not touch the question of the right of appeal. Section 211 does not support the argument which is involved in the contention of the dissenting member of transferor company within meaning of S. 208-C (3) that at any given point of time a shareholder is notionally entitled to an aliquot part of the net assets of the company. It may be that the prospect of distribution such as is contemplated under S. 211 at the conclusion of a winding up, would be a material factor in assessing the value of the interest of a shareholder, in virtue of his holding shares in the company. If the net assets which will be available for distribution are likely to be of considerable value then the value of the interest of the shareholder will also be enhanced. It is not tantamount to saying that the value of the interest is an arithmetical fraction of the estimated market-value of the net assets of the company on the date of the winding up, or on the date when the resolution is passed for the transfer of the business of the company to another company. 72 Mad LW 609: ILR (1959) Mad 859: (1960) 1 Mad LJ 199: (1960) 30 Com Cas 340: AIR 1960 Mad 43 (49) (Pt E) (Pr 11) (DB).

Under S. 208-C (3) what the arbitrator has to determine is the price at which the interest of the dissentient members should be purchased by the liquidator. In fixing the price of a dissentient member's interest the arbitrator certainly will have to take into account the assets of the company and its liabilities. It is wrong to determine the price by dividing the estimated market-value of the net assets of the company by the number of ordinary shares. To adopt such a basis is practically to equate the position of a shareholder to that of a tenant in common along with the other shareholders in respect of the company's assets. 72 Mad LW 609: ILR (1959) Mad 859: (1960) 1 Mad LJ 199: (1960) 30 Com Cas 340: AIR 1960 Mad 43 (50) (Pt F) (Prs 14, 15) (DB).

——Ss. 209-A, 207 (3) and 203 (3) — Extraordinary resolution and special resolution — Distinction — Mistake in giving resolution its proper name — Effect — (Jammu and Kashmir Companies Act (1977), Ss. 203, 207, 209-A).

The only difference between an extraordinary resolution and a special resolution is that in order to move a special resolution a notice of not less than 21 days, specifying the intention to propose a resolution, is to be given, vide S. 81 of the Jammu and Kashmir Companies Act, 1977. The passing of a special resolution instead of an extraordinary resolution would rather more fully safeguard the interests of all parties. In a case however, where all the formalities specified in S. 209-A have been complied with a mere technical mistake in giving the resolution its proper name cannot amount to a defect which will in any way vitiate or invalidate the act of voluntary winding up of the Company. AIR 1955 J and K 32 (33) (Pt A) (Pr 3) (DB).

A person who claims to be vitally interested in a company which has gone into liquidation by reason of his agreeing to buy fully paid up shares from a registered shareholder is not entitled to apply under S. 209-H (4) proviso and S. 243 nor is he entitled to apply under S. 213. Even if he has paid for and got shares from the registered shareholder that will not clothe him with any interest at all because a transfer is only possible after previous sanction from the liquidator. Further, it is only the transferor shareholder who can apply to the liquidator for transfer. The liquidator is not bound to take notice of such application from the outsiders, especially when the liquidator's case is that the company is fully dissolved and he is no longer the liquidator. (1960) 64 Cal WN 991: (1961) 31 Com Cas 136.

The shareholders have a right to draw up a scheme of liquidation whereby the debts and liabilities of the company are paid and provision is made for distributing the balance. The liquidator can be authorised to carry out a scheme of this nature and there is nothing illegal or contrary to the provisions of the Companies Act in arriving at such a scheme. (1958) 28 Com Cas 50: 1957 Andh LT 617: AIR 1958 Andh Pra 666 (669) (Pt C) (Pr 9) (DB).

——Ss. 211 and 216 — Company in voluntary liquidation — Stay of execution proceedings against, if can be granted — Right of preferential creditor — Union of India or State Government if preferential creditor.

The Court will as a matter of course and in the absence of special circumstances stay execution proceedings against a Company in voluntary liquidation because the result of allowing a judgment creditor to levy execution would inevitably interfere with the scheme of distribution of the assets pari passu amongst the creditors in accordance with S. 211 of the Indian Companies Act. (1924) 2 KB 410 and (1942) 1 Ch D 121, Rel. on.

In the case of preferential claims, however, the preferential creditor ought not to be restrained from executing his decree unless there are special circumstances justifying that course.

The Union of India and the State Government are bound by the provisions of the Indian Companies Act and by the Scheme of administration of Companies in liquidation laid down by that Act and are not entitled to any preferential rights or treatment or to any prerogative save and to the extent expressly provided for in that Act. Hence unless the Union of India or the State Government establishes its claim to rank as preferential creditor in respect of any definite money, it is not entitled to proceed with the execution proceedings. A limited liability company went into voluntary liquidation after succeeding in selling its estate for an unexpected price of over three lakhs of rupees. A liquidator was appointed for distributing the assets which were far in excess of the liabilities which were practically nil. The only persons who were entitled to payment were the shareholders and the promoters of the company, there being no depositors. The Memorandum and the Articles of Association of the company provided for conferring special benefits on the promoters after the share-holders' claims were satisfied to a certain extent. The articles dealt only with the legal rights of directors and promoters so long as the company continued to function as such and no provision was made in it for distribution of assets after the Company had gone into voluntary liquidation. After the sale of the assets there was no declaration of any dividend. The promoters claimed the special benefit from the liquidator.

Held in the circumstances that the sale proceeds in the hands of the liquidator could not be called profits within the meaning of the articles of association and, therefore, the promoters of the company were not entitled to any special privileges. The amount should be distributed among the share-holders pro rata. Case law Ref. 1951 Ker LT 577: (1952) 22 Com Cas 99: ILR (1951) Trav-Co 428: AIR 1952 Trav-Co 192 (194, 195) (Pr 10) (DB).

Apart from the reason that a resolution passed by the Board of Liquidators, is not the same thing as a resolution passed at a meeting of the share-holders, since under S. 212 (3) of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, read with S. 179 (a) of that Act, a suit on behalf of the Company must be instituted by, at least, two liquidators. The Board of Liquidators could not authorize one of themselves to do a thing which the law forbids, i.e., they could not legalise the filing of a suit by a single liquidator, where the law requires that the suit should be filed, at least, by two liquidators. That is the position also under S. 512 (4) of the Act of 1956 read with S. 457 (a) thereof. AIR 1958 Him Pra 1 (2) (Pt A) (Pr 12).

The law lays down that a suit should be instituted by, at least, two liquidators. ——Ss. 212 (1) (d) and 216 (1) — Voluntary winding up — Power of liquidator — He can make calls and institute suit to recover call money — No sanction of Court is necessary.

In a case of voluntary liquidation the liquidator can by reason of S. 212 (1) (d) of the Companies Act, 1913, exercise the power of the Court of making calls without its sanction. It is true that he may under S. 216 (1) apply to the Court for enforcing the call and the Court may thereupon exercise all or any of the powers which it would exercise if the company were being wound up by the Court. But he is not bound to resort to S. 216 (1) and may proceed by way of suit for the recovery of the statutory debt. This is implicit in S. 159 and is made explicit by S. 198. The non-preparation of such a list does not vitiate the proceedings or invalidate the suit filed by the liquidators. Such a list has got to be prepared in a case of compulsory liquidation. Even without preparing such a list, the liquidators have power to call upon the share-holder to pay the balance of the share amount. (1963) 1 Com LJ 154: (1963) 33 Com Cas 713: 1962 Mys LJ (Sup) 319 AIR 1963 Mys 61 (63) (Pt B) (Pr 7).

——Ss. 216, 221 — Application under S. 216 — Locus standi of creditor to challenge voluntary liquidation proceedings as being void.

Before exercising the powers under S. 216 the Court must be satisfied that the application for the exercise of any of the powers under S. 216 is by a person entitled to make the application. There is nothing in S. 216, Companies Act to suggest that the Court must accept the statement of the person applying under that section that he is the liquidator or a contributory or a creditor and that the Court is precluded from entering into an inquiry suo motu or at the instance of the persons opposing the application to determine whether the applicant has locus standi to make the application. The non-applicants are entitled to ask Court not to exercise the powers under S. 216 as the petitioners are not the liquidators in law inasmuch as the voluntary liquidation proceedings in which they were appointed were illegal and void.

A distinction ought to be drawn between a case where the person applying under Section 216 himself attacks the validity of liquidation proceedings and a case where the objection as to the validity of the proceedings is raised by the persons resisting the application. A petitioner under S. 216 praying that the Court should exercise the powers under that section for the assistance of the voluntary winding up, as also one under Section 221, Companies Act asking the Court to make an order for the continuance of the voluntary winding up subject to the supervision of the Court, must accept the fact that the voluntary winding up is valid. He cannot apply for orders under S. 216 to assist the winding up or for a supervision order under S. 221, and at the same time challenge the voluntary winding up proceedings as being void. The position of an opponent to such a petition is, however, different. His object is to secure the rejection of the petition and for that end, he is entitled to urge that the winding up proceedings in relation to which the Court has been moved to exercise the powers are void or for that reason, the petitioner is not entitled to apply. In such cases the opponent's attack on the winding up is in the main with the object of showing that the conditions requisite for the exercise of the powers under S. 216 or 221, Companies Act, do not exist. ——S. 216 (2) — Attachment of property before passing of resolution for voluntary winding up — Attachment if can be set aside under S. 216.

It is not open to the Court under S. 216 to set aside the order of attachment where the orders of attachment were made and put into force against the property of the Company before the passing of the special resolution for "vountary winding up." The words "after the commencement of the winding up" in S. 216 (2) do not refer to the time of making an application under S. 216 and qualify the orders of attachment, distress or execution. Section 216 itself presupposes that an application under that Section would be made after the commencement of the winding up and the words "after the commencement of the winding up" obviously refer to the time when any attachment, a distress or execution is put into force against the estate or effects of the company. Again, the power under S. 215, Companies Act can be exercised only if the Court is satisfied that the exercise of the powers would be just and beneficial not only to the petitioners but to all the parties. It would clearly be not a just exercise of powers when there are obvious irregularities in the procedure (such as non-compliance with Ss. 206,207) as regards the winding up. (1952) 22 Com Cas 106: AIR 1952 Madh Bha 3 (6) (Pt C) (Pr 7).

——Ss. 216 and 235 — Words 'any other matter' in S. 216 cannot be construed ejusdem generis with topics specified before them — Operation of S. 235 cannot be limited by reference to S. 216.

Per Viswanatha Sastri, J.: Having regard to the specific mention in S. 216 of such wholly and dissimilar topics as enforcing calls and staying of proceedings, it would be a misapplication of the doctrine of ejusdem generis to hold that the words "any other matter" following the specified categories refer only to matters similar in their nature to the enumerated topics. The enumerated topics do not belong to the same genus. The circumstance that the general words follow two specified topics of a distinct and dissimilar nature in no way derogates from the general application of the general words in the section: AIR 1947 Lah 283, Ref.

No supervision order under S. 221, can be made where the voluntary winding up itself is invalid, and hence on this basis a creditor cannot apply for such an order. The section vests a discretion in the Court which would be exercised having regard to the facts and the circumstances of the case. The creditor or a contributory cannot as a matter of right obtain such an order, but if it can be shown that the resolution for voluntary winding up has been passed fraudulently or where the creditors support an order for supervision in order to safeguard their interests or where there is preponderating influence of the shareholders whose conduct is impeached or where investigation is required and the assets are large, Courts might pass an order under that section. (1958) 28 Com Cas 50: 1957 Andh LT 617: AIR 1958 Andh Pra 666 (668) (Pt A) (Pr 8) (DB).

Where the Court has no jurisdiction over the subject-matter, any judgment passed by it will be void and the consent of the parties cannot confer jurisdiction on a Court where it does not exist under the statute and if it is brought to the notice of the Court that it has been led to pass a judgment which is a nullity, the Court will of its own motion or on being moved by any person set aside its own order which is a nullity.

The registered office of a company was originally at Lahore in Pakistan. There was no evidence to show that the registered office was transferred from Lahore to Amritsar at any time before the partition. The voluntary winding up of the company which was stated to be a member's winding up did not comply with the provisions of S. 207 and this fact was deliberately kept concealed from the Court which was deceived into making an order under S. 221 representation being made to it that the registered office of the company had been transferred to Amritsar and a proper member's winding up had taken place notice whereof had been given to the Registrar in accordance with the Companies Act:

It cannot be said that paying a creditor by assigning an asset of the company, especially after the commencement of the winding up proceedings, could be considered to be a bona fide transaction carried out or arising in the ordinary course of current business. ——S. 227 (2) — Scope — Petition for winding up — Company not opposing — Borrowing from Bank after provisional liquidator appointed — Application by Bank to validate charge — Loans by Bank found to be not bona fide — Bank not entitled to relief.

In the case of a winding up by or subject to the supervision of the Court every disposition of the property of the company made after the commencement of the winding-up shall be void unless the Court otherwise orders, for the reason that the assets of the company must be available to all its creditors pari passu. A Court will protect only those transactions which are bona fide entered into and completed in the ordinary course of the company's current trade, for otherwise the result would be that the presentation of a petition, groundless or well founded, would ipso facto paralyse the trade of the company and great injury would be done to those interested in the assets of the company. Even if a winding-up petition is well founded, if the deposition is made for the purpose of preserving the business as a going concern, then also the discretion of the Court will be exercised to protect the transaction. The test is to consider whether the Court would have sanctioned the transaction supposing it had been asked to do so at the time when the transaction was entered into. So, where a petition for winding up a company was presented on 24th March the provisional liquidator appointed on the 15th April, after the company admitted that it could not possibly oppose the winding up, loans were advanced on 24th and 26th April by a Bank to the company without notice of the winding up petition, but on the evidence it was found that the loans were taken from the Bank neither for the purpose of ordinary current trade nor for the purpose of preserving the company as a going concern for the benefit of all concerned, the company was ordered to be wound up on 29th September and the Bank applied for validating the charge created in its favour by the company in respect of the loans advanced.

Held, it is not a fit case for the Court to exercise its discretion for upholding the transaction. Case-law reviewed. 67 Mad LW 256: (1954) 24 Com Cas 140: (1954) 2 Mad LJ 38: AIR 1955 Mad 247 (250, 251) (Pr 3).

——Ss. 227 (2) and 231 — Application for annulment by judgment-creditor — Appeal against judgment pending — Locus standi not affected — (Companies Act (1956), S. 531).

The mere fact that an appeal is pending against decrees in favour of petitioning creditors does not change the status of the petitioners as creditors or disentitle them to safeguard their interest by seeking a declaration that the sales are void and the properties liable to be proceeded against in execution of the decrees in their favour. (1957) 27 Com Cas 581 (Punj).

——Ss. 227 (2) and 231 — Fraudulent preference — Sales held in pursuance of scheme before presentation of winding up petition but conveyances executed after petition — Validity of transfers — (Companies Act (1956), S. 531).

Transfers made in pursuance of prior agreements would not be regarded as fraudulent and therefore voidable. 'Fraudulent preference' imports and involves freedom of choice, and a transfer which is not voluntary, in the sense that it is not a free act of the insolvent, cannot be deemed to be fraudulent and void against the liquidator. A contract for sale entered into by a company before presentation of the winding up petition continues to be valid and enforceable. The company, before it is ordered to be wound up, and the company's representatives after it is wound up, would be well within their right to complete the contract.

Held, on facts, that the transfers in question were bona fide and not meant to give fraudulent preference to any of the creditors, and therefore, they ought not to be regarded as void under S. 227 (2), nor should they be declared invalid under S. 231. (1957) 27 Com Cas 581 (Punj).

P. District Boards Act (1922), section 131 — Scope.

The appellant, the Antarim Zila Parishad Deoria, claimed a sum of Rs. 4,000 as circumstances and property tax under the U. P. District Boards Act in respect of the years 1955-56 and 1956-57 from the Jagdish Sugar Mills, Ltd., in liquidation at the rate of Rs. 2,000 per year. To prove its claim the appellant produced the assessment orders for 1955-56 and 1956-57. The liquidator did not admit the claim, whereupon the appellant sought to prove it before the Company Judge under section 228 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913. The Company Judge disallowed the claim of the appellant in toto. The appellant filed an appeal.

Held, that the assessment orders were by themselves prima facie proof of the liability of the company for the amount of the tax assessed thereby; that the burden to prove the contrary was not on the taxing authorities but on the official liquidator, that the remedy, if any, of the company or its liquidator was only by appeals provided under the U. P. District Boards Act and once the assessment has become final because no appeal had been filed, recourse to any other method of getting rid of the assessment was barred by section 131 of the U. P. District Boards Act. It was also not open to the Company Judge to allow the Liquidator to challenge the assessment in claim proceedings before him under section 228 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, because that would only amount to allowing the liquidator to do something indirectly which he was not entitled to do directly. (1963) 2 Comp LJ 136: ILR (1963) All 419.

The landlord's right to claim payment of the rent which falls due after the date of winding up on account of the Official Liquidator remaining in occupation of the premises demised to the Company which is being wound up is not affected or prejudiced by anything in the Company Rules. Such rent is not to be classed with the debt due from the Company up to the date of winding up, and instead of being paid pro rata along with such debts is to be paid in full. Under the Proviso to R. 97 it is immaterial whether the premises were retained in his occupation by the liquidator for the purposes of winding up or not. If they remained in occupation of the Official Liquidator, the landlord is entitled to receive the rent in full and is not liable to share pro rata along with other creditors. The rent in dispute can also be claimed in full on the same footing as costs of winding up under S. 230 (3). 1956 All

An application for winding up of a company was preferred on 22-11-1954. The company was ordered to be wound up on 14-10-1955. The debts in respect of which creditor had put in a claim were advanced on 12-1-1952 and 1-3-1952. The claim itself was put in on 26-3-1956. On the question whether limitation ran from the date of application for winding up or from the date of order for winding up:

Held, that under S. 229 of the Companies Act the provisions of the Provincial Insolvency Act were automatically applicable in the matter of proof. Under the Provincial Insolvency Act the Court can admit proof of a claim which is not time barred on the date of the presentation of the petition for adjudication even though the claim may become barred on the actual date of adjudication. Corresponding to S. 28 (7) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, there is a provision in S. 168 in the Companies Act, 1913. The claim in the instant case would therefore, be in time. AIR 1937 Mad 577, AIR 1961 Punj 84, AIR 1936 Bom 130, Rel. on. The Explanation to S. 3. Limitation Act. does not apply as that provision relates to a suit which has been instituted in the regular civil Court, where previous to the institution of the suit the plaintiff has put in a claim against the company to the offical liquidator. AIR 1933 PC 63, Rel. on.

The creditor cannot file any claim on the winding up proceedings till after the winding up order is made, and if retrospective effect is not given to the claim the usefulness of the winding up proceedings would be considerably lost: AIR 1936 Bom 130, AIR 1961 Punj 84, Rel. on. 75 Mad LW 441: ILR (1962) Mad 928: (1962) 32 Com Cas 1102: (1962) 2 Mad LJ 414: AIR 1962 Mad 506 (507, 508) (Prs. 6, 7) (DB).

——Ss. 228, 271 (3)—Winding up under Part 9 — Right of foreign creditors to prove their debts.

In cases where a foreign company is carrying on business in India, though its principal place of incorporation is elsewhere, there is only one legal entity and no separate company as such and the creditors all over the world of such a company are creditors in so far as it carries on business in India. No distinction can be made in the matter of the distribution of assets between a creditor resident in the place where the winding up is going on and a creditor resident abroad. It cannot be said that equal treatment can be meted out only if the company is wound up in the place where it has its principal seat and not where an ancillary liquidation is being conducted as under Part 9 of the Companies Act. Thus even where there is a winding up under Part 9 of the Companies Act, the liquidator appointed has to find out the entire body of creditors wherever they may be resident and the foreign creditors are to be allowed to prove their claims in the winding up proceedings in India. As all the creditors of the company have to be recognised as being entitled to be paid out of its assets, the location or the place where the debts were incurred cannot be considered as a prime factor. The situs of the debt becomes important only with regard to administration and succession. Case law discussed. 1951-2 Mad LJ 535: (1952) 22 Com Cas 1: AIR 1952 Mad 136 (138, 140, 141, 142) (Pt A) (Prs 8, 15, 21, 22, 23) (DB).

(Companies Act (1913), S. 229.)

1. Rules under law of insolvency apply in winding up.
2. Creditors entitled to prove claims.
3. Debts provable.
4. Rights of secured creditors.
5. Property held in fiduciary capacity.
6. Money deposited for specific purpose.

1. Rules under law of insolvency apply in winding up.

——S. 229 — "Rules" — Meaning of.

The word "rules" has been used as meaning the principles which regulate the affairs in insolvency proceedings. (1953) 23 Com Cas 433: ILR (1954) 1 All 268: AIR 1953 All 637 (638) (Pt B) (Pr 8).

——Ss. 229 and 230 — Scope of S. 49, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act — If can be applied—Landlord's claim for rent — Priority — Extent of — (Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), S. 49) — (Companies Act (1956), Ss. 529 and 530).

S. 229 of the Indian Companies Act will not justify a resort to S. 49 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act because S. 230 of the Companies Act makes express provision in respect of all categories or heads of claims dealt with in S. 49 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. Where the Companies Act makes specific provision in respect of any matter, a Court will not be justified in invoking the rules laid down in the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. S. 229 must be read subject to the provisions of S. 230. S. 230 of the Companies Act grants priority to various classes of claims not dealt with in S. 49 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. If S. 49 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act is imported into the Companies Act, it would be upsetting and interfering with the directions in sub-section (2) of section 230 that the debts previously referred to in that section shall rank equally. Under S. 49 (c) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act the landlord is entitled to priority only in respect of one month's rent; but by virtue of sub-sections (4) and (5) of section 230 a landlord will be entitled to priority — though a qualified one — in respect of a longer period. (1956) 2 Mad LJ 463: (1957) 27 Com Cas 94: AIR 1957 Mad 162 (162, 163) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 5).

3. Debts provable.

——Ss. 229, 168 — Scope — Insolvent Company — Debts — Interest on debts — Interest up to the date of petition for winding up only admissible— Travancore-Cochin Indian Company Rules (1952), R. 159 — Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), Ss. 48, 28 (7) — Companies (Winding up) Rules (1909), (England) R. 97 — Companies Act (1956), Ss. 529, 441.

In the winding up of an insolvent company interest accruing after the commencement of the liquidation is not a provable debt within S. 229 as under S. 168 the commencement of winding up by Court is deemed to take place on the date of presentation of the petition for winding up. AIR 1954 All 129, Foll.; AIR 1931 Rangoon 334, Rel. on. 1963 Ker LT 268: (1963) 1 Com LJ 128: ILR (1963) 1 Ker 335.

There is a close analogy between the insolvency law and the law under the Companies Act by virtue of the provisions of S. 229 of the Companies Act. A debt, which was recoverable and provable on the date of the filing of a winding up petition but becomes barred by time before the order of winding up is made, is a debt which can be proved under the provisions of the Companies Act. Where no statement of account is filed, and the notice for production of account is not complied with and consequently a company is assessed on an estimated income under S. 23 (4) and as there is no appeal and it becomes final, it cannot be challenged or re-opened subsequently by the liquidator of the company in liquidation proceedings especially when assessment relates to years long before the order of winding up and there is no reason to think that the assessment is vitiated by fraud. 4. Rights of secured creditors.

——Ss. 229, 171 and 232—Winding up of company — Rights of secured creditor — He can realise his security by sale of mortgaged property by private treaty — Leave of Court is necessary only when intervention of Court is sought under S. 232 (1) or S. 171. See Ibid, S. 171. AIR 1955 SC 604.

——S. 229 — Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 47 — Company in liquidation — Rights of secured creditors under S. 47 — Debenture-holder coming in liquidation after valuing his security — Court having no desire to redeem security — Creditor desiring to purchase property put to auction — Whether can demand set off of value of security — Companies Act (1956), S. 529.

In the winding up of an insolvent company, a secured creditor (like a debenture-holder), in a case to which S. 47 of the Provincial Insolvency Act applies by virtue of the provisions of S. 229, Companies Act, 1913, has three options. The first one is that he can realise his security and if there is something left due to him, then to come and prove for the balance. The second option is that, he has to give up his security and to come into liquidation ranking with other creditors and take his share in the distribution of the dividends. The third option is to value his security and to come into liquidation and prove for any dues that, according to him remain outstanding in respect of his debt on the valuation of his security.

Under sub-s. (4) of S. 47 of the Insolvency Act there is undoubtedly a power in the Court to redeem the security before the security has been realised by paying to the creditor the assessed value of the security but where the Court has no desire to redeem the security valued by the creditor, a secured creditor, choosing the third option, has no right to claim that his security, which he has valued, should in any way be recognised in liquidation proceedings even to the extent of permitting a set off of the value of the security in respect of a sale held by the Official Liquidator of the property of the insolvent company. If he wishes to be a purchaser of the property put to auction, he has to come in as anyone else. The question whether the creditor can give a valid discharge in respect of his security or not does not arise for determination. (1963) 1 Com LJ 28: (1963) 33 Com Cas 905: AIR 1963 All 12 (13, 15, 16) (Prs 4, 7) (DB).

——S. 229 — Proceedings for winding up of Company —Secured creditors — Determination of rights of mortgagee — Law of mortgages applies.

Section 229 of the Companies Act, 1913 makes it clear that, all the rules obtaining in the insolvency of an individual shall prevail in the winding up of an insolvent company, particularly the rules regarding the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors. Consequently, in determining the rights of mortgagee, or a person having a specific or a fixed charge, it is not the provisions of the Company law that govern the case but the law of mortgages. (1965) 2 Andh WR 393: (1965) 2 Comp LJ 222: AIR 1966 Andh Pra 233 (236) (Pt A) (Pr 14) (DB).

——Ss. 229 and 230 — Debenture holders — Rights of — Creation of specific charge and floating charge on same properties — Priority in such charges.

Where a specific charge is created on immovable property, an equitable charge or a floating charge if any, created will not have priority. Even if there be any other specific charge created on the same property, the specific charge which is the first in point of time will take priority over the second. In a case where buildings are constructed or machinery is fixed to the earth for its beneficial use after mortgaging the land, the buildings and the machinery or plant would be immovable property being an accession to the land, and form part of mortgagee's security. The mortgagee will be entitled to claim security not merely in respect of the land mortgaged but also the buildings and the machinery subsequently fixed to the earth. AIR 1965 Andh Pra 457, Rel. on.

The above principles will govern the subsequent mortgage executed in favour of the Government under the Madras State Aid to Industries Act, 1922. Sections 9 and 10 of Act, far from giving priority to the Government loan, make it clear that the loan by the Government under that Act shall be secured as a mortgage or floating charge upon the assets of the business or enterprise, and that it shall be subject to encumbrances then existing. The mortgage or charge in favour of the Government is expressly made subject to the rights of a prior mortgage, if any.

Held that the loan given to the Company by the Government under the said Act did not answer the description, namely revenue taxes, cesses and rates, given in Section 20 of that Act and hence the Government could not claim any preferential payment under Section 230 (a) of the Companies Act, 1913. (1965) 2 Andh WR 393: (1965) 2 Comp. L. J. 222: AIR 1966 Andh Pra 233 (236, 238, 239) (Pt C) (Prs 20, 36) (DB).

——S. 229 — Rules of law of insolvency — Applicability to winding up proceeding — Winding up Judge if can compel secured creditor to prove his debt — Travancore Companies Act (9 of 1184), S. 284.

The words "the same rules .. .. . as are in force for the time being under the law of insolvency", in S. 284, Travancore Companies Act, are wide enough to include rules contained in the sections of the Insolvency Act, rules if any made under that Act, and any appropriate established rules of practice in the insolvency proceedings unless there is something in the Companies Act itself already providing for the matter in question, or in conflict with the rules which the section purports to import. Therefore, in determining the respective rights of secured and unsecured creditors under S. 284 in a winding up proceeding under the Companies Act, the provisions of the law of insolvency in respect of that matter are attracted. And it is a well-established principle of insolvency law, that in the case of insolvency of an individual a secured creditor can stand outside the proceedings. Hence, the winding up Judge cannot compel a secured creditor to prove his debt or subject it to scrutiny nor has the Judge jurisdiction to annul or modify a secured creditor's security of decree: AIR 1929 All 353 (FB), Rel. on; (1907) 2 KB 23, Disting. 1951 Ker LT 754: ILR (1951) Trav Co 315: AIR 1952 Trav Co 46 (46, 47) (Prs 3, 5) (DB).

5. Property held in fiduciary capacity.

——S. 229 — Property held in trust is not asset of company — (Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), S. 52 (1) (a)) — (Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 28 (5)).

Per Chakravartti, C. J.: It does ont require a statutory provision to establish that no property in which a company has not a beneficial interest can be one of its assets, even though it be a property held in its hands. The Companies Act has said that it is the assets of the insolvent company that shall be distributed among the creditors. In a property held by an insolvent wholly in trust for another person, he has no beneficial interest and therefore such property cannot be one of his assets liable to distribution upon his own Insolvency. It is thus implied in the Companies Act that the assets of a company in liquidation which are liable to be distributed among its creditors cannot include properties held by it wholly in trust for a third party. 59 Cal WN 891: (1955) 25 Com Cas 357 : AIR 1956 Cal 188 (189) (Pt G) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 229 — Property held by company for specific purpose — Insolvency of company — Such property is outside divisible property assets of company — (Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), S. 52 (1) (a)) — (Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 28 (5)).

Per Chakravartti, C. J.:— Property held by an insolvent company in a fiduciary capacity is treated as property held in trust for the purposes of the insolvency laws and property held for a specific purpose is treated as clothed with a species of trust, subject to the same principles as trust property. In all these cases, the property concerned is outside the divisible assets of the company. The party who put the property in the hands of the company can claim it back in winding up as his property while the creditors cannot claim that it should be brought into the distribution. (1955) 25 Com Cas 357: 59 Cal WN 891: AIR 1956 Cal 188 (190) (Pt H) (Pr 7) (DB).

Per Chakravartti, C. J.:— Where money is held by a company in trust for A and itself, that is to say, held for the benefit of 'another and the owner' and if in such a case the trustee becomes insolvent, the beneficial interest which he himself has in the trust property passes to the trustee in his bankruptcy and becomes divisible among his creditors. 59 Cal WN 891: (1955) 25 Com Cas 357: AIR 1956 Cal 188 (192) (Pt I) (Pr 13) (DB).

6. Money deposited for specific purpose.

——S. 229 — Deposit of money with company for a specific purpose—Trust.

B, a firm, deposited a large sum with A a company under an agreement. By clause 3 of this agreement the deposit was specifically 'earmarked as security for the due performance of the agreement'. Under the agreement B was liable to pay A the prices of goods sold to it or to customers introduced by it. Under Cl. 11 of the agreement such prices were to be adjusted within fifteen days of the delivery or despatch of goods and by Cl. 15. A accepted the liability to refund the deposit with interest on the expiry of two years or on prior determination of the agreement by one month's notice.

Held, that as the money paid by B was to be held by A for a specific purpose, it was clothed with what might be called 'a species of trust'. The specification of a particular purpose for which the money was to be held and kept available, prevented it from becoming the property of A (the company) and invested it with the character of a trust fund, standing outside the vicissitudes of the funds belonging to the company itself. 59 Cal WN 891: (1955) 25 Com Cas 357: AIR 1956 Cal 188 (192, 196) (Pt E) (Prs 12, 24) (DB).

——S. 229 — Trust money — Claim to preferential payment — Trusts Act (1882), S. 6.

Where a sum of money is deposited by the sole distributor of a film producing company with the company as a permanent deposit for a period of five years and it is agreed that the same shall be refunded at the end of the period or on prior determination of the distribution agency and the amount is not to carry interest and the Directors of the company instead of keeping the amount separately utilise the money in the business of the company.

Held: that the deposit made contains all the elements of trust contemplated in S. 6 Indian Trusts Act. The fact that the directors utilised the money in the business of the company without the knowledge and express consent of the depositor cannot be taken as a test to find out whether a trust had been created.

The depositor was entitled to a preferential payment from the Company. But the remedy of the depositor is to proceed against the assets of the Company other than these specific movable and immovable properties which are the subject of a hypothecation and a mortgage decree. ——S. 229 — Priority — Trust money — (Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 61) — (Trusts Act (1882), S. 3) — (Contract Act (1872), S. 182).

In every trust the beneficiary is clothed with title to the property not indeed a legal title because that resides in the trustee, but an equitable one; there must be a fiduciary relationship between the trustee and the beneficiary and if there is no such relationship there is no trust also. There is no such relationship between the promisor or promisee and the beneficiary of a contract. If an agent enters into a contract as agent he is not personally liable; the contract is with his principal. AIR 1927 Mad 636 (FB), Rel. on.

The Rayala Corporation, Madras were the direct importer of Hudson Cars. That Corporation had arranged with Cataeri company to solicit orders for these cars. The company was the agent and the Rayala Corporation the principal, so far as the sale of Hudson Cars was concerned. The petitioners had handed over advances to the company for the supply of the cars. The company had not however secured the petitioners the delivery of the cars as promised.

Held, that the company was not acting as trustee of the petitioners who wanted the purchase of Hudson Cars from the Corporation through the agency of the company. If the company had misappropriated the funds entrusted to it then the petitioners' right would be a suit for return of the money or a suit to claim damages. The petitioners could then rank only as ordinary creditors and they could not claim any preferential treatment so far as the money due to them. They could not get any priority under S. 61, Provincial Insolvency Act, the provisions of which are allowed to be applied in the case of a company which is wound up. 1955 Ker LT 251: ILR (1954) TC 1342: AIR 1955 Trav Co 139 (141) (Prs 8, 9, 10, 11) (DB).

7. Set-off in winding up.

——S. 229 — The right of set-off given by the bankruptcy law is wider than that given by the general law. Unliquidated damages may be set off against a debt. See S. 47, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. AIR 1951 Cal 519.

——S. 229 — Company in liquidation — Right of set off.

Where defendant to an action by the company in liquidation had a right to set off before the winding up, the right is not destroyed by the winding up. The set off will still be a plea in bar and a defence pro tanto to the plaintiff's claim. ILR (1952) 2 Cal 16: AIR 1951 Cal 519 (526) (Pt A) (Pr 4).

——S. 229 — Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), S. 47 — Mutual dealings between surety and bankrupt company — Set-off.

A joint promise is also a several promise and in a suit to enforce such promise the surety can set off a separate debt due to him. If there are mutual dealings between the surety and the bankrupt company in liquidation such dealings must be set off against each other under S. 229 of the Companies Act read with S. 47 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. On the date of the order for winding up of a bank B was a guarantor for the whole of the debt due to the bank from A and was liable personally to the bank for the repayment of such debt. At the same time the bank was on that date indebted to B.

Held that there were mutual dealings between B and the bank and the debt due to him from the bank must be set off against his liability as guarantor for the debt of A. ILR (1952) 2 Cal 16: AIR 1951 Cal 519 (522) (Pt E) (Pr 22).

——S. 229 — Set-off — Joint and several debt — Sum due to partner of firm from company in liquidation — If can be set off against debt due to such company from firm — Partnership Act, S. 25.

A joint debt cannot be set off but a joint and several debt can. According to S. 25 of the Partnership Act, every partner is liable jointly with all the other partners, and also severally. It follows that any sum due to one of the partners in a firm from a company in liquidation can be set off against the debt due to such company from the firm. ——S. 229 — Set-off.

Where there have been mutual dealings between a company and a creditor proving or claiming to prove a debt in the course of the winding up of the company, an account should be taken of what is due from the one party to the other in respect of such dealings and the sum due from the one party has to be set off against any sum due from the other party and the balance of the amount and not more, has to be received or paid by either side respectively. The view of the Legislature evidently is that it would be unjust if the Official Liquidator could demand and recover in full money due by a debtor, but that very debtor, if he happens to be a creditor of the company for an equal sum, must rest content with a dividend representing a fraction of the debt due to him from the company. The principle is the same whether this right of the creditor to a set off is asserted before the Official Liquidator or in answer to a claim of the Official Liquidator in a suit filed by him. 1951 Mad WN 206 : (1951) 1 Mad LJ 340: (1951) 21 Comp Cas 162: ILR (1952) Mad 60: 65 Mad LW 1243: AIR 1951 Mad 783 (786) (Pt B) (Pr 15) (DB).

(Companies Act (1913), S. 230.)

1. Scope.
2. State debts.
3. Wages or salaries of employees.
4. Arrears of rent.
5. Preference over debenture debts.

1. Scope.

——S. 230 (5) — In respect of a debt recoverable from a Company ordered to be wound up compulsorily the date material for determining the question of limitation would be the date of the winding up order. See Companies Act (1956), S. 230. AIR 1963 All 284.

——S. 230 — Priority claimed not under S. 230 but independently of it — Rules as to interest—Where the sum constituted a trust money in the Company's hands and therefore the claimant is entitled to priority not under S. 230 but independently of it such a claim is subject to the same rule about interest as any other debt provable in the liquidation proceedings. See Ibid, S. 229. AIR 1954 All 129.

——Ss. 230, 229 — Scope — Provisions of S. 49 — Presidency Towns Insolvency Act if can be applied by virtue of S. 229.

In the liquidation of a Company priority is confined to the categories and heads of claims specified in S. 230 and it cannot be extended by importing provisions of Insolvency Acts. Since S. 229 must be read subject to provisions of S. 230 it does not justify such importation. AIR 1957 Mad 162.

2. State debts.

——S. 230 (1) — Limited liability company — Director — Personal liability for arrears of taxes due to company. See Ibid, S. 6 (iv). AIR 1955 Andhra 26.

——S. 230 (1) (a) — Preferential debt — Claim for balance of sales-tax — Date when tax become payable held was when notice of demand was served — (Sales Tax — Bengal Finance (Sales Tax) Act (6 of 1941), Ss. 4, 10, 11). AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 1057 (DB).

——S. 230 — Crown debts — Income-tax dues — Attachment by seizure of movables—Crown debts stand outside limits mentioned in S. 230 — It has no priority — Attachment by seizure does not give priority — (Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act (3 of 1913), R. 15. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 410.

——S. 230 (a) — Applicability — Taxes (Income-tax Act (1922), S. 18-A).

The sum demanded under S. 18-A of the Income-tax Act is not tax which became due and payable within the meaning of S. 230. (1953) 24 ITR 67: (1953) 23 Com Cas 285: 91 Cal LJ 180: AIR 1953 Cal 487 (Pt A) (Pr 1).

——S. 231 — Burden of proof — Re-opening of assessment to income-tax — Onus.

Where an assessee wants in winding up proceeding to reopen an assessment which has been made by the Income-tax authorities, it must be established by the assessee that the assessment has been an improper one. LR (1875) 10 Ch. A 373, Rel. on. (1953) 24 ITR 67 : (1953) 23 Com Cas 285 : 91 Cal LJ 180 : AIR 1953 Cal 487 (488) (Pt B) (Pr 3).

——S. 230 (1) (a)—Priority in respect of advance Income-tax (Income-tax Act (1922), Ss. 18-A, 29 and 45).

The amount imposed and demanded under S. 18-A, Income-tax Act as advance income-tax is a tax within the accepted meaning of that term. (1935) 80 Law Ed. 477 and 6 Commonwealth LR 41, Rel. on.

In deciding whether the State has priority in respect of the amount demanded as advance income-tax it is not necessary to consider whether it would be income-tax falling within S. 3, Income-tax Act. The question to consider is whether the amount for which a demand has been issued and which is in the nature of a tax is due from the company at the date of the winding up order and became due and payable within twelve months next before that order.

The tax becomes due when demand is made under S. 29 and under S. 45 of the Income-tax Act and then it becomes a debt due to the Crown. Therefore where admittedly the advance income-tax was demanded under S. 18-A of the Indian Income-tax Act within twelve months before the date of the winding-up order, it is a tax falling within S. 230 (1) (a) of the Indian Companies Act in respect of which the State has got a priority to all other debts. (1953) 4 STC 271 (Cal) (SB), Disting.

Under S. 230, the material date is the date of the winding-up order and not any subsequent date. If on the date of the winding up order there was a notice of demand of payment of the tax under S. 18-A, any subsequent assessment after the winding-up would not destroy the preferential right of the State under S. 230 (1) (a) of the Indian Companies Act. It may be that if the final assessment is less than the amount collected under S. 18-A, the company may be entitled to a refund of the excess. But that does not have a bearing on the preferential right under S. 230 (1) (a) of the Indian Companies Act. (1954) 1 Mad LJ 282: (1954) 25 ITR 140: (1954) 24 Com Cas 41: 67 Mad LW 143: AIR 1954 Mad 858 (859, 860, 861) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 7, 8, 9) (DB).

——S. 230 — Priority of State debt — Debt secured by mortgage deed but not registered under S. 109 — State not entitled to preferential treatment — Cannot recover as arrears of land revenue. See Companies Act (1956), S. 530. AIR 1962 Punj 519.

3. Wages or salaries of employees.

——S. 230 (1) (c) — "Wages" — Meaning of — Lock-out of factory — Dispute referred to Tribunal — Compensation awarded for closing down — If wages — Priority — (Companies Act (1956), S. 530) — (Industrial Disputes Act (1947), S. 2 (rr) — (Payment of Wages Act (1936), S. 2 (vi)).

Section 230 (1) (c) of the Companies Act, 1913, does not contain the wide definition given to the term 'wages' either in S. 2 (rr) of the Industrial Disputes Act or in S. 2 (vi) of the Payment of Wages Act but confines it only to wages in respect of services rendered to the Company and not to sums payable upon the termination of services of an employee. If an employer shuts down his place of business as a means of repraisal there would be a lockout. If the Industrial Tribunal finds that there was an illegal lockout, the employees would be entitled to be paid their wages because a lockout does not automatically terminate the services of the workman and therefore, in the case of an illegal lockout the sums payable to the employees may be entitled to preferential treatment under S. 230 (1) (c) of the Companies Act. But where the business has been closed and it is either admitted or found that the closure is real and bona fide, any dispute arising with reference thereto would fall outside the purview of the Industrial Disputes Act. If so, the sums payable after the closure of the business as compensation, by the quandam employer to the employees, would not be 'wages' in respect of services rendered within the meaning of S. 230 of the Companies Act. (AIR 1956 Mad 241 and AIR 1957 SC 95, Rel. on). Where therefore what had been awarded to the workmen by the Tribunal is in the nature of an ex gratia payment dehors the contract of service, it is not payment of remuneration in respect of services rendered to the Company, and hence, the amount payable to the workmen as compensation is not entitled to preferential payment under S. 230. (1957) 2 Andhra WR 244 : 1957 An LT 815 : ILR (1957) Andh Pra 631 : (1958) 28 Com Cas 40 : AIR 1957 Andhra Pra 725 (728, 729) (Prs 25, 26).

——S. 230. 1 (c) — Illegal lock out — Loss of right of priority.

When an employee is compelled to leave the service on account of his master's inability to pay his salary, the right of priority is not lost. The same principle must apply to the case of an illegal lock out. 1836-2 Deac 40, 1840-5 LT (OS) 203, Rel. on. 64 Mad LW 705 : 1951-21 Com Cas 251 : 1951-2 Mad L Jour 185 : AIR 1951 Mad 987 (992) (Pt C) (Pr 9) (DB).

——S. 230 (1) (c) — "In respect of services rendered to the Company" — Change of management.

In the case of a company, any change in the management, would not put an end to the company as such. Where the debenture trustees, though they entered upon the mortgaged premises in exercise of their rights under the deed, carried on the business of the company only in pursuance of an agreement between them and the company to work the Mills "at the risk and on account of the company," it cannot be said that there was change in personality and the workers and still the workers of the company. Even if the debenture trustees on behalf of the debenture-holders, had exercised their right to carry on the business of the company, the company would not cease to exist as a legal entity and the business would continue to be the business of the company, though it may be carried on by the debenture-holders as mortgagees. There is only a change of management together with a right to appropriate the profits from the business, but there is no change of personality: 1905-1 Ch D 357; 1895-2 QBD 253, Disting. 64 Mad LW 705 : 1951-21 Com Cas 251 : 1951-2 Mad LJ 185 : AIR 1951 Mad 987 (989, 990) (Pt D) (Prs 5, 6) (DB).

——S. 230 (1) (b) — 'Wages' — Payment of bonus — Contract Act (1872), S. 25 (2) — Travancore Companies Act, S. 285.

The word 'bonus' does not come under the category of 'wages'. To recognise the employees of a company in respect of bonus as preferential creditors within the meaning of S. 230 is certainly not warranted. The payment of bonus will not come under S. 25 (2) of the Contract Act also as the employees have rendered services in return for wages payable to them and not voluntarily. (1951)-1 Ker LT 598 : 22 Com Cas 96 : ILR (1951) Trav-Co 635 : AIR 1952 Trav-Coch 99 (100) (Pr 2) (DB).

——S. 230 — Priority of claim for rent by landlord against insolvent company — (Companies Act, (1956), S. 30).

A landlord is not entitled to priority in respect of a claim for arrears of rent against the insolvent company merely because the premises were sealed by the order of Court and thus came to be in custodia legis. The reason is that the reduction into its custody by the law, of any property does not affect the rights inter se of the competing claimants. The law holds the property impartially for the benefit of all who are entitled to it and landlords acquire no priority. (1956) 2 Mad LJ 463 : (1957) 27 Com Cas 94 : AIR 1957 Mad 162 (163) (Pt B) (Pr 6).

5. Preference over debenture debts.

——S. 230 (1) — Winding up of Company — Property sold free of charge — Right of debenture-holder to payment out of sale proceeds — Debenture holder not in possession of debenture scrips — Effect — Floating charge — Priority of debts mentioned in S. 230 (1) — T. P. Act (1882), S. 73 — Companies Act (1956), S. 530 (1).

Upon the compulsory winding up of a limited company, a debenture-holder claimed the debenture amount from the sale proceeds of properties over which a charge had been created. On behalf of the Company it was argued that the properties were sold free of charge, that the debenture-holder was not in possession of the debenture scrips and therefore, not a second creditor and that the debts mentioned in S. 230 (1) had a right of preferential payment as against the claims of debenture-holders.

Held, that under the doctrine of substituted security, if the subject of a mortgage or charge is changed or transformed the mortgage or charge attaches to the new form, which it had assumed. Section 73, Transfer of Property Act, enacts this doctrine. It has been applied to the case of a charge. This doctrine was also applied to a charge in winding up proceedings. On this principle and in view of the fact that the charged properties were directed to be sold free from encumbrance on the understanding that the debenture-holder shall be paid first out of the sale proceeds, the floating charge under the debentures held by him would attach to the sale proceeds of the charged properties. The debenture-holder was entered in the Company's register of debenture-holders and had paid consideration for the debentures. He would continue to be the holder of the charge and his status as a secured creditor of the Company would similarly continue. This status did not depend on his continued possession of the scrips. The production of the scrips is relevant to the question of payment or satisfaction of the debentures, but not to his status.

The debenture-holder was prepared to execute an indemnity bond against the claims of other persons who might produce the debenture scrips, and therefore, he was entitled to payment.

The debts mentioned in S. 230 (1) have a right of preferential payment as against the claims of the holders of debentures under any floating charge created by the Company; and those debts can be paid out of the property which is subject to the floating charge. The payment of these debts cannot be resisted by the holders of debentures creating a floating charge. There can be floating charge over immovable property of a Company. (1964) 34 Com Cas 287: (1964) 1 Com LJ 225: AIR 1964 All 558 (560, 561, 562) (Prs 9, 12, 19, 21, 28, 29) (DB).

——S. 230 — Preferential payment — Conditions.

In order that a person may be entitled to preferential payment, his claim must come within the ambit of one or other of the clauses in subsection (1) of S. 230. There is no other provision in the Companies Act entitling the employees to be paid the money equivalent of the accumulated leave as a preferential payment. (1958) 28 Com Cas 162: 1957 An LT 719.

——S. 230 (2) (4) — Applicability — Receiver taking possession of assets on behalf of debenture holder — Effect on floating charge — (T. P. Act (1882), S. 100).

Section 230 (2) (b), Companies Act only operates if at the moment of the winding up there is still floating a charge created by the company and it only gives the preferential creditors priority over the claims of the debenture-holders in any property which at that moment of time is comprised in or subject to that charge. Where however, the debenture-holders appoint a receiver and such receiver takes possession of the assets of the mortgagor company comprised in the floating charge, that charge becomes crystallised and fixed on those assets and there is no question of any floating charge to which the provisions of S. 230 (2) can apply after that date. 1941 Ch. 129, Rel. on. (1955) 2 Mad LJ 1: AIR 1955 Mad 331 (339) (Pt D) (Pr 19) (DB).

——S. 231 — Official liquidator has no power to declare a particular transaction as fraudulent preference — It is the function of the Court. See Ibid, S. 181 (5). (1965) 1 Com LJ 243: AIR 1966 Andh Pra 157 (DB).

——S. 231 — Fraudulent preference — What is — Preference of one creditor over another on account of pressure — Dominant motive — Onus of proof.

It is the dominant motive that impels a debtor to make a transfer of some property of his in favour of one of creditors that decides the issue whether the transfer amounts to fraudulent preference or not. The onus is upon the person who impugned a transaction as being a fraudulent preference to make it out and not for the alienee to disprove that it is a fraudulent preference.

Where in a suit brought by a creditor of company on the basis of a promissory note executed by the Managing Director of a company and as a result of pressure of attachment before judgment of the buses belonging to the Company, the latter sold to the creditor plaintiff three of its buses for the suit claim and in addition a cash payment of a certain amount, the transfer cannot be attacked by the offical liquidator as a fraudulent preference falling within S. 231, Companies Act, (1913), when it is not alleged or proved that the whole of the suit claim was not due to the company. (1966) 1 Andh WR 374: (1965) 1 Com LJ 243: AIR 1966 Andhra Pra 157 (158, 159) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 8, 16) (DB).

——S. 231 — Applicability.

Before any transfer or payment can be held to be void under S. 231, it must first be found if it had been done by an individual and it would then be deemed in his insolvency a fraudulent preference. Clearly, it is payments which fall within the mischief of S. 51 of the Insolvency Act, that are being referred to as 'fraudulent preferences' in S. 231 of the Companies Act. Where the transfers were not within three months preceding the date of winding up application, there is no scope for the operation of provision of S. 231. 58 Cal WN 545: AIR 1955 Cal 338 (340) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

——S. 232 (1) (as amended by Act 22 of 1936) — "Any sale held .... of the properties" — Interpretation of.

The words "any sale held without leave of the Court of any of the properties," inserted in S. 232 (1) by Act 22 of 1936, refer only to sales held through the intervention of the Court and not to sales effected by the secured creditor outside the winding up and without the intervention of the Court. Hence such a sale is valid and binding on all the parties concerned. AIR 1955 Mad 331, Affirmed. M. K. Ranganathan v. ——S. 232 (before amendment by Act 22 of 1936) — 'Execution put in force without the leave of the Court against the estate or effects of the company' — Meaning of.

The phrase 'execution put in force without the leave of the Court against the estate or effects of the company' as used in S. 232 refers only to the stage when the attachment thereunder is effected and not any stage subsequent thereto. If the attachment had already been completed in the course of the execution proceeding and the winding up commenced thereafter as contemplated under S. 232 then the sale arising out of that execution has to be held as one not hit by that section as it originally stood and as such not void. 1959 BLJR 475 : ILR 38 Patna 1080.

——S. 232 (before amendment by Act 22 of 1936) — 'Void' — Meaning.

The word void as used in the context of S. 232 is unequivocal and means nullity and nothing less than that. 1959 BLJR 475 : ILR 38 Patna 1080.

——Ss. 234 and 235 — "Court" — Sanction to compromise misfeasance proceedings.

What S. 234 requires is the sanction of the Court, and every judge of the High Court sitting on the Original Side constitutes the Court for the purpose of S. 234. As to which particular judge should give sanction depends upon the allocation of work made by the Chief Justice, but whichever Judge gives the sanction, he is exercising his power as the Court contemplated by S. 234. There is nothing in the Companies Act which requires that the sanction to compromise a misfeasance claim must be given by the very Judge who is trying the misfeasance summons. 55 Bom LR 629 : ILR (1954) Bom 79 : (1954) 23 Com Cas 25 : AIR 1954 Bom 121 (125) (Pt C) (Pr 9) (DB).

1. Scope.

——S. 235 — Applicability — Conditions — (Companies Act (1956), S. 543).

In order to bring a case within S. 235 it is essential to establish that (1) there has been a breach of trust and (2) that the breach has resulted in pecuniary loss to the company. 63 Cal WN 407 : (1959) 29 Com Cas 437 : AIR 1959 Cal 625 (633) (Pt B) (Pr 37).

——S. 235 — Companies Act, (1956), S. 543 — Nature of proceedings under — Procedure to be followed — Death of petitioner — O. 22, R. 3, Civil P. C. will apply — Art. 176, Limitation Act also will apply — Repeal of sub-S. (3) of S. 235 by Amending Act of 1936 — Effect.

The proceedings under S. 235 are judicial in nature and pertain to the civil liability of delinquent directors etc. Except where specific rules framed under Companies Act indicate a contrary procedure, the procedure provided under the C. P. Code for the trial of a suit would apply to a proceeding under S. 235. It is no doubt true that the petition does not actually become a plaint and the technical provisions pertaining to a plaint may not be attracted as also the period of limitation provided under the Limitation Act for presenting a plaint yet that does not mean that when the proceeding is started on a petition of a creditor or a liquidator the procedure of a suit as provided in the C. P. Code is not to be followed. Thus where a creditor submits a petition under section 235 and later dies, procedure prescribed under O 22, R. 3, C. P. Code ought to be held applicable. If then the procedure under O. 22, R. 3, C. P. Code is attracted for a petition under S. 235 of the Companies Act due to S. 141, C. P. Code. then the provisions as to limitation under Art. 176 of the Limitation Act which too are procedural in nature should be taken to be attracted. AIR 1938 Lah 658 and (1953) 23 Com Cas 474 (Bom) and AIR 1954 Bom 121 and AIR 1928 Lah 376 and AIR 1955 Nag 78 and AIR 1950 EP 111 (FB), and AIR 1949 Mad 675 and AIR 1920 Lah 51, Rel. on.

The repeal of sub-S. (3) and amendment introduced in sub-S. (1) of S. 235 by the Amending Act of 1936 by providing a special period of limitation different from that for a suit, affected the initiation of the proceeding by means of an application under S. 235. The repeal of sub-s. (3) does not in terms mean that the whole of the Limitation Act becomes inapplicable to the entire proceedings under S. 235 whether they be for the specific purpose mentioned in the section or for any incidental and procedural matter. 1962 MPLJ (Notes) 319 : 1963 Jab LJ 82 : AIR 1963 Madh Pra 120 (121, 122) (Prs 5, 12).

——S. 235 — Scope — The director can be arrested in execution of a decree for payment of money for loss caused by him as director under S. 51 proviso (c) Civil P. C., even though his allegation that he has no money is true. ILR (1950) Mad 742 : (1949) 19 Com Cas 311: 62 Mad LW 784 : (1949) 1 Mad LJ 604 : 1949 Mad WN 689: AIR 1950 Mad 208 (209) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 5) (DB).

——Ss. 235, 155 — S. 235 is not restricted to winding up by Court but applies to all the three modes of winding up specified in S. 155 (1) by virtue of S. 155 (2)—There is nothing in S. 235 or scheme of Act to indicate a contrary intention. See Ibid, S. 155. AIR 1950 Mad 68 (DB).

——Ss. 235, 216 —Words 'any other matter' in S. 216 cannot be construed ejusdem generis with topics specified before them — Operation of S. 235 cannot be limited by reference to S. 216. See Ibid, S. 216. AIR 1950 Mad 68 (DB).

——S. 235 — Applicability —Winding up petition commenced before coming into force of Compaines Act, 1956—S. 543 of Act of 1956 does not apply—Misfeasance application is governed by S. 235 of the Companies Act of 1913. Companies Act (1956), Ss. 543, 647.

Where the winding up proceedings have already commenced before the coming into force of the Companies Act of 1956, all provisions of the 1956 Act, except those mentioned in S. 647 of that Act, with reference to winding up contained in the new Act do not apply; but the Company has to be wound up in the same manner and with the same incidents as if the 1956 Act had not been passed. Section 543 of the 1956 Act (which corresponds to S. 235 of the 1913 Act) is not one of the excepted sections. A misfeasance application, for which provision is made in S. 235 of the 1913 Act and S. 543 of the 1956 Act is undoubtedly one of the incidents of winding up. Hence, the application is governed by S. 235 of the 1913 Act and not by S. 543 of the 1956 Act. The importance of this position consists in the fact that, whereas S. 235 of the 1913 Act prescribed a period of three years, S. 543 of the 1956 Act prescribes a period of five years of limitation. (1964) 34 Com Cases 34 (Mys).

——S. 235 — Scope and object — Scope of S. 185 is more restricted than S. 235 — Proceeding under S. 185 against director cannot be resorted to for enforcing payments on account of promises or executory undertakings or for breach of contract — Actual existence of tangible property or money belonging to Company in hands of director essential. There can be no doubt that the proceedings under S. 235 are civil proceedings and S. 45-N of the Banking Companies Act will apply to the order passed in it. (1961) 31 Com Cas 77: ILR (1961) 11 Raj 16.

2. Jurisdiction of Court.

——S. 235 — Application against non-resident foreigner — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 29.

An application under S. 235 against a non-resident foreigner is maintainable and the Court has jurisdiction to entertain the same and consider the same on merits and an order passed in such application will have the same force as a decree passed in a suit against non-resident foreigner. 1951-21 Com Cas 138 : AIR 1952 Mad 481 (484) (Pt B) (Pr 7).

3. Powers of Court.

——S. 235 — Scope — Power of Court to direct public examination of directors and officers of company in liquidation during pendency of misfeasance proceedings. See Ibid, S. 196. AIR 1955 Mad 30 (DB).

——Ss. 235, 195, 196 — Investigation in misfeasance proceedings — Power of Court to summon party against its will to give evidence.

In the misfeasance proceedings of a Company, the winding up Judge has power to summon a party against its wish to give evidence on oath in open Court. As a necessary incident of its power to adjudicate, a Court of justice, within the sphere of its jurisdiction, has inherent power to compel the attendance of witnesses in proceedings before it and the giving of testimony concerning relevant facts within their knowledge. Our rules of procedure—civil and criminal—have recognised these principles and made appropriate provisions in R. 14 of Order 16, Civil P. C., and section 540, Criminal P. C. The language of O. 16, R. 14, Civil P. C., assumes that there is an inherent power in the Court to summon a party. In proceedings like the winding up of a company, where proceedings are initiated by the Official Liquidator, and other officer of the Court, and the Director, who is an officer of the Company, who are the best persons to explain their conduct in regard to the affairs of the company stay away from the witness box, it may become necessary for the Court in the exercise of its inherent power to summon even a party against his will to give evidence on oath.

In the instant case, the impugned Order was not made in exercise of powers under S. 195, Companies Act, 1913, the examination under which is strictly a private proceeding intended to obtain information. The parties were summoned to give evidence on oath in open Court and not to give any information as contemplated under S. 195. The order summoning the parties was therefore, not in exercise of powers under S. 195 or S. 196 of the Companies Act, 1913. ——S. 235 — Misfeasance proceedings against Director and Officers of Company—Company Judge inviting counsel appearing before him to place whatever circumstances they would like him to consider before making up his mind finally so as to call some of the Directors and the officers of the Company for giving evidence in open Court—Order made after hearing counsel of parties—Reasons for order indicated briefly and stating that further reasons will be given in final order as it would otherwise embarrass one or the other of the parties — Held, that reasons given could not be considered to be inadequate and the order could not be interfered with as being arbitrary or without reasons. (1963) 33 Com Cas 839 : AIR 1964 Mys 75 (80) (Pt C) (Pr 8) (DB).

——S. 235 —Four witnesses for liquidator-applicant and four on behalf of some directors-respondents examined — Court ordering that remaining directors who had not then given evidence as well as auditor should appear and give evidence —Court held had power to pass such order. (1964) 34 Com Cases 34 (Mys).

——S. 235 — Misfeasance proceedings and ordinary Civil trial — Distinction.

It cannot be said that misfeasance proceedings are in all respects same as, and not in any respect different from ordinary civil trial. In the latter case, there are only two contending parties before Court and each party or each set may be expected in its own interest to place before Court such evidence as it considers necessary in support of its case. But in proceedings for misfeasance the interests involved are not merely those of the parties actually present before Court but of many others who are not before the Court. The Liquidator who is very often an applicant in such cases is not conducting the trial for his personal benefit but is discharging a statutory duty. In the event of the applicant being a creditor or a contributory, he is representing the interests of other creditors or contributories also. The possibility of the personal interests of the parties actually present being in some respects or to some extent adverse to those of the absent parties, or the parties actually present not being in a position to place all material that may be relevant, cannot always be ruled out.

Indeed, when it becomes apparent that the parties present, particularly those whose conduct is under investigation and who may be expected to be in possession of relevant details, refrain from placing such details before Court, it is the duty of the Court to compel them to give evidence so that the ultimate decision may, as far as it is humanly possible, be a fair and just decision upon the facts in controversy. (1964) 34 Com Cas 34 (Mys).

——S. 235 — Banking Companies Act (1949), S. 45-H —Application under S. 235 —Prima facie case of misfeasance has to be made out.

Where in the course of the winding up proceedings of a limited banking company the liquidator makes an application against the chairman of the bank under S. 235 of the Companies Act, 1913 (S. 543 of the 1956 Act), under S. 45-H of Banking Companies Act. 1949, it has to be seen whether on the terms of the sections a prima facie case has been made out against the chairman. If it is shown that he is liable or accountable for any money or property of the Bank or has been guilty of misfeasance or breach of trust in relation to its assets, the Court may pass an appropriate order directing repayment or restoration of the money, or property. ILR (1961) 11 Raj 1022: 1962 Raj LW 103: AIR 1962 Raj 118 (120, 121) (Pt A) (Pr 6) (DB).

4. Who can be ordered under this section.

——S. 235 — Misfeasance — Acts of director-in-charge — Other directors when liable — Director-in-charge, new to business of company, relying on officers of company and assuming account maintained by them to be correct — Not guilty of any fraud or dishonest conduct.

A distinction must be made between the directors who are only directors on the one hand and the director-in-charge. The former cannot be held responsible for the acts and omissions of the director-in-charge in the absence of any proof that they knew of these acts and omissions and could take any steps to mend matters.

Held, that the director-in-charge could not be held guilty of fraud and dishonest conduct if he relied on the officers of the company and assumed the accounts maintained by them to be correct. (1963) 1 Comp LJ 108: AIR 1963 All 55 (67) (Pt F) (Prs 53, 54).

——S. 235 — Scope — Liability of Director for dividend wrongly distributed on his shares — Companies Act (1956), S. 543.

Under S. 235 a person could be held liable only for his acts and omissions as a director and not for what he had received as a dividend on his shares in his capacity as a shareholder. The dividend may have been wrongly distributed out of capital but a shareholder could not be made to refund the dividend so received by an application under S. 235. ILR (1962) 1 All 128: AIR 1962 All 486 (496) (Pt B) (Pr 39) (DB).

——S. 235 — Applicability — Repayment by liquidator of loan advanced by directors — No refund can be ordered — Companies Act (1956), S. 543).

For S. 235 to apply, two conditions must be satisfied. The first is that the person against whom an order is made must belong to one of the categories specified and the second condition is that he must have either misapplied or retained any fund or become liable or accountable for any money or property of the company or been guilty of any misfeasance or breach of trust in relation to the company. Hence, where the liquidator has repaid the amounts advanced by the directors of the company by way of loan to the company they cannot be asked to refund the same under S. 235. 1958 Nag LJ 139: (1958) 28 Com Cas 195: AIR 1959 Bom 474 (475) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

——S. 235 — Fraud and misfeasance by directors who were the only shareholders — Whether can be challenged or made ground of claim by Official Liquidator at the instance of creditor.

A and B were the two directors of a private company and were the only shareholders of the company. They practised fraud and misfeasance in respect of the money of the company. The Official Liquidator took out misfeasance summons against them.

Held, (1) that as A and B were guilty of misfeasance and breach of trust and had practised on the company fraud there could be no question of the application of the principle laid down by the Privy Council in (1911) A. C. 498, and therefore the fraud and misfeasance of the directors could be challenged by the liquidator.

(2) that fraud practised on the company even by directors who were themselves the sole shareholders could not be expurgated by recourse to any fanciful ratification. (1957) 27 Com Cas 43: AIR 1956 Bom 681 (685) (Pr 9).

——S. 235 — Liability of directors for misfeasance — (Companies Act (1956), S. 543).

Section 235 of the Companies Act gives a summary remedy only against such Directors and officers as have been personally guilty of some act of misfeasance. The Directors are not bound to examine the entries in the Company's books of account.

Where the general Board of a bank delegates under the Articles its powers of sanctioning loans to a Committee of Directors and the committee sanctions a loan to a man of no means the Directors cannot be held personally liable, or guilty of misfeasance. But the Directors are responsible for the management of the Company and cannot divest themselves of their responsibilities by delegating the whole management to an agent and abstaining from all enquiry.

Where Directors wilfully shut their eyes to the acts of the agents or managing agents and thereby aiding misfeasance or misapplication and falsification of balance sheet, the Directors are guilty of misconduct and liable to pay compensation.

The directors are trustees of the funds or assets of the company which have come into their hands, but they are not trustees of the loans or debts advanced by the company. In order that misconduct may amount to misfeasance, it must be 'wilful misconduct or wilful or culpable negligence', but their failure to take steps for recovery of debt will not amount to misfeasance. 63 Cal WN 407 : (1959) 29 Com Cas 437 : AIR 1959 Cal 625 (633) (Pt A) (Prs 31 to 36).

——S. 235 — Directors shirking responsibility — Liability — (Companies Act (1956), S. 543).

It appeared that the managing director did not bring up the question of particular advances at any time before the board of directors for their approval in accordance with the terms of Art. 99 of the Articles of Association. It also appeared that for some reason or other, the directors did not exercise any control over the authority of the managing director in the matter of making advances under the power of attorney, which was granted to him. It was improbable that some of the directors did not know that advances were being made by the managing director from time to time, but it appeared that they remained absolutely idle and did not exercise any control over the acts of the managing director.

Held, that the directors who had knowledge about the advances were not justified in shirking all responsibilities in respect of the affairs of the bank and leaving everything to be done by the managing director at his own sweet will. 63 Cal WN 407 : (1959) 29 Com Cas 437 : AIR 1959 Cal 625 (634) (Pt C) (Pr 42).

——S. 235 — Misfeasance proceedings — Some directors not impleaded — Maintainability of application — (Tort) — (Companies Act (1956), S. 543).

The general principle of liability of joint tort-feasor cannot apply to misfeasance proceedings.

In order that persons may be joint tort-feasors there must be a common design and concerted action. Directors of a banking company cannot, therefore, be regarded as joint tort-feasors if no conspiracy or concerted action is alleged or proved against them and an application under S. 235 cannot be held to be not maintainable in the absence of the directors who have not been impleaded as parties to the proceeding. 63 Cal WN 407: (1959) 29 Com Cas 437: AIR 1959 Cal 625 (636) (Pt E) (Pr 53).

——S. 235 — Misfeasance application — Responsibility of directors — (Companies Act (1956), S. 543.

Although the liability or responsibility of any individual Director must ultimately be traced to the actual facts and circumstances proved by evidence and his conduct in relation thereto, the general principles of liability are a matter of law. While the general principle may briefly be stated to be that a director should always act honestly and that the standard of care expected of him is to take such care as in the circumstances of the case, and having regard to his knowledge and experience and his association with the affairs of the company, may be described as reasonable, the nature of the duty resting on him and the extent of care expected of him must depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. S. 281 of the Companies Act of 1913, and the corresponding S. 633 of the Companies Act of 1956, which empower the Court to relieve a director of any liability which he may incur under the law, clearly state that before so relieving him the Court should be satisfied not only that he has acted honestly but also that he has acted reasonably and that having regard to all circumstances of the case including those connected with his appointment, he ought fairly to be excused. While it has always been recognised that having regard to the nature, magnitude or complexity of the business and affairs of the Company, delegation of powers to and the distribution of responsibility between the Directors and members of the supervisory staff is permissible and while it is further recognised that so long as there is no room for suspicion, a director may rely upon the competence, honest judgment and advice of other directors like managing director or others specially charged with duties of a particular category, or of any member of the supervisory staff, it is not open to a director totally to divest himself of all his responsibilities or to claim total immunity from the duty to take care which the law imposes upon him, whatever may be the nature and extent of the duty having regard to the circumstances peculiar to the Company and to his association with the affairs of the Company. (1925) 1 Ch. D. 507 Rel. on. (1964) 34 Com Cases 34 (Mys).

——S. 235 — Management of affairs of Company — Responsibility of Directors. See Ibid, S. 281. (1964) 34 Com Cas 34 (Mys).

——S. 235 — Liability of Managing Director — He cannot be heard to say that he relied on staff under him. (Companies Act (1956), S. 543.)

The liability of the managing director under S. 235 of the Companies Act of 1913 does not rest and need not rest on any admissions made by him or said to have been made by him, but it flows from his very position as Managing Director. Whoever else is or is not responsible for proper management of the affairs of the Company and control over its staff, there can be no doubt that he, as Managing Director, was primarily responsible having been admittedly associated with the day to day administration of the Company, ——albeit subject to supervision by the Board of Directors. He cannot, be heard to say that the staff under him possessed such integrity and efficiency as would entitled him to place complete reliance upon them. Where he has acquired full knowledge of not only the defects in working but also dishonesty on the part of some members of the staff, if in spite of such knowledge he took no corrective action, the only conclusion is either that he was grossly negligent or that he was participating in or at least connived at the dishonest activities of the staff. Taking the most charitable view of the situation, he can be said to have no answer to the charge of negligence. (1964) 34 Com Cases 34 (Mys).

——S. 235 — Liability of directors — Directors permitting dishonest persons to continue in charge of cash — Companies Act (1956), S. 543.

It is not sufficient for Director to say merely that they have acted honestly. They should also prove that their conduct was reasonable in the circumstances of the case. It cannot be said to be reasonable conduct to permit dishonest persons to continue in charge of cash when their dishonest conduct is not by any means a mere isolated lapse from correct conduct induced by pressure of circumstances but one persisted in over a long period and coupled with steps simultaneously taken by falsification of accounts or otherwise to prevent detection. After discovering actual dishonest conduct and falsification of entries in the books of account to cover up dishonesty, the Directors as prudent men of business should not have, with any sense of security, left the matters entirely in the hands of the Managing Director who had demonstrably failed to prevent dishonest conduct on the part of the staff members. LR 5 HL 480 Rel. on. (1964) 34 Com Cases 34 (Mys).

——S. 235 — Duty of directors — Directors taking undue advantage of their position.

If certain preferences or concessions are made in favour of the Directors including the omission to adopt proper procedure and scrutiny, it is a legitimate criticism to make that the Directors have taken undue advantage of their position as Directors which undoubtedly is a departure from the standard of care and rectitude expected of them. If men at the top are guilty of departure from proper conduct, they place themselves in a position which makes if difficult, if not impossible. for them to correct their subordinates. (1964) 34 Com Cases 34 (Mys).

——S. 235 — Responsibility of directors — Directors depending upon senior directors.

The confidence which the public reposes in banking institutions is to a considerable extent dependent on the reputation for integrity and sense of duty which the members of the Board of Directors may enjoy. Members of the public deposit their moneys with banks out of confidence in the institutions and that confidence is some times influenced by the fact that a person whom they know to be honest and conscientious is on the Board of Directors taking the view that such a person cannot be expected to associate himself with an institution if he thinks that it is not running on honest and correct lines. The directors cannot be totally excluded on the ground that they depended upon the senior Directors of the Company who both by their experience and their longer and more intimate association with the affairs of the Company may be expected to be better equipped to take the necessary corrective steps. As a matter of law they, as members of the Board of Directors, have the ultimate responsibility of providing for proper management of the affairs of the Company and have to bear the burden of exonerating themselves from the prima facie case made by the Liquidator on the evidence placed on record. (1964) 34 Com Cases 34 (Mys).

——S. 235 (1) — Applicability — Directors — Liability of — Suspicion of fraud without concrete evidence cannot form basis of payment order. AIR 1955 NUC (Punj) 734.

5. Acts complained of must have caused loss.

——S. 235 —Acts of misfeasance to fall under section must be those which have entailed loss to the company.

Under S. 235 of the Companies Act of 1913 liability can be fixed on the respondents only for acts amounting to (i) Misapplication, (ii) retention, (iii) becoming liable or accountable for any money or property of the company, (iv) misfeasance, or (v) breach of trust. Though the words 'loss to the company' have not been mentioned in the section it is obvious that such loss is implied in all acts of misapplication, retainer, becoming liable for account and breach of trust. Cases of non-feasance are not covered by the section. Only that case of misfeasance will fall under S. 235 which involves loss to the company. Before the application under S. 235 can succeed it is necessary for the liquidator to establish either the respondents are accountable for some goods or money of the company or that they are guilty of misapplication, retainer or breach of trust. If they are guilty of misfeasance it must also be proved that their misfeasance has resulted in loss to the company which they can be compelled to compensate. (1963) 1 Comp LJ 108: AIR 1963 All 55 (64) (Pt C) (Prs 31, 35).

——S. 235 — Neglect to get stores valued must have caused loss to company.

Mere neglect of duty in taking necessary steps to have the company's stores properly valued, if it amounts to misfeasance, cannot be enough for making the directors liable in proceedings under S. 235. It must be shown in addition that on account of that misfeasance the company actually suffered loss. This can be proved only if it is established that the stores which ought to have been there according to the finding of the Commissioner were not actually there at the time when the company went into liquidation and that the joint liquidators did not get charge of those stores. The mere fact that the figures that were entered in the manufacturing accounts or in the balance sheets were incorrect does not necessarily lead to the conclusion that the stores which ought to have been there and whose value was thus incorrectly shown were not actually there. In the absence of any evidence as to what stores were actually in hand on the date when the resolution of voluntary winding up was passed or when the joint liquidators took over charge, in the absence also of any evidence as to how the joint liquidators dealt with the stores after they had taken over charge it is not possible to record a finding that the stores that ought to have been there were not there and that the company actually suffered a loss on that account. (1963) 1 Comp LJ 108: AIR 1963 All 55 (66) (Pt E) (Pr 42).

6. Misapplication and retention.

——S. 235 — Retention — Proof — Accountability of directors.

Retention is a positive act. To prove that the director had retained any property of the Company the applicant liquidator ought to prove that the director had received and taken the property which he was bound to return, but has wrongfully kept them and has not restored them to the company.

Liability or accountability for any stores belonging to the company can also be fastened on the directors only if it is established that they have dealt with some property of the company in an unauthorised manner or that some property of the company which was to be accounted for has not been accounted for and the responsibility of the accounting rested on them.

As directors they have a fiduciary capacity and are bound to take as much care of the property of the company as a reasonable man could be expected to take in the circumstances of the case. (1963) 1 Comp LJ 108: AIR 1963 All 55 (65) (Pt D) (Prs 39, 40, 41).

S. 2 (11) — If exhaustive.

For the purposes of S. 235 of the Companies Act, 1913, the Secretary of a company, the Assistant Secretary and the Accountant are all 'officers' of the company. All persons who are regularly employed as part of their business or occupation in conducting the affairs of the company would be officers of the company. The purpose of S. 235 is to provide a summary remedy for the recovery of money which has been misappropriated and misapplied by any of the persons mentioned in the section. Bearing that purpose in mind and the particular positions occupied by the Secretary, Assistant Secretary and Accountant, and their duties each of these persons would be an 'Officer', coming within the mischief of S. 235. The word "include" is generally used in order to enlarge the meaning of words or phrases occurring in the body of the statute. But the word 'include' has also another meaning which may become imperative if the context of the Act is sufficient to show that it was not merely employed for the purpose of adding to natural significance of the words or expressions used. It may be equivalent to 'mean and include' and it may afford an exhaustive explanation of the meaning which, for the purposes of the Act, must be invariably attached to those words or expressions. 'Misfeasance' in S. 235 means misfeasance in the nature of a breach of trust, i.e., something by which the company's property has been wasted, the acts which are covered by the section are acts which are wrongful according to the established rules of law or equity done by the person charged in his capacity as promoter, director, etc. Where a breach of duty has been committed which in fact has resulted in a misapplication of the Company's property such a transaction would be within the mischief of the section. A simple act of negligence would not fall within the section. The misfeasance contemplated in S. 235 is one which must result in loss.

The ordinary directors of a company are entitled to presume in the absence of features arousing their suspicion, that the affairs of the company are being properly conducted by the Managing Director and by the Managing Committee, and unless any mismanagement or other act of misfeasance is brought to the notice of the directors, they cannot be held liable in respect of the same. LR (1901) AC 477, Applied. No doubt it is the duty of a director to disclose in the balance-sheet the debts due by him to the company. But there is no requirement on his part to disclose debts which were incurred during the year but which were discharged within the year itself. He is bound to disclose only such debts as are still outstanding at the end of the year.

Where the acts alleged are misappropriation and consequent falsification of accounts by the Managing Director and other officers of a Bank, reckless advances without security which resulted in a huge loss to the Bank, and payment of dividend out of capital, and it is found that large sums were misappropriated by the Managing Director and that the Secretary, Assistant Secretary and Accountant made false entries in the accounts to cover up the defalcations and some of the directors connived at the defalcations and manipulations and were also indebted to the Company having taken loans without authority, it must be held that these persons are all liable to make compensation under section 235 of the Act. An Auditor is an 'officer' of the company within the meaning of section 235, and if he signs a balance-sheet which proceeds on the false basis that profits are available for declaration of dividend, the act of the Auditor would amount to misfeasance, because it would result in misapplication of the funds of Company for payment of dividend when it really should not have been paid. (1964) 1 Mad LJ 405: (1964) 1 Com LJ 262: (1964) 34 Com Cas 640.

——S. 235 — Misfeasance — What constitutes — Directors of Bank taking advances in breach of resolutions passed by Board of Directors — Balance-sheets not specifying borrowings by Directors — Liability of Directors to make good loss — Misfeasance application — Limitation — Starting point — 'Date of the first appointment of the liquidator in the winding up' — Interpretation.

Where in spite of resolutions passed by the Board of Directors of a Bank that advances should be made only to solvent persons and on adequate security with proper safeguards and also with the sanction of the Board of Directors in cases where the amount of the loans exceeded a particular sum, advances were made in contravention of the resolutions and the Directors themselves took advance, in excess of the sanctioned amounts and on that account they were not prepared to exercise any supervision over the acts of the Managing Director and Secretary, who shared the bulk of the advances and the Bank crashed, it must be held that the Directors are guilty of misfeasance under S. 235 of the Companies Act, 1913.

When further the balance-sheets did not specify the debts due from each director and each of them wilfully abstained from making any inquiry about the indebtedness and the violation of the resolutions, there can be no doubt that the Directors are clearly guilty of misfeasance and gross negligence.

The period of limitation for an application against the Directors for misfeasance is three years from the date of the appointment of the liquidator after the company is ordered to be wound up and not three years from the date of appointment of the provisional liquidator. The natural meaning of the words 'the date of the first appointment of the liquidator in the winding up, is only the date of the appointment of the official liquidator under S. 175 (1) of the Act. To interpret the section as meaning that limitation should start even from the first appointment of the provisional liquidator would really defeat the purpose of the section. (1963) 2 Mad LJ 48 : (1963) 2 Comp LJ 8 : 76 Mad LW 435 : (1963) 33 Com Cas 735 : AIR 1963 Mad 464 (465, 466) (Pt A) (Prs 4, 6) (DB).

——S. 235 — Misfeasance — Directors — Position and duties of — Liability to make good loss caused by breach of duty and misapplication of fuuds — Proof of criminal conduct — If necessary.

There is no warrant for the assumption that in order to give rise to a liability under S. 235 of the Companies Act, 1913, the conduct of the erring director must have been a criminal one. The directors of a company occupy a fiduciary position. If they are guilty of breach of trust or misfeasance, S. 235 provides relief by a summary procedure to assess their liability. Misfeasance is a breach of duty on the part of a Director to the company, the consequence of which is misapplication of its assets causing loss to the company.

Where it was found that the funds of a Bank (a limited company) had been largely diverted to accommodate some of the directors, their relatives and friends, to concerns and individuals in which the directors were interested and that too without limits and on attractive terms and that there had been glaring instances of advances to weak and imaginary parties, the proceeds being utilised by the Managing Director, who had also several loan accounts with the Bank which were manipulated in such a way, that what seemed to be a repayment under one head actually appeared as a fresh borrowing under another head of account. Held, that the Directors must be held liable to make good the loss caused to the Bank. (1963) 2 Comp LJ 30 : (1963) 33 Com Cas 955 : (1963) 2 Mad LJ 109 : 1963 Mad WN 364.

A failure on the part of a person to do his duty with regard to the property of a company over which he had control by virtue of his being a director amounts to misfeasance within the meaning of S. 235 : (1887) 12 AC 652, Ref. (1949) 19 Com Cas 311 : 62 Madh LW 784 : (1949) 2 Mad LJ 604 : 1949 Mad WN 689 : ILR (1950) Mad 742: AIR 1950 Mad 208 (209) (Pt B) (Pr 2) (DB).

——S. 235 — Misfeasance proceedings — Liability of person proceeded against for criminal prosecution — Duty of Court.

Misfeasance proceedings in the course of winding up of a company are independent of whether or not the person proceeded against may be criminally responsible for any offence disclosed by the facts of the case and for assessing the civil liability of a person under S. 235 of the Companies Act 1913, it is unnecessary for the Court to consider or express any opinion on the question whether he may also be criminally liable. And what is more, a Company Court, while examining the case of an alleged misfeasance is not to be deterred by the possibility of the person whose conduct it is investigating rendering himself liable for criminal prosecution also. (1964) 34 Com Cas 34 (Mys).

——S. 235 — Unauthorised loans — Subsequent documents obtained for such loans — Effect.

At one stage amounts were drawn from the bank accounts of the Company or cash was shown to have been credited to the Company's bank account without actually doing so and the cash so obtained was utilised for making unauthorised loans, and it was only after the matter came to light under the scrutiny of the Reserve Bank Inspectors that attempts were made to regularise the loans by obtaining loan documents from the parties some of them being employees of the Company and some its customers :

Held, that in their inception, these transactions or dealings in cash legitimately belonging to the Company were unauthorised and constituted a species of misfeasance. Although the action subsequently taken to obtain loan documents might go in mitigation of wrongful act or acts, to say that the taking of such loan documents or even the filing of suits saved the Company against all losses consequent upon wrongful acts was not correct; nor could it be accepted as a total discharge of all responsibility of those that could be found liable therefor in law. (1964) 34 Com Cas 34 (Mys).

8. Onus.

——S. 235 — Application under — Appraisement of evidence — Nature of proof required — Burden of proof—Banking Companies Act (1949), S. 45-H — Evidence Act (1872), S. 106.

In a liquidation proceeding the difficulty of establishing a claim against the Director or an officer of the Bank under S. 235 of the Companies Act, 1913, is not inconsiderable. This is so, because the material facts in all such cases are within the special knowledge of the persons against whom the application is made and the Official Liquidator appointed in the case may have no personal knowledge of the details relating to the alleged transactions. He is bound to rely on the records of the Bank, such as are available to him. This appears to be the meaning underlying S. 45-H of the Banking Companies Act. Under the law all that has to be shown by the applicant or should appear to the Court from the evidence is that there is a prima faice case made out against the officer complained against. To make out a prima facie case the burden lies upon the applicant; but if the records do show a prima facie case the task of rebutting that evidence or of exonerating himself from liability would lie upon the person against whom the application has been made. The initial burden on the applicant having regard to the very nature of the case, has to be lightly placed, so as to compel the officer concerned to disclose his cards, failing which the claim should be allowed against him. ILR (1961) 11 Raj 1022 : 1962 Raj LW 103 : AIR 1962 Raj 118 (121) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

9. Sanction to commence proceedings.

——S. 235 — Leave of Court — Necessity — Leave of Court is not necessary.

Section 235, Companies Act, 1913, under which the liquidator makes an application does not require sanction or leave of the Court to make such application. Want of leave of the Court is therefore, not a legal objection to the application under S. 235. (1957) 27 Com Cas 390 : AIR 1956 Cal 648 (654) (Pt E) (Pr 21).

10. Form and contents of the application.

——S. 235 — Allegations must be specific — Respondent is not liable for anything that is discovered in course of enquiry.

It is true that S. 235 does not contemplate the filing of a plaint. The procedure to be followed may not be that laid down in the C. P. Code but the enquiry is a judicial one. If there are rules framed under the Companies Act, they will have to be followed. In the absence of such rules the principles of natural justice will have to be followed. Allegations of misfeasance, mis-application, retainer and breach of trust are serious allegations. It is, therefore, not possible to accept the contention that the only thing, which the applicant under the section has to do so is to make some sort of allegation good enough to start an enquiry and then seek to make the respondent liable for anything that is discovered in the course of that enquiry. Specific allegations must be made before the Court can start investigation into the conduct of the respondent. Enough particulars must be furnished so that the respondent may meet the charges levelled against him. If something is discovered during the course of the investigation it may in appropriate case be open to the Court to allow an amendment of the application and then to give the respondent an opportunity of meeting the additional allegations. It will be grossly unfair to him if he is ultimately made liable for something discovered during investigation which he had never been called upon to meet. That the proceedings under the section do not amount to a suit or that a plaint is not required to be filed cannot justify dispensing with the requirement of making definite allegations about the acts complained of in respect of which the respondent has to explain his conduct. ——S. 235 — Application under — When deemed to be made — Company Rules, R. 209.

Under R. 209 of the Rules framed by the Calcutta High Court under the old Companies Act, applications under S. 235 are made on summons to be served with a copy of any affidavit intended to be used in support. According to the language of R. 209 as soon as the summons is taken out limitation stops running. Hence, the application under S. 235 must be deemed to have been made when the Master's summons was taken out by the Liquidator. ('61) 65 Cal WN 820.

——S. 235 — Application for removal of liquidator — Effect.

The application for the removal of the liquidator does not make the application under S. 235, bad. A pending application for the removal of the liquidator is, therefore, not an obstacle to the summons by the liquidator under S. 235. (1957) 27 Com Cas 390 : AIR 1956 Cal 648 (653, 654) (Pt D) (Pr 20).

13. Limitation.

——S. 235 — Limitation — Computation —Application within three years of appointment of liquidators — Misapplication of money more than three years earlier can be charged — Companies Act (1956), S. 543.

The limitation for an application under S. 235 of 1913 Act is three years but the period can be counted on an alternative basis. Either the application must be filed within three years of the date of the alleged misfeasance, misappropriation, retainer or misapplication or within three years from the date of the first appointment of the liquidators. Where the liquidators filed the application within three years of their appointment, it was open to the liquidators to charge the ex-directors with responsibility for items misapplied, misappropriated or retained even more than three years earlier. The words 'whichever is longer' used in S. 235 only mean 'whichever period expires later'. AIR 1962 All 486, Foll. (1963) 1 Com LJ 108 : AIR 1963 All 55 (58, 59) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

——S. 235 (1) — Scope — Mandatory character.

Per Bose, J. — When the Legislature inserted the special period of limitation in sub-s. (1) of S. 235 by the amendment made in 1936, it intended to make this condition of making the application within three years a condition precedent to the maintainability of the application under S. 235. A statute is to be so construed as to give effect to all the words used in the enactment. The provision as to the three years' limitation cannot therefore, be regarded as superfluous. The discretion which is conferred on the Court under S. 235 is limited to the granting of the reliefs contemplated in the section. The Court may grant these specified reliefs in the application or may not and can relegate the parties to a suit or action. But it cannot go to the length of ignoring the provision as to limitation in exercising this discretion under the said section. An application which does not fulfil all the requirements of the section is not an application under the section and no relief can be given on such an application nor can it be entertained by the Court. ('61) 65 Cal WN 820.

——S. 235 — Delay in making application.

Even if an application under S. 235, Companies Act, 1913 is made on the last date of limitation, the liquidator has the whole period granted by S. 235 within which to move. This delay in bringing this application is, legally and technically, no defence to the application. (1957) 27 Com Cas 390 : AIR 1956 Cal 648 (653) (Pt C) (Pr 19).

——S. 235 — Limitation Act (1908), Ss. 18 and 29 (2) — Application by liquidator under S. 235, Companies Act (1913), against delinquent directors for compensation — Period of three years provided in section is period of limitation — S. 18 of Limitation Act (1908), applies to such application by virtue of section 29 (2) thereof — Limitation Act (1963), Ss. 17 (1), 29 (2).

The liquidator of a company made an application under S. 235 of the Companies Act (1913), for an order requiring the delinquent directors to contribute certain sum to the assets of the company by way of compensation. The application was made beyond 3 years of the first appointment of the liquidator but the liquidator alleged in the application that he was kept from the knowledge of his right to make the application by means of fraud committed by the directors and that since the application was made within three years from the date the fraud first become known to him, the application was in time in view of S. 18 of the Limitation Act (1908). The preliminary issue tried was whether by reason of S. 29 (2) of the Limitation Act, S. 18 of the Limitation Act applies to an application under S. 235 of the Companies Act (1913).

Held, that S. 18 of the Limitation Act applied. The Companies Act (1913), is a special law within the meaning of S. 29 (2) of the Limitation Act and has prescribed a different period of limitation of 3 years for an application under S. 235. The period of limitation prescribed by the Special law may be different under two different circumstances; it may be different if it modifies or alters a period of limitation fixed by the First Schedule to the Limitation Act or it may be different in the sense that the First Schedule may omit to lay down any period of limitation. Therefore, even though no period of limitation was provided for an application under S. 235 by the First Schedule to the Limitation Act, the Indian Companies Act, 1913, in so far as S. 235 prescribed a period of three years within which such an application must be made to the Court was a special law prescribing for such an application a period of limitation different from that prescribed therefor, by the First Schedule to the Limitation Act, and the condition requisite for applicability of S. 29 (2) is consequently satisfied. S. 18 must accordingly be held to be applicable to such an application by reason of Cl. (a) of S. 29 (2). (1951) 54 Bom LR 661 and AIR 1964 SC 1099, Foll.

The contention that the period of three years provided in S. 235 of the Companies Act (1913), was not a period of limitation but merely laid down a condition precedent on the fulfilment of which alone the Court obtained jurisdiction to entertain the application is not a sound one. S. 235 did not set up any special Tribunal for determination of any claims which might be made in an application under that section. The section did not create any new rights or liabilities but merely, provided a summary remedy for enforcement of rights and liabilities which always existed and which could, apart from S. 235, be enforced only by the Company in liquidation against the delinquent directors, managers and other officers. The legislative history of the section clearly supports the conclusion that the period of three years provided in the section is a period of limitation. Of course, the prescription of every period of limitation operates as a condition precedent to the exercise of jurisdiction by the Court for unless the application is made within the period of limitation, the Court would have no jurisdiction to entertain it and in that sense, the period of three years provided udner S. 235 would certainly constitute a condition precedent to the exercise of jurisdiction by the Court in the matter of an application under that section but that would not deprive the period of three years of its character of a period of limitation and if it is a period of limitation, obviously, S. 29 (2) must apply. 58 Bom LR 903, Foll; AIR 1949 PC 239, Ref. (1965) 2 Com LJ 16 : (1965) 6 Guj LR 477 : ILR (1965) Guj 582.

Section 9 of the Provincial Insolvency Act and S. 235, Companies Act, are not in pari materia. Unlike in the case of an application under S. 9, Provincial Insolvency Act, there is no question of any antecedent requirement within the particular period of time to be fulfilled to enable the liquidator to maintain the petition under S. 235. All that he is required to do is to initiate proceedings within a period of three years which has to be computed from the date of the first appointment of the liquidator, and if it happens that the last day in the prescribed period is a day on which the Court is closed, the liquidator is entitled to file an application the next day on the principle underlying S. 10, General Clauses Act. ——S. 235 — Limitation — Computation.

Though an application under S. 235, Companies Act, has to be made within three years from the date of the first appointment of the liquidator yet in computing that period, as the word 'from' is used in the Act, the first day should be excluded. The word 'within' was used in S. 235 to denote the period during which action had to be taken by the liquidator by making an application under the section. But, in order to determine the period, one has to compute it beginning with the day on which the liquidator was first appointed. S. 9 of the General Clauses Act gives statutory recognition to the well-established principle applicable to the construction of statutes that ordinarily in computing time the rule observed is to exclude the first day and include the last day. AIR 1955 NUC (Mad) 1824 (DB).

S. 235 (1) of the Companies Act (1913) does not embrace within its ambit the heirs or the legal representatives of the persons mentioned therein who could be proceeded against under that section. The liability which is enforced under S. 235 is a liability in the nature of a tort or a quasi criminal responsibility. Therefore in case of a winding up of a private Ltd. Company consisting of members of a single family, the widow and sons of one of the members cannot be made responsible in proceedings under S. 235 (1), for anything which her husband did as a Director or in any other capacity for which he could be held responsible under the Section. ILR (1961) 2 All 570: (1962) 32 Com Cas 947: 1961 All LJ 793: 1961 All WR (HC) 569: AIR 1962 All 88 (91) (Pt C) (Pr 18) (DB).

——S. 235 — Death of respondent — Proceedings against legal representatives — Official Liquidator cannot proceed against legal representatives — Companies Act (1956), S. 543.

Section 235 of the Companies Act of 1913 (now re-enacted as S. 543 of the Indian Companies Act of 1956) is copied from S. 165 of the English Companies Act of 1862. The proceedings under the English section commonly described as 'misfeasance proceedings' are of a special nature and are available only against the persons expressly mentioned therein as the persons whose conduct may be investigated into by the Court on an application made pursuant to that section. The above view of English Courts has been consistently followed in India on the accepted principle that when the Indian Legislature copied almost verbatim a section of the English Act, it may be expected to have accepted the interpretation thereof according to the rulings of the English Courts. The provisions of S. 306 of the Indian Succession Act or the Legal Representatives' Suits Act (Central Act 12 of 1855) or Order XXII of the First Schedule to the Code of Civil Procedure would not make any difference to the principles settled by English decisions. None of these statutory provisions in India can be availed of for continuing misfeasance proceedings against the legal representatives of a deceased promotor, director, manager, liquidator or officer of the Company. The action thereunder being purely personal as against the said named persons which does not survive their death, it is not possible to invoke any of the statutory provisions mentioned above. The Liquidator cannot continue the proceedings under S. 235 against the legal representatives of the respondent who died during the pendency of the application under S. 235. Where an application is made to the High Court under S. 235 of the Companies Act against any promoter, director, manager, liquidator or officer of a banking company, the Court acts under S. 45-H of the Banking Companies Act and passes appropriate orders following the procedure laid down in that section. The order passed under S. 45-H would be necessarily subject to the restriction provided in S. 45-N, which does not permit an appeal from any order or decision of the High Court in a civil proceeding under this Act when the amount or value of the subject-matter of the claim does not exceed Rs. 5,000. It follows therefore, that an appeal in such a case is not maintainable.

The argument that the appellant is entitled to a right of appeal under S. 202 of the Companies Act read with S. 18 of the Rajasthan High Court Ordinance cannot be sustained as, under S. 45-A, the provisions of the Banking Companies Act in Part 3-A of the Act override other provisions. (1961) 31 Com Cas 77: ILR (1961) 11 Raj 16.

——S. 235 — Order under, in respect of banking company — Order enforceable as decree and order having force of decree — Distinction — Order under S. 45-H is only an order and not decree— Art. 1 of Sch. 1 and Art. 11 of Sch. 2 of Court Fees Act not applicable — Court Fees Act (1870), Sch. I, Art. 1, Sch. 2, Art. 11—Banking Companies Act (1949), S. 45-H — Companies Act (1956), S. 543.

There is a presumption that the legislature means different things by different phraseology; and when it describes an order as having the force of a decree it must mean something different from the description of an order which may be enforced in the same manner as a decree.

The order passed under S. 235 of the Companies Act read with S. 45-H of the Banking Companies Act is not a decree within the meaning of Sch. 1, Art. 1 of the Court Fees Act. The order may be enforceable as a decree, but for purposes of appeals it has to be treated like any other order. Therefore, in the absence of any definite rule on the point, it must be held that the court-fee paid by the appellant as in the case of any appeal from an order is sufficient. (1961) 31 Com Cas 77: ILR (1961) 11 Raj 16.

● ——S. 237 (1) and (6) and S. 179 — Scope — Complaint by liquidator — Absence of direction by Court or hearing of accused persons — Effect on prosecution — (Companies Act (1956), Ss. 545 (1), 545 (6), 457).

Section 179 deals with the powers of liquidators to institute or defend proceedings with the sanction of the Court and S. 237 (1) deals with the powers of the Court to give directions for prosecution of delinquent directors etc. But neither S. 179 nor S. 237 indicates that if the liquidator takes action without a direction of the Court the action would be illegal or invalid or it would invalidate a prosecution.

Under S. 237 (1) the Court may direct the liquidator to himself prosecute the offender or to refer the matter to the Registrar. Under sub-section (6) the Registrar is required to give the offender an opportunity to show cause before a prosecution is undertaken.

Section 237 (1) does not lay down any procedure for the giving of directions and the provisions in regard to the action taken by the Registrar do not have any relevancy to what the Court should do before it gives directions.

Held, on facts that both on the language of S. 237 (1) as well as on precedent the complaint made by the liquidator against the directors did not suffer from any infirmity as to make the proceedings null and void. The company law does not prescribe any special procedure for the enquiry into and trial of offences under the Act and the Criminal Procedure Code must, therefore, govern the enquiry and trial of these offences also. The trials completed by the criminal Courts cannot be allowed to be vitiated on account of the prior non-compliance by the authorities under the Companies Act, of certain provisions made for their guidance in connection with the initiation of prosecutions and no judgment, order or sentence passed after trial should be reversed on account of error or irregularity committed in these pre-trial matters. SECTION 243.

——S. 243 corresponding to S. 559 of Act (1 of 1956) — Suit for damages against a company — Company voluntarily liquidated pending suit — Defunct company continuing on record and defending suit — Remedy of judgment-creditor — Creditor not bound to initiate proceedings to declare liquidation void — Decree obtained against defunct company — Liability of shareholders.

A brought a suit for damages against B company, of which C and D are shareholders. Pending suit, the company went into voluntary liquidation and all assets were distributed amongst all the shareholders. Notwithstanding its liquidation, B company continued on record and defended the suit, without bringing the fact of liquidation to the notice of Court, which resulted in a decree against the defunct company. A then attached two buses, which formed part of the assets of the company before its liquidation, in execution of the decree. The attachment was sought to be raised by C and D in a suit, on the ground that decree obtained against a defunct company was a nullity and that, at any rate, it could not be executed against the shareholders, who were entities distinct from the limited company. The suit for raising the attachment was dismissed by the trial Court and affirmed by the High Court in Second Appeal. In Letters Patent Appeal it was contended that the only remedy available to A was the one specially provided by S. 243 of the Companies Act, 1913, i.e., to initiate proceedings to declare the liquidation of the company void and that an ordinary action in a Court of law could not be maintained to enforce such rights:

Held, S. 243 of the Companies Act enables the Liquidator of the Company or other interested persons to move the Court to restore the Company to existence by declaring the liquidation to be void by presentation of a petition within two years of the liquidation. It is only an enabling provision and does not debar the persons concerned from availing themselves of other remedies available to them under law. Moreover having prevented A from taking steps to invoke the section, it is not open to C and D to take advantage of their fraud and plead that since A had failed to have recourse to S. 243 he is disabled from taking action to realise the fruits of his decree. This is based on the doctrine of equitable estoppel. A could proceed on the footing of there being no liquidation for the purpose of execution of his decree. The shareholders took the assets of the company subject to payment of debts due by it. Indisputably the company was liable to pay the decree debt and the shareholders could not evade this liability by going into voluntary liquidation and distributing the assets thereof amongst themselves. ——S. 247 (5) corresponding to S. 560 (5) of Act (1 of 1956) — Limited liability company — Directors not personally liable for claim before its dissolution — Liability after dissolution — Members of the Company formed into a sub-committee to enquire into claims — Committee, whether liable for claim — Company's name struck off from register — Suit against such company — Maintainability.

Plaintiff, who was a member of the Hyderabad Bullion Exchange, Ltd., filed a suit against the company, its directors and members of its sub-committee for recovery of the value of certain N. G. P. notes deposited with the company by plaintiff as membership security, after the company became defunct and was dissolved by the order of the Registrar striking it off from the register. The trial Court holding that the suit is maintainable, gave a decree against the directors of the company and its committee members. Defendants appealed to the High Court.

Held, that the suit against the company, which was struck off from the register under Cl. (5) of S. 247 of the Companies Act. 1913 and thereby stood dissolved, is not maintainable. Under the proviso to Cl. (5) of S. 247 the existing liability of any director or member prior to the dissolution of the company will continue in spite of the dissolution. If the directors are not personally liable for the plaintiff's claim prior to the dissolution of the company, they will not be liable after the dissolution. Therefore, the directors of the company cannot be held personally liable for the suit claim as they are not personally liable for the plaintiff's claim prior to the dissolution of the company. As members of the Hyderabad Bullion Exchange Ltd., the liability of defendants 8 to 10 was limited. The mere fact that they formed into a sub-committee to enquire into the claims made by the members cannot render them personally liable for the suit claim. ——S. 247 (6) — Restoration of company to register.

It is clear from S. 247 (6) that on the restoration of a company back to the register after its being struck off the register, the company will be deemed to have had its existence all through. Another consequence is that the rights of all parties would be as though there had been no cessation or interruption in the existence of the company on account of the striking off and subsequent restoration. (1953) 23 Com Cas 246: AIR 1953 Trav-Co 161 (164, 165) (Pt E) (Pr 13) (DB).

——S. 248 (2) — Regulations under — Reg. 14 (a) and (b) — Offence under Act — Complaint — Who can make.

With regard to the offences under the Companies Act there is no provision that any offence should not be taken cognizance of unless the complaint is filed by any of the persons mentioned in the Act. In the absence of such a provision the normal rule namely that any person may set the criminal law in motion will apply. Cls. (a) and (b) of Reg. 14 do not take away the right of any citizen to file a complaint under the Companies Act. SECTION 263

——S. 263 — (S. 575 of the Companies Act (1956)) — Applicability — Before registration of company, partnership not merely expanded but new company formed — New company registered — New company cannot avail of provisions of Section 263 — Leasehold interest of partnership cannot be said to be transferred to the company without registered deed by partners — Partners not trustees of company — Relationship of landlord and tenant however established between landlord and company by acceptance of rent by landlord from company.

S. 263 applies only when an existing partnership firm is registered as a company under the provisions of the Companies Act i.e., without any change in its constitution and it does not apply when the constitution of a partnership firm is substantially changed for forming the incorporated company registered under the Companies Act. Where before the registration under the Companies Act, the partnership firm was not merely expanded by taking new partners, on the other hand, a new company was formed of which the partners of the firm were members and besides four other persons were also members and after the registration of such new company in the office of the Registrar of Companies, there was an agreement executed between the partners of the old partnership firm and two of the directors of the new company for transfer of the business and assets of the partnership firm to the company. Section 263 could not avail the company in its claim that the leasehold premises of the old partnership became transferred to the company without the execution of any registered transfer deed by the partners of the old partnership.

The partners of the old partnership were not trustees on account of the company and it could not therefore, be held that they could transfer possession of the leasehold premises to the company without any registered deed.

Where a lessee puts in a new tenant in the premises and the landlord accepts such new tenant as his tenant, clearly there is a new relationship as landlord and tenant. In the present case, the relationship as landlord and tenant between the landlord and the company was established not only by the possession of the company in the premises and the acceptance of rent by the landlord but also by constructive res judicata by the judgments and decrees of the previous suits between the landlord and the company. The company could not claim to be governed by the registered lease deeds in favour of the partners but they were tenants of the premises and their tenancy was from month to month or year to year according as the purpose of the tenancy was not or was for a manufacturing purpose. AIR 1963 Cal 198 (201, 202) (Pt A) (Prs. 10, 13, 14) (DB).

PART 9 (Ss. 270 to 276)

——Part 9 (Ss. 270 to 276) — Winding up in India of unregistered company incorporated in England — Foreign creditors are entitled to prove their debts.

A foreign creditor is as much entitled to a share in the assets of an unregistered company in liquidation as a creditor resident in the country where the unregistered company is situated, the nationality of the creditor not making a point of difference. The question of situs of a debt has not much bearing on the point whether a foreign creditor is excluded from participation in the assets of an unregistered company which is wound up. It is in connection with the administration and succession actions that the situs of a debt has relevancy. Accordingly it cannot be contended that the proof of debts of foreign creditors should be expunged. (1951) 2 Mad LJ 535: (1952) 22 Com Cas 1: AIR 1952 Mad 136 (137, 140, 141, 142) (Pt A) (Prs. 8, 15, 21, 22, 23) (DB).

A company having its principal office in Kalahandi, Orissa, was incorporated under the Kalahandi State Company Law. After incorporation, the company established a place of business in Calcutta and filed with the Registrar particulars mentioned in S. 277 (1) of the Companies Act. After the Kalahandi State Company Law was replaced by the Indian Companies Act by virtue of the Merged States (Laws) Act, 1949, a petition to wind up the company was presented by a creditor before the Calcutta High Court under S. 271 of the Companies Act, which is applicable to the winding up of unregistered companies.

Held, that the Calcutta High Court had no jurisdiction to wind up the company under S. 271 of the Companies Act. Under S. 6 (2) of Merged States (Laws) Act, the registration effected under the Kalahandi State Company Laws should be deemed to have done or taken under the Indian Companies Act and the company could not, therefore, be regarded as an unregistered company within the meaning of S. 270 of that Act. AIR 1955 NUC (Cal) 400.

with certain directions — Fresh prosecution — Maintainability — (Companies Act (1956), Ss. 235, 242 and 621).

A prosecution by the State at the instance of the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies should be a fair one.

Pending the winding up proceedings one of the directors filed a complaint against other directors and officers of the company. The High Court stayed these proceedings till such reasonable time as the Public Prosecutor may take in causing proceedings to be instituted in accordance with Section 141-A against the persons concerned in the commission of an offence already disclosed or to be disclosed as the result of further investigation. The High Court further directed the conclusion of the examination of the complainant director under S. 195 of the Companies Act. Instead of waiting for the conclusion of director's examination, the Registrar filed two complaints under Companies Act substantially on the same subject-matter as that of the complaint only with this difference that this time the complainant was impleaded as an accused.

Held, that the institution of the subsequent complaints by the Registrar amounted to a gross abuse of the process of the Court and in any case was tantamount to circumventing the orders of the High Court.

Sections 138 and 141-A apply only to Companies which have not gone into liquidation and did not apply to the instant case. 1959 Cri LJ 707: AIR 1959 Cal 387 (389) (Prs. 11, 12, 14, 15).

——S. 278 (3), Regs. 4 and 12 under S. 248 (2) — Offences under the Act — Regulations do not take away right of police to investigate such offences.

No doubt offences described in the Act have been made non-cognizable by S. 278 (3) but this does not mean that offences in relation to companies not described in the Act must also be deemed to be non-cognizable.

The words used in S. 141-A (1) are criminal liability, which are of wider import and have been deliberately used by the Legislature to include offences described in the Indian Penal Code. If that be so then offences under Indian Penal Code cannot be deemed to be non-cognizable under S. 278 (3) of the Act.

Further, Regulations 4 and 12 made under Section 248 (2) regulate the duties of the Registrar and relate to investigations and inquiries into all infractions of law made by a company in complying with any of the provisions of the Act and institution and conduct of prosecutions in also to be done by him or by his nominee. These duties do not include investigation and prosecution under the ordinary criminal law. These regulations however do not take away the powers of the police to investigate at the instance of the Registrar into any offence in relation to the companies whether described in the Act or in the Indian Penal Code.

The nature of investigation under S. 137 held by the Registrar is of a very different nature from the one which is held under the Criminal Procedure Code. As the scope of investigation under the Companies Act is limited in its very nature to offences under that Act it is only after the investigation under the Companies Act has been completed that the question arises under S. 141-A (2) whether the officer should order further investigation or not. ILR (1957) Punj 510.

——Ss. 281 and 234 — Applicability — Compromise.

Section 281 has nothing whatever to do with a compromise entered into by the parties. In order that the compromise should be given effect to, what is required is a sanction by the Court under S. 234 and not a condonation under S. 281. 55 Bom LR 629: (1954) 24 Com Cas 25: ILR (1954) Bom 79: AIR 1954 Bom 121 (125) (Pt D) (Pr 9) (DB).

——S. 281 (1) — Failure to make deposit under S. 244-B (1) — Reasonableness — (Companies Act (1956), Ss. 633 and 555).

Where the liquidator acted entirely without any remuneration and throughout the liquidation proceedings he acted with the only motive of serving the contributories and the depositors of the company to the best of his powers, he should not be made to pay the maximum penalty under S. 244-B (7). S. 244-B (7) was certainly not intended for enriching the contributories of a company by realisation of interest from defaulting liquidators. ILR (1955) 2 Cal 439.

——Ss. 281, 235 — Management of affairs of Company — Responsibility of directors — Companies Act (1956), Ss. 543, 633.

Prima facie those responsible for management of affairs of a company are the board of directors. Although it does not mean that every detail of administration should be attended to by the Directors themselves, the accepted position is that the ultimate responsibility for making provision for due administration of the affairs of the Company rests on the directors themselves. That is the normal position in law. The provisions of articles of association in themselves without regard to the factual position cannot be taken as decisive of the existence or the otherwise of the responsibility of the Directors for the loss actually sustained by the Company. Primarily the provisions of the articles relating to the management of affairs of a company are intended to indicate the general lines on which and the limitations subject to which the responsibility for proper management of affairs should be distributed or allocated between the Directors and the officers of the company. They do not and cannot be read as constituting sufficient basis for either the Board of Directors as a whole or any one of the Directors to disclaim all responsibility. In determining the question whether on the facts of the case and particularly those peculiar to the position of the Directors vis-a-vis the Company, the director in question can be said to have discharged his responsibility the opinion of the Court should be guided and governed by the principles indicated by the legislature itself in Section 281 of the Companies Act of 1913 and S. 633 of the Companies Act of 1956. In the present case, all that could be said on the basis of prudence acting on his own behalf would have omitted to take corrective action, it is no longer open to the directors to say that they continued to rely on the honesty and integrity of the Managing Director or other officers or to rely upon any principles of law in support of an argument that they have discharged the duty or responsibility which the law places upon them. (1964) 34 Com Cas 34 (Mys).

——S. 281 — Applicability — Conditions — Onus.

Before S. 281 can be properly invoked, it must be shown that the person or persons so seeking relief had 'acted honestly and reasonably'. In other words, the conduct of the accused must satisfy the two-fold requirement of lack of dishonesty as well as lack of unreasonableness, and honestly by itself would not be enough. 1960 Raj LW 139: (1960) 30 Com Cas 523: ILR (1960) 10 Raj 857: 1961 (2) Cr LJ 416.

——Ss. 282-A, 278 and 3 — Complaint of offence under S. 282-A — Jurisdiction of first Class Magistrate to take cognizance of case and try — Effect of S. 3 — (Criminal P. C. (1898) Ss. 5 and 29).

Section 282-A, Companies Act is only a declaratory section specifying the ingredients constituting an offence under that Act. The proceedings relating to the trial of such offences are not proceedings under that Act but they are proceedings under the Criminal Procedure Code.

Sub-s. (3) of S. 278 of the Act indicates that the Act contemplated that the trial of offences constituted by it is to be according to the Criminal Procedure Code except in so far as the said Code was specifically modified by the Companies Act.

Though the Section does not clearly specify the Court by which the offences against the Companies Act are to be tried yet sub-ss. (1) and (2) indicate that the legislature at any rate contemplated their trial by the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the First Class.

The effect of S. 3 of the Act, by the use of the words "under this Act" is not to make this jurisdiction of the magistrate to take cognizance and try the case, conditioned upon any necessary direction or sanction given by the High Court.

This view is supported by a reference to the provisions of S. 5 Criminal P. C. and also from the fact that S. 29 of that Code, which empowers the High Court to try offences under a law other than the Penal Code when no Court is mentioned by that law, has been interpreted as not giving the High Court power to take cognizance of the offence straight off and by the accused itself, without following the procedure laid down in the Code. Under S. 282-B (1) the expression "all moneys or securities" should not be read as being limited to moneys or securities deposited as cash securities to the company by the employee. S. 282-B imposes a two-fold obligation on a company in regard to moneys and securities deposited with it, by an employee: (i) there is an obligation to keep such moneys or securities in a special account in a scheduled bank; and (ii) the section prohibits the utilisation of any such deposit except for the purposes agreed to in the contract of service. The mere fact that the money deposited by an employee with the company carries interest would not make it a loan to the company instead of a security.

Where an employee of a company had to deposit a cash security of Rs. 500 but the amount of money was actually paid by a near relation of the employee and the amount was ultimately transferred to the account of the employee:

Held, that the deposit was one which must be considered to have been made by the employee himself.

SCH. 1, TABLE A, REGN. 12.

——Sch. 1 Table A, Reg. 12 — Call for share money — Requirements — Time for payment.

Held in the circumstances of the case that Art. 19 when read with Art. 18 of the Articles of Association of the company made it clear that whatever power of delegation the directors may have generally, as far as the making of the call was concerned a call could only be made by a resolution of the directors because Art. 19 fixed the time when the call was deemed to be made and the time fixed was when the resolution of the directors authorised the call. It cannot be disputed that the amount of the call must be mentioned in the resolution. It is equally essential that the time when the call money should be paid by the shareholder should be mentioned in the resolution. It is further necessary that the time when the shareholder should pay the amount should be indicated so that the shareholder knows when he has to pay the amount and he also knows that it will entail serious consequences. Whatever the place that may be fixed and whoever the person may be to whom the payment is to be made, does not in any way affect either the quantum of the liability or the time from which the liability is fixed.

Whether a call should be paid in one sum or by instalments goes to the question of the liability of the share-holder, and therefore, this provision was as much of substance as the provision with regard to the fixing of time for the payment of the call. Therefore, the provision that a call should be made payable by instalments by reason of Art. 19 could only be made by resolution properly passed by the directors.

Held, therefore, that the resolutions did not make a valid call, as neither of the two resolutions specified the time for making the payment, and further the directors had not made up their minds nor did they know their minds as to whether the call should be paid in one sum or by instalments. Therefore, the directors never resolved that this call should be paid by instalments. ——Sch. 1, Table A, Reg. 12 — Delegation of power.

The power to make a call is in the nature of a trust and it is to be exercised in the interests of the company. Such an important power which is vested in the directors could not be delegated by them to any one.

Held, further, that if the power of delegation is to be exercised, it must be clearly exercised. If the directors do not wish to do what the articles require them to do and leave the doing of it to some one else, they must clearly resolve to that effect. 58 Bom LR 660: (1956) 26 Com Cas 313: ILR (1956) Bom 619: AIR 1956 Bom 537 (543, 544) (Pt B) (Prs 10, 11, 14) (DB).

——Sch. 1, Table A, Regns. 24, 25 — Share calls — Validity — Proof of — Fixing of particulars by directors — Absence of words 'By order of Board' in notice — Effect.

Where the validity of the share call notices was disputed on the ground that there was no proof that the particulars required by Arts. 40 and 42, Articles of Association of the Company were fixed by the directors themselves, as there was no reference to such fixing in the director's resolutions confirming the notice, and where Art. 40 in question did not prescribe that the particulars should be fixed or appointed by means of a formal resolution to be passed by the directors.

Held, that before the prescribed notice was issued to the shareholder in default it would do if the particulars were informally fixed by the directors and the notices issued with particulars so fixed with the sanction of the directors. The presence of the words "By order of the Board" in the signature part of the notice was not necessary. Evidence of the appointment of the particulars by order of the Board could always be adduced, even though there should be no such words in the signature part of the notice issued by the managing agents. Likewise even where such words occurred, it would be open to the party impeaching the validity of the notice to show that there was, in fact and in truth, no appointment of the particulars by the Board. The matter was one of evidence, and the presumption was in favour of such appointment in the absence of evidence one way or the other. Moreover, if the existence of the words "By order of the Board" was an element which entered into the essence of the reasoning — which it was not — there is no reason why it should not be presumed in a case where the actual notices were not produced by the disputing party that such words would be found in the notices, if produced. A presumption of that kind was not ill-drawn against the party suppressing the notices. The term 'liability' expresses the state of being under obligation in law or in justice. The word 'owing' is synonymous with 'due'. These terms have not reference to the time of payment or the fulfilment of an obligation. The term 'owing' includes all debts whether payable in praesenti or in futuro. It does not necessarily imply an enforceable obligation. The word 'due' or 'owing' in its ordinary sense means something which is justly owed; that which the law or justice requires to be paid or done; 63 SWR 465 and 69 All Rep 809, Ref.

A shareholder, after the forfeiture of his shares, ceases to be a member of the Company; but he becomes liable to pay the balance due under a separate contract, that is, under the articles of association providing for forfeiture of shares in certain eventualities. Article 112 of the Limitation Act does not apply to a claim for the amount forfeited, as such a claim cannot be said to be "for a call by a company registered under any statute or Act".

Although the remedy by way of suit for the recovery of the money due on the first call has been extinguished by efflux of time, the right of the company to the amount is not destroyed. As the forfeiture of shares under the relevant Articles of Association gives rise to a fresh cause of action, the suit of the Banking Company on its basis filed within three months of the forfeiture is within limitation under Art. 115, Limitation Act. ILR (1958) Punj 2356: (1958) 28 Com Cas 402: AIR 1959 Punj 328 (329, 330, 332) (Pt C) (Prs 10, 15, 16, 23).

——Sch. 1, Table A, Reg. 73 — Power of directors to borrow — (Companies Act (1956), S. 23 (1) (d)).

Art. 73 of the Table A of Schedule I of the Companies Act presumes that the directors have power to borrow on behalf of the company subject to the limitation that borrowing in excess of the issued capital should be only with the consent of the shareholders. The usual presumption is that the directors of the company would be entitled to borrow subject to the restriction placed on the borrowing powers in the Memorandum and Articles of Association. Where the Memorandum and Articles of Association do not say that the directors should not borrow at all on behalf of the Company, no specific power to borrow is necessary. (1956) 26 Com Cas 298: 68 Mad LW 818: AIR 1957 Mad 122 (125, 126) (Pt A) (Pr 17) (DB).

——Sch. 1, Table A, Reg. 73 — Directors exceeding their limit — Acquiescence by all shareholders — Effect — (Companies Act (1956), S. 293 (1) (d)).

The acquiescence of all shareholders in excess loans contracted by the directors would be sufficient to validate such excess debts. Where the company consisted only of two shareholders at the time it borrowed the money for the company, by contracting the debts jointly for the company and by acknowledging them, they certainly acquiesced in loans so far as they were intra vires of the company, though they were ultra vires of the directors by exceeding the issued share capital.

The object of Art. 73 in Table A of Schedule I of the Companies Act is to ensure the interest of shareholders, and not to ensure compliance with any such metaphysical requirements. Besides the excess will be binding on the company on two other principles, viz., that the loans were advanced by the creditor, a stranger to the company, who was entitled to assume that the internal management of the company was being done regularly by its directors and shareholders, and secondly, because the amount borrowed for the company by its only two shareholders were received by the company and utilised by it for its own benefit for purpose intra vires of the company. (1956) 26 Com Cas 298: 69 Mad LW 818: AIR 1957 Mad 122 (126) (Pt B) (Prs 18, 19) (DB).

The fact therefore, that a commission is not a part of the Managing Agents' remuneration and is not consequently liable to be shown under Art. 132 (3) of the Act, does not establish that it need not be shown under the directions contained in Regulation 107. Thus where in the Profit and Loss account of certain company, the amount paid as selling commission to the Managing Agents appeared nowhere neither as a part of the Managing Agency remuneration, nor as an item of expenditure and therefore, the impression created by the Profit and Loss Account on the shareholders was that the amount shown there as profit on trading was the whole amount of the receipt from sales, there is a violation of Regulation 107, as by suppressing the payment of the selling commission it understates the gross income and omits to state an item of expenditure. (1957) 27 Com Cas 114: AIR 1957 Cal 33 (43) (Pt E) (Prs. 31, 32) (DB).

There is no provision in the Companies Act excluding the powers of a civil Court in respect of any matter.

There have been four exceptions at any rate recognised to the rule in Foss v. Harbottle, (1943) 67 E. R. 189, namely (a) the act complained of being ultra vires of the company, (b) fraud, (c) where it is impossible for the minority to get redress, and (d) the ends of justice require the intervention of the Court. A shareholder has certainly got a cause of action to challenge the proceedings negativing his right to vote by proxy when what is asked for in the plaint is that certain proceedings evidenced by certain resolutions purported to have been passed at a meeting have not been validly passed and are not binding on the company or the shareholders, such a relief can be obtained in Civil Court and by shareholders. Even in respect of matters provided in the Companies Act the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is not taken away. 1959 Ker LJ 309: AIR 1959 Ker 254 (264, 265, 266) (Pt D) (Prs 48, 49) (DB).

Proceedings under S. 141 would undoubtedly be one of those in respect of which the matter can be heard by the District Court if so empowered under S. 10 (2).

The Madras City Civil Court is not a District Court within the meaning of S. 2 (14) as it cannot be said to be the principal Civil Court of original Civil Court of original jurisdiction, such Court, in the city of Madras, being the Original Side of the High Court. Therefore, the Madras City Civil Court would have no jurisdiction by virtue of the Notification of the Central Government, dated 29th May, 1959, and the matters covered by S. 10 (2) of the Act should be dealt with only by the High Court. 72 Mad LW 650: (1960) 30 Com Cas 21: 1959 Mad WN 706: ILR (1960) Mad 68: (1960) 1 Mad LJ 272: AIR 1960 Mad 79 (79, 80) (Prs 2, 3).

The provisions of S. 619 of the Companies Act make it clear that notwithstanding S. 224 of the Act the appointment of an auditor of a 'Government company' rests solely with the Central Government as also his removal from office. The powers and duties of an auditor in respect of companies other than Government companies are laid down in S. 227, but S. 227 does not apply to a 'Government company' as defined in S. 2 (18) read with S. 617 of the Act.

When 100 per cent. of the shares of a company are held by the Union Government or a State Government it is a 'Government company' and an auditor appointed in respect of such a company must be held to be the holder of an office of profit under the Government of India or under a State Government, as the case may be within the meaning of Art. 102 (1) (a) of the Constitution of India and therefore disqualified to stand as a candidate for election to the House of the People. In spite of the definition of 'Member' as given in Ss. 41 and 2 (27) of the Act, the holder of shares as a result of transfer of transmission of shares can seek his remedy even under S. 155 of the Act when aggrieved by refusal of the Company to rectify the Share Register. In interpreting S. 155 (1) (a) and (b) as they stood in the Act of 1956 since there was overlapping to some extent with regard to these provisions, the Amending Act of 1960 was passed but it was never the intention of the Legislature to confine the summary remedy of S. 155 (1) (b) to the very few cases of subscribers to the Memorandum of Association and to exclude from its purview the vast majority of the cases of persons claiming title to the shares by transfer or transmission: AIR 1961 SC 1669, Rel. on.

S. 155 and S. 111 of the Companies Act, 1956 provide two alternative remedies for a person aggrieved by refusal of the Company to rectify the Share Register. On the question of the criterion for determining whether not less than forty per cent. of the shares are held by the Government to make the company one in which the public are substantially interested.

Held, the company is one in which the public are substantially interested. The existence or otherwise of a substantial interest will have to be gauged with reference to the participation in the share capital of a company and not by the number of shares held irrespective of their value and character. Held, (i) that a private limited company was in substance a partnership, and the relationship amongst the three groups in the matter of the conduct of the affairs of the company, would be examined on the footing that they were partners so long as the company continued to be a private company. (ii) The agreement could not be said to be binding on the company in the sense that it was executed on behalf of the company. (iii) After the conversion into a public Company, neither the terms of the agreement nor the status quo existing prior to the dispute could be worked out. The equal share holdings must be disturbed the moment there was invitation to the public to subscribe to any shares and the moment there was recognition of the principle of transferability. The contractual obligation amongst the parties could no longer be worked out with reference to the theory of partnership. The Articles of Association constituted the contractual obligation amongst the shareholders of the Company. The fact that the affairs of the company were managed with holding of shares in equal proportion amongst the 3 groups for a period of about 4 years by itself could not create a right in favour of the petitioner and his group to claim that it must continue in the same manner contrary to the terms of the Articles of Association even when the company became public. Such a claim would also be contrary to the provisions of S. 81 of the Act. It would also not be compatible with dynamic concept of industrial expansion.

It was undoubtedly open to the three groups to impose voluntary restraint upon themselves. But the Court could not construe or impose such a restraint in the absence of any Article. To accept such a contention would be to give the Agreement a sanctity which could not fit in with the Articles of Association and the provisions of the statute.

The term in the agreement for proportional representation did not fit with Ss. 255 to 259 of the Act. (1964) 1 Comp LJ 117 : AIR 1963 Ori 189 (199, 201) (Pt C) (Prs 13, 15, 16) (DB).

——S. 4—Bonus shares — Issue of — Incidents and object of — Shares, if issued as free gifts — Effect on rights of shareholders and company — Valuation of bonus shares for purposes of income-tax — Market value as on date of issue if to be taken — Price at which shareholder sells bonus shares — If taxable in entirety as "capital gains" — Proper mode of valuation for ascertaining gain — Income-tax Act (11 of 1922), sections 4 and 12-B — "Income" — Bonus obtained in the form of fully paid shares — If taxable — Computation of capital gains for purposes of income-tax.

The issue of bonus shares by a company is a common feature. When a company is prosperous and accumulates a large surplus, it converts this surplus into capital and divides the capital among the members in proportion to their rights. This is done by issuing fully paid shares representing the increased capital. The purpose is to capitalise profits which may be available for division or to utilise quasi-capital gains. Bonus shares go by the modern name of "capitalisation shares". If the Articles of Association empower the company, the company can capitalise profits or reserves and issue fully paid shares of a nominal value, equal to the amount capitalised, to its shareholders. But in some cases, the Articles provide for an option to the shareholders to take cash instead of shares. This would make no difference in the position, except of course to the extent to which the option is exercised. When the Articles authorise the satisfaction of a dividend or bonus in fully paid shares, the declaration of the dividend makes the shareholder a creditor of the company for the amount of his portion; the release of his claim against the company for this amount is a good and valuable consideration or set-off, so as to make the shares fully paid, even though the release is compulsory.

When the shares are quoted on the Stock Exchange, the issue of bonus shares is a bull point which forces up the market value of the shares and enables the share-holders to realise the immediate profit. The idea behind the issue of bonus shares is to bring the nominal share capital into line with the true excess of assets over liabilities. A company would like to have more working capital but it need not go into the market for obtaining fresh capital by issuing fresh shares. The necessary money is available with it and this money is converted into shares which really means that the undistributed profits have been permanently "ploughed back" into the business and converted into share capital. Fully paid 'bonus shares' are thus not a gift; they are merely a distribution of capitalised undivided profit. It would be a misnomer to call the recipients of bonus shares as donees of shares from the company.

Bonus shares are not issued free or ex gratia as the Company gets an adequate quid pro quo from the shareholders.

It is also settled law that a bonus issued in the form of fully paid shares of the company is not income for income-tax purposes. The undistributed profits of the company applied and appropriated for the issue of bonus shares would never become profits in the hands of the shareholder at all. The bonus shares would be something in the nature of an extra share certificate in the company. The shares allotted to a shareholder do not represent taxable income in his hands. The value of the bonus shares in the hands of the shareholders at the inception when they are issued and allotted to him is not the amount of the undistributed profits which he would have got if they had been distributed as dividends. Nor is it the market value on the date of issue. It must be held that the real value of the bonus shares, as on the date of issue, would only be the face value of the shares. The cost of the bonus shares to shareholder is the face value of the shares.

A Hindu undivided family deriving income from interest on securities, property, business and dividend from shares in a bank (a limited company), was allotted in 1957 bonus shares in proportion to the shares already held by it in the bank. In the year of account ending 13th April, 1959, relevant to the assessment year 1959-60 the assessee (Hindu joint family) sold 94 of these bonus shares for Rs. 7,269-94. The Appellate Tribunal disagreeing with the Department, held that the original cost to the assessee should not be taken as nothing but that the closing stock must be valued at the original cost of the holding averaged for the original and bonus scrips since issued or at the market price whichever is lower and that since the entire sum of Rs. 7,269-94 nP., did not represent the capital gains, the Income-tax Officer should recompute the profits on that basis if so advised and found worthwhile.

Held, (on reference) : (1) Bonus issued in the form of fully paid shares of the company is not income for income-tax purposes, the shareholder does not, as a result of the transaction, receive any taxable income, profits or gains within the meaning of section 4 of the Income-tax Act; (2) Capital gains represent the excess realisation made by the assessee over and above the cost of acquisition; (3) The real value of the bonus shares to the assessee is only the face value of the shares, and, therefore, the capital gain should be computed by the valuing of the closing stock at the original cost of the holding averaged for the original and bonus scips since issued or at the market price; (4) The true criterion is to take the face value and to ascertain the excess, if any, realised by the assessee by sale of these bonus shares in the year of account which excess alone could be taxed as capital gains under S. 12-B of the Income-tax Act and not the entire sale price of Rs. 7,269.94 nP. (1964) 1 Mad LJ 281 : (1964) 52 ITR 96 : (1964) 1 Comp LJ 173 : (1964) 1 ITJ 452 : ILR (1964) 2 Mad 321.

S. 210 provides that at every annual general meeting of a company held in pursuance of S. 166, the Board of Directors of the company shall lay before the company, first a balance-sheet for a period following the last accounts and secondly, the profit and loss account for that period. Under S. 217 there shall be attached to every balance-sheet laid before a company at the annual general meeting a report by its Board of Directors with respect to the state of the Company's affairs, the amounts which it proposes to carry to any reserves in such balance-sheet and the amount, if any, which it recommends should be paid by way of dividend. S. 219 which speaks of balance-sheet of a company and auditors' report to be placed before the shareholders fortifies that position. Non compliance with that provision is punishable. In S. 217 of the Act, it is provided that the recommendation as to dividend should be made in the report and such report should be attached to the balance-sheet and placed before the company at its annual general meeting. The consideration of the balance-sheet and accounts appears to be an ordinary and not a special business. Under S. 173 of the Act and under S. 211 both the balance-sheet and the profit and loss account are to be prepared in accordance with Part 1 and Part 2 of Sch. 6. The cumulative effect of all the provisions of the Act is that the declaration of dividends should be made at the annual general meeting. Dividends cannot be sanctioned at extra ordinary meeting. Ss. 166, 186, 210, 211, 217 and the provisions in Sch. 6, Part 2. Cl. 3 (14) of the Act indicate that the declaration of dividend is a business of the annual general meeting. 64 Cal WN 970, Rel. on.

In the view, that the declaration of dividend is a matter pertaining to the annual general meeting the Article of Association of the Company which is inconsistent with this is ultra vires the Companies Act under S. 9. If the declaration of dividend is beyond the competency and power of the company the plaintiff-shareholder is entitled to a declaration to that effect. There cannot be any estoppel by words or by deeds against the provisions of the Companies Act.

Held, that under the Articles in the present case, particularly Art. 170, no larger dividend could be declared than what was recommended by the directors; but the company in general meeting could declare smaller dividend. In order that the shareholders at a general meeting declaring dividend should be able to make up their mind as to quantum of dividend to be declared, they should have before them first, the entire accounts of the financial year which was just over and secondly, a report on the financial position of the company brought up to date under S. 217 (1) (d). Unless these were available, the meeting could not properly discharge its obligations. If the directors obtained the sanction of a dividend at an extraordinary general meeting without submitting the accounts required by the Companies Act or required by the Articles it would amount to robbing the provisions in the articles as well as in the Companies Act of the purpose and effect for which these were made for the protection of the shareholders. Definition in section 41 (2) cannot be applied to the expression 'any person having become a member' in S. 155 (1) (b). The expression means 'having become entitled to be a member' or 'having got the right of membership'. If a person has 'come to be' a member then every qualification prescribed by S. 41 is not necessary for him.

In view of the provisions of Ss. 9 and 111 (1), sub-section (3) of S. 111 merely puts a fetter on the powers of the directors and does not in any way abridge the powers of the Court. Section 155 has not been enacted subject to S. 111. S. 155 is the controlling section and gives the Court an overriding power notwithstanding any previous order of the Central Government. Section 111 may have given a speedy remedy in cases which should not normally come to Court, but the power of the Court to order rectification of the Register of members under S. 155 remains unaffected by S. 111. (ii) is clear enough to show that with regard to winding up proceedings commenced before the Act further proceedings in the winding up shall be as if the present Act has not been passed. The fact that in S. 647 (ii) it is not said that the Act of 1913 shall be deemed to remain in full force with regard to pending proceedings whereas in S. 284 of the Act of 1913 it was specifically stated that the Act prior to that would apply, does not affect the legal effect of this sub-clause. Thus with regard to pending proceedings dealing with liquidation of companies with more than one lakh capital S. 10 (2) (b) will not apply. 1956 Ker LT 724: ILR (1956) Trav Co 1227: 27 Com Cas 417: AIR 1957 Trav Co 51 (53, 54, 55) (Pt A) (Prs 2, 3).

——Ss. 10 (2) (a), 391, 392 and 647—Scope. Section 392 is a new section which specifically vests the High Court with the power of dealing with matters arising out of a scheme approved under S. 391 corresponding to S. 153 of the Act of 1913. Even under the Act of 1913 the jurisdiction of a Court to deal with matters arising out of orders sanctioning an arrangement or a scheme during winding up proceedings was recognised. Sub-section (3) of S. 392 was intended only to vest in the High Court the jurisdiction to deal with incidental matters arising out of an order sanctioning a scheme by a District Court or a High Court as the case may be under S. 153 of the Act of 1913 when the same was not in the course of winding up proceedings of a company. The words 'so far as may be' make it plain that every order passed under S. 153 of the Act of 1913 was not intended to be brought within the purview of S. 392 of the Act of 1956. 27 Com Cas 417: 1956 Ker LT 724: ILR (1956) TC 1227: AIR 1957 Trav Co 51 (55, 56) (Pt B) (Pr 4).

Where an association of more than twenty persons is formed in contravention of S. 11 (2) of the Companies Act and a claim is made by some members of such illegal association against another member, such a claim is clearly untenable. Where a plaintiff comes to Court on allegations which on the face of them show that the contract of partnership on which he sues is illegal, the only course for the Courts to pursue is to say that he is not entitled to any relief on the allegations made as the Courts cannot adjudicate in respect of contracts which the law declares to be illegal. (1926) 1 Ch. 657 and AIR 1951 Mad 291. Rel. on.

Further the analogy of S. 69 (3) (a) of the Partnership Act, 1932, does not apply to the case as under that Act an unregistered firm is not illegal; there is no direct compulsion that a partnership firm must be registered. ——S. 11 (2) — Partnership of two individuals and managing agent of company registered under Act — Company consisting of 20 members — Partnership held did not contravene S. 11 (2) — Company as such is not a partner — (Companies Act (1913), S. 4 (2)).

Held, A partnership between two individuals and the managing agent of a limited company registered under the Companies Act, and having twenty members is not a partnership of more than twenty members contravening the provisions of S. 11 (2) of the Companies Act, 1956 corresponding to S. 4 (2) of the Companies Act, 1913 and there is nothing illegal in the formation of such a partnership. In the partnership agreement it is not the limited company as a body corporate that is a partner but only its managing agent as an individual. It is not a partnership of more than 20 persons but only a partnership of three persons.

Obiter: A registered incorporated company as such which enters into a partnership with two other individuals will function in the partnership agreement only as a single person within the meaning of S. 4 (2) of the old Act and S. 11 (2) of the new Act and not as a group of individuals comprising its shareholders. (1963) 1 MLJ 250: (1963) 1 Com LJ 158: 76 Mad LW 282: (1963) 33 Com Cas 833: AIR 1963 Mad 128 (130) (Prs 5, 6, 8).

——Ss. 12 (1), 13 and 3 — "Purpose" and "objects" — Distinction between — Object of company to contribute to political fund — Legality.

To draw a distinction between the word "purpose" in S. 12 (1) and the word "objects" in S. 13 is to attempt to make a distinction without a difference.

Whatever purpose is not prohibited by law remains a "lawful purpose" within the meaning of S. 12 of the Act. Contribution to political fund or political object is not legally prohibited and therefore such a contribution is within the meaning of the expression "lawful purpose" in S. 12.

It is, therefore, clear that under Ss. 12 and 13 read with S. 3 of the Act a company can certainly be formed and registered one of whose objects or purposes is to contribute to the political funds of political parties. 61 Cal WN 374: (1957) 27 Com Cas 361: AIR 1957 Cal 234 (236, 237) (Pt B) (Prs 12, 14).

——Ss. 12, 14 and 35 — Formation of Company — Declaration contained in Memorandum of Association of Private Company — Person not subscribing his signature to declaration — Person is not a subscriber to Memorandum of Association even though his signature appears elsewhere — S. 35 does not cover this defect.

S. 12 of the Companies Act, 1956, relates to the mode of forming incorporated companies and provides that two or more persons associated for any lawful purpose may form a private company by subscribing their names to a Memorandum of Association. The expression "subscribing their names to a Memorandum of Association" implies an agreement between the persons concerned to associate each other into a body corporate and subscribing in the contest means the signing by such persons or their nominees in the Memorandum in token of their agreement to so associate themselves. The signatories are thus parties to the agreement which is in the form of a declaration.

A Memorandum of Association of a company is required by S. 14 to be, where it is a private company, in the form containing a declaration prescribed in Table B in Sch. I. Those who do not subscribe their signatures to the declaration in token of their desire to form themselves into a company and do not agree to take shares as required in the declaration, cannot be considered to be subscribers to the Memorandum of Association. A person's signatures elsewhere in the Memorandum than in token of his being a party to a declaration as to the formation of the association and undertaking to accept the number of shares mentioned, cannot be regarded that such person is a subscriber to the Memorandum of Association, for he is not by his signature a party to the declaration which is the vital part of the Memorandum. The conclusiveness of certificate of incorporation engendered by S. 35 does not cover the defect in such a case and require that those who have not been parties to the declaration in the Memorandum should nevertheless be regarded as subscribers thereto. Further, the mention of the person as among the first directions in the Articles of Association is not of assistance to such person because what governs is the Memorandum of Association and the fact of the person's enumeration in the Articles as among the first directors will not make him subscriber as to the Memorandum. (1965) 2 Mad LJ 504: (1965) 2 Com LJ 266: (1965) 35 Com Cas 930: AIR 1966 Mad 231 (234) (Prs 6, 7) (DB).

——S. 13 — Memorandum of Association — Objects clause — General words followed by specific object and also other general objects, all independent of each other — Construction.

Held, on facts that on a proper construction of the memorandum of the company in question, it was impossible to conclude that the company has been formed solely for the working of the Akola Electric license. One of the main or principal objects was to carry on the business and undertaking of an Electric Energy Supply Company and this object included starting of industries primary or subsidiary to the said business. The starting of primary or subsidiary industries would in itself, be an independent object. For instance, the company may start an industry to make cable, electric bulbs, electric meters, electric switches etc. Such an undertaking would be covered by the expression "all industries primary or subsidiary to the said business". The several other general objects mentioned in the objects clause were independent of each other. Therefore each of them had to be treated as principal and independent object. 63 Bom LR 815: 1961 Nag LJ 672: (1962) 32 Com Cas 215: AIR 1962 Bom 133 (140, 141, 142) (Pt B) (Prs 11, 12).

——Ss. 13, 16 and 106 — Right to dividend — Insertion of in memorandum of association — Clause fixing limit of dividends — If can be altered by special resolution.

There is no provision in S. 13 or anywhere else in the Act, which requires the right to a dividend to be inserted in the Memorandum of Association of the Company. A clause in a memorandum of association fixing limit of dividends to be declared on a particular class of shares cannot be regarded as a condition within the meaning of S. 16 (1) and it can be altered by a special resolution. 63 Cal WN 11: (1959) 28 Com Cas 85: AIR 1959 Cal 253 (256) (Pt B) (Pr 32).

——Ss. 13, 16 and 17 — Alteration of object clause in memorandum of company — Procedure.

The Companies Act, 1956, in India, has not adopted the modern English Law on the subject of alteration of the memorandum of a Company. The present position in English Law, as a result of the enactment of Ss. 77 and 78 of the Companies Act of 1947 and re-enacted in S. 5 of the Act of 1948, is that the necessity for confirmation by the Court has been removed subject to the right of the objectors to petition for cancellation of the alteration. The onus, therefore, in England has shifted from the Companies and the Courts to the objectors to take the initiative of making an application to the Court objecting to the alteration.

Reading Ss. 13 and 16 of the Companies Act, 1956, together, it is clear that the objects clauses in the Memorandum are treated as conditions of the Memorandum and, therefore, can be altered only according to express provisions of the statute which again are contained in S. 17 thereof. The procedure in India under the Companies Act, 1956, for changing objects in the Memorandum is by special resolution confirmed by Court under S. 17 of the Act. By the express statutory provisions contained in sub-Ss. (2) and (5) of S. 17 the alteration shall not take effect until, and except in so far as, it is confirmed by the Court on petition, and the Court may make an order confirming the alteration either wholly or in part and on such terms and conditions, if any as it thinks fit. 61 Cal WN 897: ILR (1958) 2 Cal 362: (1958) 28 Com Cas 122: AIR 1957 Cal 593 (597) (Pt A) (Prs 10, 11).

——S. 16 — Requirements of memorandum — Statement of object clause — Proper form — Objects not to be mere possibilities.

One indispensable condition under S. 13 which states the requirements of a memorandum of a Company is that the memorandum shall state the objects of the Company. Stating the objects of the Company in the memorandum is not a mere legal technicality, but is a necessity of great practical import. It must not be too vague and too general and too wide. But this limitation does not mean that the memorandum has to be without any flexibility. Great liberality of language and aspiration is accorded to a Memorandum of Association in stating its objects so long as they give reasonable information and indication of the business the Company intends to carry on. The next consideration is that, the objects stated should be those which the company intends to carry out in near and reasonable future. They should not be too remote objects. 61 Cal WN 897 : (1958) 28 Com Cas 122 : ILR (1958) 2 Cal 362 : AIR 1957 Cal 593 (597) (Pt B) (Pr 10).

(Companies Act (1956), S. 17.)

1. Special resolution.
2. Alteration of place of registered office.
3. Sub-section (1) (a).
4. Sub-section (1) (d).
5. Sub-section (1) (f).
6. Confirmation by Court.
7. Persons entitled to object to the change.

1. Special resolution.

——S. 17 — Special resolution — Requirements — Notices to all shareholders issued — Only five shareholders attending — Resolution unanimously passed — Requirements of law complied with.

The resolution for alteration was passed unanimously by the five shareholders present at the meeting. Notices were sent to all the shareholders of the company. In spite of such notices no other shareholders came forward to oppose the Special Resolution. Then again advertisements were issued in the two newspapers setting out the date and time of the meeting and also the proposed alterations. No creditors or shareholders came forward to oppose the proposed alterations :

Held, that the Special Resolution had been passed according to the requirement of the Companies Act, 1956. The non-attendance of a larger number of shareholders at the extraordinary general meeting was no ground for contending that the resolution had not been passed as required by law. AIR 1965 Cal 16 (28) (Pt G) (Pr 58).

——S. 17 (1) — Scope — Alteration of memorandum — Limits.

The sub-cls. (a) to (g) to S. 17 (1) are a limitation on the company's capacity by its special resolution to alter its memorandum in respect of its objects. A company can alter the objects of its memorandum by a special resolution only to the extent required to enable it to do any of the things specified in sub-Cls. (a) to (g) and for no other purpose. 61 Cal WN 374 : (1957) 27 Com Cas 361 : AIR 1957 Cal 234 (237) (Pt C) (Pr 18).

——Ss. 17 and 293 — Alteration of memorandum of association by special resolution — Confirmation by Court — Imposition of conditions.

Under S. 17 (1) (a) of the Act, a company may by a special resolution, alter the provisions of its memorandum so as to enable it to carry on its business more economically or more efficiently.

By a special resolution the company decided to add the following to its Memorandum of Association :

"('S) To subscribe, contribute, guarantee money for or otherwise aid any National, Charitable, Benevolent, Political, Public, General or useful object, fund, trust, or any institution and to make donations to such person or persons and in such cases as may seem expedient."

Held, that the alteration proposed by the special resolution in question will certainly be conducive to the business of the Company being carried on more efficiently. There was nothing unlawful in the alteration and under S. 293 of the Act, the Board of Directors may contribute to charitable and other funds on their own responsibility up to a certain limit and, with the consent of the Company in general meeting beyond that limit. The expression 'other funds' used in S. 293 (1) (e) may refer to contributions of the kind indicated in the proposed addition in the Memorandum of Association. Imposition of conditions is necessary so that the addition may not lead to abuse. 1958 BLJR 502 : (1960) 30 Com Cas 387 : AIR 1959 Pat 514 (515) (Prs 2, 3).

2. Alteration of place of registered office.

——S. 17 (1) — 'State' — Meaning of — Change of place of registered office to an area not merged de jure with India —(General Clauses Act (1897), S. 3 (43)) — (Constitution of India, Art. 1 (3)).

After the enactment of the States Reorganisation Act, and amendments, consequently made in the Constitution the definition of a 'State' in the General Clauses Act would have to be read as including States and territories of the Indian Union. So far as Pondicherry is concerned, it is not yet merged de jure into India and therefore, it is not yet territory which has been acquired by the Indian Union. As the power granted to a company under S. 17 of the Companies Act to alter its memorandum of Association, so as to change the place of its registered office from one State to another does not include a power to alter the registered office from a place in the Indian Union to a place outside the Union, there is no power in a company to validly pass special resolution altering the place of its registered office from Madras to Pondicherry. Therefore, such a resolution for alteration of the Memorandum cannot be sanctioned by the Court. (1958) 2 Mad LJ 141 : 71 Mad LW 611 : 1958 Mad WN 400 : AIR 1958 Mad 450 (451) (Pr 2).

——Ss. 17 and 172 — Scope — Special resolution to alter place of registered office of company — Confirmation by Court — Essentials for — Notice of meeting to consider and pass resolution not specifying hour of meeting on the day notified — Effect on validity of resolution.

Under S. 17 of the Companies Act, the company may by a special resolution alter its memorandum so as to change the place of its registered office from one State to another, but the alteration cannot take effect until it is confirmed by the Court. The foundation of the Court's jurisdiction to confirm the alteration is the passing of the special resolution. Before, confirming the alteration under S. 17 (3) the Court must be satisfied that sufficient notice has been given to every person whose interests will be affected by the alteration; under S. 172 (1) the notice of the meeting must specify the place, the day and the hour of the meeting and also contain a statement of the business to be transacted at the meeting. There must be strict evidence that a meeting was duly convened and the special resolution duly passed thereat. Where the notice of the meeting does not say at what time of the day the meeting will be held, it is not possible for the shareholders to know at what time exactly on the specified day the meeting would be held when the requirements of S. 172 (1) are not complied with in that the hour of the meeting was not specified therein the notice is invalid, and the special resolution passed at such meeting on an invalid notice is also bad and invalid, and the Court will not confirm such a resolution for altering the place of business. (1964) 2 Com LJ 157 : ILR (1964) Cut 531.

——S. 17 — (Companies Act (1913), S. 12) — Resolution to alter registered office of Company — Confirmation.

Though under S. 12 of the Indian Companies Act of 1913, the memorandum of association may be altered with regard to its registered office by a special resolution to be confirmed by a Court, yet it is clear from the unalterable nature of a registered office in England that, the registered office of a Company in India should not be altered and the alteration should not be confirmed as and when the Company passes a special resolution. ILR (1956) Cut 697 : (1958) 28 Com Cas 523 : AIR 1957 Orissa 232 (235) (Pt B) (Pr 21).

——S. 17 — Companies Act (1913), S. 12 — Resolution can be confirmed only if it is bona fide and in the interests of Company.

The Court can confirm the special resolution altering the registered office, only if it is satisfied that the said special resolution was first bona fide and next was in the interests of the Company.

When a change of the registered offices of a Company was effected in 1947 from West Bengal to Orissa on the ground that it would be more convenient to carry on the business of the companies if the registered offices were changed to Orissa a retransfer of the registered offices of the companies to West Bengal again on the same ground without stating any other additional reasons would not be bona fide one. ILR (1956) Cut 697 : (1958) 28 Com Cas 523 : AIR 1957 Orissa 232 (236) (Pt C) (Pr 26).

——S. 17 — Companies Act (1913), S. 12 — Resolution to change registered office of Company — Change likely to affect revenue of State — Resolution not confirmed.

The interests of the State are to be taken into account and are of considerable importance in confirming special resolution of the companies if they have adverse effect on the interests of the State concerned.

Thus where by the change of registered office of a company situate within certain State, that State would suffer a substantial reduction of income from Income-tax and Sales-tax, the Court would take that fact into account and would refuse to confirm the resolution seeking to change the registered office of the Company. ILR (1956) Cut 697: (1958) 28 Com Cas 523: AIR 1957 Orissa 232 (237) (Pt D) (Prs 33, 34).

3. Sub-section (1) (a).

——S. 17 (1) (a) — Scope of inquiry.

For the purpose of S. 17 (1) (a) what the Court has to consider is: What is the object of the Company which is being actively prosecuted if it is a commercial company for the purpose of earning profits, or what is the object which the company is now seeking actively to prosecute so as to earn profits; and it is in relation to that object which under the circumstances becomes the business of the company that the question has got to be asked whether the amendment suggested is an amendment which will enable the company to carry out that object more economically or more efficiently. ILR (1958) Bom 149 : 59 Bom LR 738: (1957) 27 Com Cas 604: AIR 1958 Bom 155 (157) (Pt B) (Pr 4) (DB).

——S. 17 (1) (a) — Scope — Company seeking to contribute to political institutions — Alteration if lawful.

Where the material change which was sought to be introduced by the amendment and alteration in the memorandum of association of a company, whose main business was the manufacture and production of iron and steel, was a power to contribute to political funds of the Congress party in order to ensure its success at the polls.

Held, that the alteration should be confirmed under S. 17 because,

(a) what an individual can lawfully do can be done by a joint stock corporation, and the new power sought to be introduced by the Company was not unlawful; (b) by giving the expression 'efficiently' in S. 17 (1) (a), a very wide import, it could be said that the company by contributing funds to a political party would be carrying on business more efficiently; (c) there was nothing to prevent the company from reconstructing itself and to have a new memorandum including this object; (d) though the Court has discretion to confirm or not to confirm an amendment it must always bear in mind that it is primarily for the company to decide what is for its good and it is not for the Court to tell the company how it should carry on its business; (e) since the shareholders of the company had agreed that the funds of the company might be utilised as contribution to the funds of a political party, it was not right for the Court to take a view different from the view of the shareholders, when that view was not opposed to law and when that view fell within the provisions of the Companies Act. ILR (1958) Bom 149: 59 Bom LR 738: (1957) 27 Com Cas 604: AIR 1958 Bom 155 (156, 157, 158, 159, 160) (Pt C) (Prs 2, 6, 10, 11, 12) (DB).

——S. 17 (1) (a) — 'Carrying on business more efficiently' — Meaning of.

The expression 'carrying on business more efficiently must be construed to mean carrying on business in a manner which will produce the desired results or effects. The word 'effeciently' cannot be limited to the case of production. ILR (1958) Bom 149: 59 Bom LR 738: (1957) 27 Com Cas 604: AIR 1958 Bom 155 (159, 160) (Pt D) (Pr 10) (DB).

——Ss. 17 (1) (a) — S. 293 (e) — Applicability — Business effieiency — What is — Iron and Steel Company seeking alteration to enable contribution to political funds.

Words 'economically' and 'efficiently' in Cl. (a) of S. 17(1) are designedly vague with large import, for the obvious purpose of enabling a company to alter its Memorandum in respect of its objects with as much freedom as possible.

A healthy relationship between the Government and administration on the one hand and Iron and Steel Industry on the other, leads to business efficiency in the modern age.

Where therefore a company carrying on iron and steel industry seeks to alter its objects of memorandum of association for the purpose of contributing its money to the political funds of political parties, such alteration passes the test provided in Cl. (a) of S. 17 (1).

This view is further fortified by Cl. (e) of S. 293. The words 'other funds' may be interpreted to include a company's contribution to the political funds of political parties and that certainly would be funds not directly relating to the business of the company within the meaning of that expression in sub-cl. (e). In other words this provision in the Companies Act is an indication that such a contribution, far from being unlawful or legally prohibited, is permissible. 61 Cal WN 374: (1957) 27 Com Cas 361: AIR 1957 Cal 234 (237, 238) (Pt D) (Prs 20, 23, 27).

——S. 17 (1) — Addition to existing objects of company — Depends on discretion of directors — Powers of High Court to examine and interfere— Extent of.

S. 17 (1) (a) and (d) has employed language of wide amplitude. Whether a company can carry on its business more economically or more efficiently is a matter for the judgment of the directors. The Court, of course, on given facts may apply its mind and see whether the directors may reasonably and fairly form that opinion. If the directors consider that under the existing circumstances, it will be convenient and advantageous to combine the new objects with the existing objects, the High Court will not go behind it and hold an enquiry.

——S. 17 — Alteration of memorandum — Contributions to funds of political parties — Confirmation can be granted under S. 17 (1) (a) — Imposition of conditions not proper.

Contributions towards the funds of political parties is legal and it is primarily for the shareholders to decide what is in the interest of the company. Alteration of the memorandum of association of a company can therefore, be validly confirmed under S. 17 (1) (a). AIR 1957 Cal 234, Relied on.

It is not necessary to impose any conditions like compulsion to show all such contributions in the profit and loss account and balance sheet of every year or publication of such contributions every year in two leading newspapers. For otherwise it will operate discriminately inasmuch as a new company already providing for such contributions in its memorandum will be at liberty to make contributions to funds of political parties without disclosing such information in the balance-sheet and profit and loss account. 4. Sub-section (1) (d).

——S. 17 (1) (d) — Alteration in memorandum of Association.

The expression 'may conveniently or advantageously be combined with the business of the company' in S. 17 (1) (d) would mean that the proposed alteration in the memorandum of association would be in respect of a new business which can conveniently or advantageously be 'combined' with a business existing at the date of the proposed alteration and which business is being carried on at such relevant date by the company. Where the company was not carrying on its original business of manufacturing woollen fabrics which business admittedly was the only business which the company carried on throughout its career, there would be no business as contemplated by S. 17 (1) (d) with which the new proposed business could be conveniently or advantageously be combined and carried on. ('58) 60 Bom LR 1121.

——S. 17 — Alteration of memorandum — New business proposed by alterations when can be combined with existing business.

If the company has no existing business with which the new business proposed by the altered objects can be combined, the Court ought not to make an order confirming the alterations in the objects of the company. The Insurance Act requires investment of funds arising out of the life insurance business only. That Act does not in any way control funds which have come to the hands of the company out of a general insurance business. Where the applicant had ceased to carry on life insurance business the restrictions relating to investment imposed by the Insurance Act do not apply to the investments made by the applicant and it is not required to invest its funds arising from general insurance business in any particular manner. It cannot be contended that the new business as manufacturers, etc., proposed by the alterations could not be combined with the existing business. AIR 1965 Cal 16 (22, 23) (Pt E) (Prs 29, 31, 32).

——Ss. 17, 397, 433 — Alteration of memorandum — Requirements — Exercise of discretion by Court — Considerations.

When a company seeks to alter its objects with a view to carry on some new business, if the company's position is financially sound, if the alterations are fair to all classes of members of the company and if the rights of creditors are in no way prejudiced, such alterations should be confirmed provided the requirement of the statute is complied with. It is not a matter for the Court to determine as to what business the company should carry on. If the directors and members of a company propose to alter its objects, and if there is no objection from the creditors or if their position is not prejudiced by the proposed alterations, the Court should not stand in the way of the company's seeking new objects to enable it to embark on a new venture. But there are certain obvious limitations. The new business must not be destructive of or inconsistent with the existing business. There must be some existing business which the company should be carrying on at the time when it passes the resolution for altering its objects and such business must be carried on under its existing object clauses. In a trading company, whose aim is to earn profits for the benefit of shareholders, the directors and shareholders of the company are the best judges of the trading policy of the company and so long as the requirements of the statute are complied with and the policy pursued by the company through the object clauses in its memorandum is not fraudulent or unfair to any class of its members and does not violate the statutory provisions, the Court should not easily or lightly interfere with the decision of the shareholders and directors of the company and also of creditors, if any. The doctrine of paramount object or main object of the company is a matter which is material for considerations in applications for an order for winding up of the company on the just and equitable ground or in other applications, where the question of winding up is material, for instance, in an application under S. 397 of the Act. If the substratum of the company is gone, that may be a good ground for making an order for winding up of the company on the just and equitable ground. But the loss of substratum of the company is not by itself a ground on which the company Court should decline to confirm alterations in the memorandum of association of a company, if the conditions mentioned above are fulfilled. AIR 1965 Cal 16 (27) (Pt F) (Prs 55, 56).

——S. 17 (1) (d) — "Some business" includes new business.

Section 17 (1) (d) of the Companies Act, 1956, says that the memorandum may be altered with respect to the objects of the company to enable it to carry on "some business". The words "some business" in that clause apparently must include business other than the business which is already being carried on under the existing memorandum. Therefore, the addition of "some business" may be the addition of a business which is entirely new departure from the business already carried on. The only requirement of the Statute law in India is that such business must be one which can (1) conveniently or advantageously be combined with the business of the company and (2) that this must be so under the existing circumstances and not under hypothetical circumstances. So long as these two limits are observed the shareholders and the management of the company should be left free to add to or reduce their business by suitable alterations in their memorandum. 61 Cal. W.N. 897: ILR (1958) 2 Cal 362: (1958) 28 Com Cas 122: AIR 1957 Cal 593 (596) (Pt C) (Pr 8).

——S. 17 (1) (a) and (d) — Alteration of Memorandum of Association — Company carrying on general insurance and investment business — Cessation of general insurance business — Investment business, independent business, continued — Addition of objects to include business in engineering works, cotton and import and export — Alteration, if can be allowed.

The company was formed in 1923 under the Companies Act of 1913 with the objects, inter alia, of carrying on business in life and general insurance and investment business. When the life insurance business was taken over by the Central Government, the company could not with profit carry on the business in general insurance and stopped the same from 1961 and consequently its registration under the Insurance Act of 1938 was cancelled. The company, however, continued to carry on its investment business. In 1964 a special resolution was passed unanimously at an extraordinary general meeting of the company to alter the objects of the company so as to include business in engineering works, cotton and importing and exporting. On an application to Court under section 17 of the Act for confirmation of alteration of the memorandum of association of the company, opposed only by the Registrar of the Companies,

Held, the application for the alteration of the memorandum of association has to be allowed. For invoking S. 17 of the Act, it must be shown that the company is carrying on an existing business. In deciding the question whether a company should be allowed to start additional business, an application made in this behalf should not be disallowed merely because the new business is wholly different from and bears no relation to the existing business of the company. All that is essential is that it should be capable of being conveniently and advantageously combined with the existing business and is not destructive of or inconsistent with the existing business and this must be so under the existing circumstances and not under hypothetical circumstances.

On the facts, the nature and extent of the investments showed that the investment business of the company was an independent business and not ancillary to its main objects. The new businesses in engineering works, cotton and importing and exporting are not inconsistent with or destructive of the investment business. The company is in good financial position and has sufficient working capital. The material on record also shows that the shareholders are of the view that better returns are likely to be given to the shareholders if industrial and commercial activity is undertaken by the company. The company should be permitted to alter its memorandum accordingly. The application in respect of other objects with no prospect of their being taken up in the near future will not be allowed at present. The order confirming the alteration would not take effect until the name of the company (containing the word 'insurance') is changed. 6. Confirmation by Court.

——S. 17 (1) — Order under — Nature of — Power of company to amend or alter memorandum — Limits.

The order of Court made under S. 17 is a discretionary order and wide power is given to the Court to confirm the alteration either wholly or in part and on such terms and conditions if any, as it thinks fit. The power of a company to alter or amend its memorandum is restricted by the seven sub-clauses contained in S. 17(1) which deal with the various cases which will permit a company to make the necessary alteration in its Memorandum. It is not open to a company to alter or amend the Memorandum in a case which does not fall in any of these seven sub-clauses. ILR (1958) Bom. 149: 59 Bom. LR 738: (1957) 27 Com. Where the principal clauses of the memorandum relating to the carrying on the banking business have been deleted by an order of the High Court and this order has become conclusive upon registration under S. 18 (1) of the Companies Act, the act of the company in respect of the memorandum of which the said order is made to transact banking business or function as a bank by clever manipulation or in disguise is ultra vires and illegal. ——S. 17 — Alteration of memorandum — Confirmation — Safeguards — Discretionary power of Court — Companies Act (1913), Ss. 12, 13 and 14.

It is clear from the provisions of Ss. 12, 13 and 14 of the Companies Act, 1913, which correspond substantially to S. 17 of the Companies Act, 1956, that if the alteration proposed is one of the several things enumerated in Cls. (a) to (g) of S. 12 of the Act of 1913 or S. 17 of the Act of 1956, the Court has jurisdiction to confirm the alteration either wholly or in part. But this exercise of the power as conferred by these sections is fenced round by safeguards which are calculated to protect the interest of creditors, the interest of shareholders and the interest of the public. The creditors are protected by express provision in the section itself. Their consent has to be procured and their claims have to be satisfied in certain events which are mentioned in the section itself. The public and the shareholders individually and collectively are protected by the necessary publicity of the proceedings and by the discretion which is entrusted to the Court. (1961) 31 Com Cas 287: 65 Cal WN 99: AIR 1961 Cal 666 (671) (Pt C) (Pr 10) (DB).

——S. 17 — Application for amendment of memorandum — Powers of Court.

Under S. 17 it is the Court's business to sanction the amendment of the memorandum. The decision on the application for such amendment must depend on the actual provisions of the Companies Act, 1956 and their interpretation. If the Act permits such alteration and if the Constitution of India does not prevent it then no further question arises and the amendment of the memorandum must have to be allowed and sanctioned although even then the Court can impose any terms and conditions as it thinks fit. 61 Cal WN 374: (1957) 27 Com Cas 361: AIR 1957 Cal 234 (236) (Pt A) (Pr 11).

——S. 17 (5) — Alteration of memorandum — Conditions and terms to be imposed — Powers of Court — Necessity of legislation.

Sub-s. (5) of S. 17 indicates the scope of the Court's power in the act of confirmation. It means that in making the order confirming the alteration, the Court can do so on such terms and conditions as it thinks fit.

Where therefore a company carrying an iron and steel industry applied for alteration of its objects of the memorandum for contributing to the political funds of political parties, the sanction was granted subject to the condition limiting the alteration to a certain period of years after which the sanction lapsed and fresh application was necessary and a condition imposing fullest publicity to the contributions made in its balance sheets and profits and loss accounts. 61 Cal WN 374: (1957) 27 Com Cas 361: AIR 1957 Cal 234 (239, 240) (Pt E) (Prs 28, 32, 35).

——Ss. 17, 189 and 293 (1) (e) — Special resolution to subscribe to political parties' funds — Application to alter memorandum — Power of Court.

Provided the alteration to be made in the Memorandum of Association is within the ambit of the company's power under S. 17 (1) and does not prejudice any of the interests which the Court is required to safeguard by S. 17 (3) the Court has no power under S. 17 (2) to refuse to confirm the alteration. It follows that the Court's power under S. 17 (5) to impose terms and conditions is also limited to such terms and conditions as may be called for in the interests of shareholders or creditors or other persons who might be prejudiced by the alteration. Where the shareholders of a company, after considering the pros and cons of the matter, agreed that the funds of the Company may be utilised for contribution to the funds of a political party and that view was not opposed to law, it is not right for the Court to take a different view, and the alteration may be confirmed. 7. Persons entitled to object to the change.

——S. 17 (2) — If controlled by S. 45 Banking Companies Act — Banking Company — Resolution altering memorandum of association — Confirmation by Court — Right of creditor to object.

Section 45 of the Banking Companies Act controls section 17 (2) of the Companies Act. But it is only in case of a compromise or arrangement that it has to be certified by the Reserve Bank under section 45 of the Banking Companies Act.

Where a Banking Company applies under S. 17 (2) Companies Act for confirmation of its resolution for altering the memorandum of association, even assuming that the said resolution amounts to an arrangement, it is not for the creditor to dictate or direct as to how the petitioner-company should conduct its business. It is a matter which the shareholders of the company after considering the pros and cons of the matter have agreed that the proposed amendment should be made in the Memorandum of Association and the creditor can not object to it. The creditor is only concerned with his money, and when the petitioner-Company is ready to give security for the said amount there is no reason why the said resolution should not be confirmed. (1959) 29 Com Cas 157 (Andh Pra).

——S. 17 — Objection to alterations — Right of State to oppose alterations.

If the company has existing liability to the State in respect of sales tax or excise duty, no doubt the State becomes a creditor of the company and would therefore be entitled to oppose the alterations, if its interest as a creditor is likely to be affected by the proposed alterations. But the statute does not confer upon the State, as a prospective creditor in respect of future liabilities of the company, the right to oppose the proposed alterations of the objects of the company. AIR 1957 Orissa 232 and AIR 1961 Orissa 62, Disting. (1920) 1 Ch 544, Rel. on. AIR 1965 Cal 16 (20) (Pt A) (Pr 18).

——S. 17 — Objections to alterations — Right of public to object.

The memorandum of association of a company is no doubt a notice to the public at large, of the objects of the company. But such notice does not vest in the members of the public, a right to come and raise objections when the company proposes to alter its object clauses. The statute has prescribed the persons or classes of persons whose interest requires the Court's protection, when an order confirming the alterations of the objects of the company is going to be made. The High Court cannot in exercise of its discretion under S. 17, introduce the new bar, not prescribed by the legislature. No doubt the Court has the power to impose conditions while making an order confirming the alterations in the object clauses. But the Court should not, in dealing with an application for confirming alterations in the object clauses, hold that the interest of the public at large should be protected and it should be allowed to come and raise objections to the proposed alterations. AIR 1965 Cal 16 (21, 22) (Pt B) (Prs 22, 24, 25, 26).

——S. 17 — Objections to alterations — Right of landlord of Company to object.

The landlord of the Company has no right to oppose the application under S. 17 on any other grounds except those which are recognised by the law relating to landlord and tenant. The law does not recognise or confer on the landlord a right to dictate the business the tenant should carry on, or a right to object to a change of business of the tenant. Unless there is a statutory prohibition or unless there are restrictive covenants a tenant has the right to use the demised premises for whatever purposes he likes, provided they are not illegal, immoral, and do not create a nuisance. Further in a contract for lease of property to be used for business purposes, the tenant is entitled to a lease under which he could carry on any business, subject only to the restrictions imposed by the general law of the land. If the rent is in arrears and the landlord is a creditor for such arrears of rent, different considerations would apply. AIR 1965 Cal 16 (22) (Pt C) (Pr 27).

——S. 17 — Proposed change of place or registered office — State can object. See Companies Act 1913), S. 12 (3). (1959) 2 Orissa JD 673.

——S. 17 — Companies Act (1913), Ss. 12 (3) (a) and 14 — 'Any person' or 'class of persons' — Meaning — 'Shall have regard to' — Effect — Resolution to change registered office of Company from one State to another — State or any other person is competent to raise objections.

The expressions 'any person' or 'class of persons' in S. 12 (3) (a), Companies Act (1913) are very general and are applicable not only to the creditors or debentureholders of a Company but also to every person whose interests may be affected. S. 14 only requires that before exercising its discretion under Ss. 12 and 13, the Court shall have regard to the rights and interests of the members of the company or of any class of them, as well as to the rights and interests of the creditors. This provision does not in any way fetter the power of the Court to take into consideration the objections of any person or class of persons if their interests are affected by the alteration. S. 14 only requires that the Court shall have regard to the rights and interests also of the members.

Hence where by the special resolution the registered office of a company is sought to be changed from the State of Orissa to the State of West Bengal, the State of Orissa or any other person is competent to raise objections under S. 12 of the Indian Companies Act of 1913, to a change of the registered office and confirmation of the special resolution to that effect; and the Court can consider the objections in confirming or not the special resolution of the companies and can, if the objections are justified, refuse to confirm the special resolutions. ILR (1956) Cut 697: 1958 Com Cas 523: AIR 1957 Orissa 232 (234, 237) (Pt A) (Prs 20, 34).

——Ss. 18 and 19 (as amended in 1960) — Order of confirmation rendered void and inoperative for non-compliance of S. 19 (2) — Court cannot extend time thereafter under S. 18 (4).

The Court has no power to extend the time under S. 18 (4) after the order of confirmation has become void and inoperative under S. 19 (2) by reason of the non-compliance with the provisions of that section before the expiry of four months from the date of passing of the order.

On a proper understanding of the real scope of Ss. 18 and 19, it is clear that the power conferred by sub-section (4) of S. 18 is controlled by sub-s. (2) of S. 19 particularly by the proviso thereto. S. 19 (2) makes it explicit that the order of the Court will become void and inoperative in the event of failure to file the required documents with the Registrar within the prescribed time. This itself would indicate that an application to extend time should be made before the order becomes void and inoperative. Normally when an order becomes void and inoperative there is no question of reviving it unless the statute provides an enabling power. (1964) 34 Com Cas 333: 77 Mad LW 192: ILR (1964) 1 Mad 645: (1964) 2 Com LJ 34: (1964) 2 Mad LJ 111: AIR 1964 Mad 383 (384) (Prs 3, 4).

Ss. 18 and 19 of the Companies Act, so far as the time factor is concerned, have to be read and understood in the light of S. 640-A, which permits the exclusion of the time taken in drawing up the order to be filed with the Registrar and in obtaining a copy thereof. S. 18 (1), read in the light of S. 640-A means that the period of three months from the date of the order would be counted excluding the time taken for drawing up the order. The period should also be counted further excluding the time taken in obtaining a copy of the order. A copy application filed within a period of three months of the drawing up of the order would therefore, be in time, and would entitle the applicant to exclude besides the time taken by the Court for supplying a copy of the order, and, if filed with the Registrar on receipt of the copy, it would be in time. ——Ss. 18 (4) and 19 (2) — Scope — Extension of time under S. 18 (4) — Permissibility — Court must be moved within three months from the date of order — Expressions 'extend the time', 'at any time', and 'void and inoperative' — Construction — Interpretation of statutes.

Under S. 18 (4) of the Companies Act, 1956, the time for filing of documents or for the registration of the alteration under the section can be extended by the Court only if it is moved within three months from the date of the order for this purpose.

Words and phrases used in one section ought to be examined having regard to their impact on the other provisions of the same statute and in harmony with the aim, scope and object of the Act. A reference to Section 19 of the Act which deals with the effect of failure to register in accordance with the provisions of Section 18 shows that the two expressions used in sub-section (4) of Section 18, namely, 'at any time' and 'extend the time' have to be construed in the background of what has become 'void and inoperative' according to sub-section (2) of Section 19. If sub-section (4) of S. 18 is read in isolation it appears to confer a plenary power upon the Court to exercise its jurisdiction for extending the time for the filing of documents or for the registration of the alteration, at any time.

The only reasonable construction in this context is that 'at any time' means while the period of limitation, namely, three months from the date of the order was still running. If the Court had been moved during those three months, the time for the filing of documents could be extended or in another sense prolonged. Prolongation of time cannot occur after the time originally limited has expired. What has become 'void and inoperative' does not admit of extension or enlargement. By force of the proviso to sub-section (2) of S. 19 'void and inoperative' order can be revived if an application has been made within a further period of one month. 65 Punj LR 302: ILR (1963) 1 Punj 850: (1963) 1 Com LJ 146: (1963) 33 Com Cas 265: 1963 Com Cas Rep 49: AIR 1963 Punj 239 (241, 242) (Pt A) (Prs 2, 3, 5, 7).

——Ss. 18 and 19 — Scope and effect of — Failure to file certified copies with Registrar within three months — Effect — Application to Court for extension of time after expiry of three months — Competency — Power of Court — Proper procedure.

Where the certified copy of the order under S. 17 of the Companies Act, is not filed within three months as required by S. 18 (1) of the Act. the Court has, of course, power to extend the time for filing the same, under S. 18 (4) of the Act. But the application for extension of time must be made to the Court within the period of three months specified in S. 18 (1). Once the said period of three months has expired, the proceedings become void under S. 19 (2) of the Act, and the Court cannot thereafter extend the time. The only course open thereafter is to apply to the Court under S. 19 (2), Proviso, to revive the order. (1963) 2 Com LJ 228 (Punj).

Per Hidayatullah, J:— Unlike an unincorporated company, which has no separate existence and which the law does not distinguish from its members an incorporated company has a separate existence and the law recognises it as a legal person separate and distinct from its members. This new legal personality emerges from the moment of incorporation and from that date the persons subscribing to the memorandum of association and other persons joining as members are regarded as a body corporate or a corporation aggregate and the new person begins to function as an entity. The corporation really has no physical existence; it is a mere 'abstraction of law'. State Trading Corporation of India v. A limited company and the individuals forming it are separate and legal entities, however complete the control might be by one or more of the individuals over the company. It is not the same as its shareholders but is distinct from them. It is also not the same as its directors but is different from them. The Courts would not normally lift the veil to discover if the two limited companies are really identical and one unless it is a case of fraud. Where there are two separate genuine companies doing business side by side the fact that they had the same directors and the same shareholders does not make the same self. (1897) AC 22 and 1961 AC 12, and 1962 (2) WLR 1045, Rel. on. (1) Ordinarily the Courts are generally precluded from treating a company as the 'alias, agent, trustee or nominee' of its members. (2) The Courts will nevertheless do so if corporate personality is being used as a cloak for fraud or illegal conduct; (3) the Courts will also rend the veil where agency can be established in fact, either in respect of particular transactions or even as regards the whole of the company's business. (4) The Courts will be more inclined to hold that agency is established where the controlling shareholder is another company and general tendency is to ignore the separate legal entities of various companies within 'a group'. There are many cases and examples of lifting the veil in favour of the revenue. The persons veiled by the corporate personality are as a rule not themselves allowed to lift the veil which they have put on. AIR 1940 PC 183 and 1925 AC 619, Rel. on.

Assessee was a private limited company formerly carrying on under the name of P. and Co. On a certain date the name of P. and Co. was changed into that of assessee. The P. and Co. had transferred all its assets and liabilities to the assessee. On the same date another P. and Co. was incorporated. All the shares of the new P. and Co. were held by the assessee. ——S. 36 — Shareholders — Rights of — Individual membership rights and corporate membership right — Distinction and incidents — Right of member to exercise vote and to stand for election as Director — Nature of — Enforceability in civil Court — Principles — Memorandum and Articles of Association — Force of.

A shareholder in a company has got two kinds of right, namely, the individual membership right and the corporate membership right. As regards the latter right, the shareholder can assert it only in conformity with the decision of the majority of the shareholders. But the former, the individual membership right which is a right to maintain himself in full membership with all the rights and privileges appertaining to that status, necessarily implies that the shareholder can insist on the strict observance of legal rules, statutory provisions and provisions in the Memorandum and Articles of Association which cannot be waived by a bare majority of shareholders. The right of a shareholder to vote and his right to stand as a candidate for election as a Director of the Company are individual membership rights which can be asserted and enforced in his own capacity without the sanction of the majority and if that right is infringed an action by the member to vindicate or enforce his rights will be in the ordinary civil Court, such right not being a matter relating to the internal management of the Company. Where the candidature of a member for election as a Director in the place of a retiring director is disallowed by the chairman of the general meeting convened for election of directors on the ground that he was not qualified to stand as a candidate, the member who is aggrieved by the ruling of the chairman is entitled to bring a suit in the ordinary civil Court for a declaration that the proceedings of the meeting as regards the election of directors are null and void and for injunctions. Such a suit is maintainable and is not barred as relating to the internal management of the company. A limited company, whose object was to manage a tea estate and to trade in tea went into voluntary liquidation after selling its tea estate for a very high price, and a liquidator was appointed to distribute the assets which were far in excess of the liabilities, which were practically nil, there being no depositors; the only persons entitled to payment were the shareholders and the promoters of the company. The latter claimed from the liquidator certain special benefits which they claimed had been conferred on them under the Memorandum and Articles of Association.

One of the Articles provided that out of the profits of each year, after meeting certain specified expenditure, the directors should distribute the balance of profits to the shareholders rateably; another article provided that after the shareholders are paid their share amounts and interest the promoters are to be paid 6 per cent., of the profits of the annual profits in the following manner, namely, that the same is to be divided into 20 shares, that the manager and the secretaries, should each take two shares, and the balance 14 shares should be paid to the remaining promoters, each taking one share; and the remaining profits alone should be paid to the shareholders under the previous article:

Held: (1) that the profits contemplated could not include the capital assets of the company realised by the sale of the property of the company;

(2) that the assets realised should be distributed pro rata among all the shareholders in proportion to the amounts paid up on their shares; and

(3) that as far as the amounts in the hands of the liquidator were concerned, the promoters of the company were not entitled to any special privileges.

Held, further, that the price realised by the sale of the estate could not be regarded as profits of the business within the meaning of the Articles, but was capital, and the Articles did not also apply or govern the distribution after the company went into liquidation and was wound up. 1951 Ker LT 577: (1952) 22 Com Cas 99: ILR (1951) Trav Co 428: AIR 1952 Trav Co 192 (194), 195) (Pr 10) (DB).

The right of a shareholder to stand for election as a director of the Company is an individual membership right and gives rise to a justiciable issue. There are two kinds of rights for a member of the Company, one the individual membership right, and the other, the corporate membership rights. So far as the corporate membership rights are concerned a shareholder can assert those rights only in conformity with the decision of the majority of the shareholders. An individual membership right is a right to maintain himself in full membership with all the rights and privileges appertaining to that status. Further issue of capital — Offer of new shares to existing members first and on their refusal, to other persons approved by Directors—Resolution, whether offers new shares to 'public' — S. 3 (1) (iii) (c).

Where a Private Company, whose number of members was much below 50, passed a resolution increasing its capital, and offering new shares to its existing members first and on their declining to do so, the Directors were given liberty to dispose of those shares to persons they approved of, the offer in the resolution to persons other than the shareholders cannot be said to be one made to the 'public'.

The word 'calculated' in S. 67 (3) (a) suggests intention to accomplish a purpose.

Where it is alleged that the Managing Director of a Private Company had offered new shares to his kith and kin, the offer cannot be considered to be an invitation to public. An offer to buy shares made to an individual as such is not within the prohibition of the word 'public' as used in S. 67 of the Act. Where an article of association of the Company authorised the Directors to offer and issue further shares to the present shareholders in the same proportion in which the shareholders already hold the shares, the article cannot be read to mean that the Directors are prohibited from offering and issuing further shares to outsiders, if the present shareholders do not avail themselves of the offer. The article contains permission and not prohibition. (1959) 29 Com Cas 165: 61 Punj LR 14: AIR 1959 Punj 196 (198) (Pt A) (Prs 10, 13, 16).

Mere compliance with S. 70 will not take a company which has issued a prospectus, from the ambit of sub-s. (1) of S. 149 into the ambit of sub-s. (2) of that section. Ss. 70 and 149 deal with different matters. Section 70 relates to the allotment of shares or debentures while the object of S. 149 is obviously to secure a certain degree of substantiality in a company before it enters into engagements with outsiders or obtains money by borrowing. The words 'commence any business' in S. 149 are very wide and do not include the issue of a prospectus or the making of provisional contracts or the allotment of shares or the employment of experts or the taking of other preliminary steps. The compliance with S. 70 is only the completion of a preliminary step and it will not in any way exonerate a company from the necessity of complying with the provisions of sub-section (1) of S. 149 if it has issued prospectus inviting the public to subscribe for its shares: Palmer's Commentary on Company Precedents, 17th Edn., Vol. 1, Page 13, Rel. on. ILR (1963) 2 Ker 645: (1963) 33 Com Cas 813: (1963) 2 Com LJ 5: 1963 Ker LJ 460: 1963 Ker LT 517.

●——S. 75 (1)—Allotment — Meaning of — Re-issue of forfeited shares is not allotment — No question of filing any return arises in such case — Provision of S. 75 (5) is ex abundanti cautela — S. 75 (1) to be interpreted without reference to S. 75 (5).

In Company law, allotment means the appropriation, out of the previously unappropriated capital of a company, of a certain number of shares to a person. Till such allotment the shares do not exist as such. It is on allotment in this sense that the shares come into existence. It would be impossible to give to the word 'allotment' in S. 75 (1) a different meaning.

Articles 22, 24 and 27, of the Articles of Association of Calcutta Stock Exchange Association Ltd. dealing with forfeiture of shares are valid. The company could validly forfeit shares in terms of these articles. The reason why the forfeiture was valid was that on such forfeiture all that happened was that the right of the particular shareholder disappeared but the share considered as a unit of issued capital continued to exist and was kept in suspense until another shareholder was found for it. ILR (1950) 1 Cal 235 and AIR 1949 Cal 360, Rel. on.

When a share is forfeited and reissued it is not 'allotment' in the sense of appropriation of share out of the authorised and unappropriated capital so as to bring the shares into existence. Quite clearly, the view well accepted in Company Courts has been that issue of the forfeited shares was not allotment of them but only a sale. No question of filing any return under S. 75 (1) (a) in respect of such re-issue arises. (1885) 29 Ch D 421 and (1911) 1 Ch 73 and (1898) 68 LJ Ch 11 and (1881) 50 LJ Ch 827, Rel. on. The word 'allotment' in S. 75 (1) must be understood without reference to sub-section (5). It is safer to read sub-section (5) of S. 75 as having been enacted ex abundanti cautela, that is to say, to prevent any argument being raised that a return has to be filed of the re-issued shares forfeited for non-payment of calls. Sri Gopal Jalan & Co. v. Calcutta Stock Exchange Association Ltd., (1963) 33 Com Cas 862: (1963) 2 Com LJ 198: (1963) 2 Ker LR 261: (1963) 2 SCJ 505: (1963) 2 SCWR 295: (1964) 3 SCR 698: (1964) 1 SCA 371: 1964 SCD 253: AIR 1964 SC 250 (252. 253, 254) (Prs 8, 9, 10, 11).

——S. 75 (5) — Applicability — Forfeiture of shares for reasons other than non-payment of calls — Maxim "Expressio unius est Exclusio Alterius" — Limitations — Allotment — Meaning of — Re-issue after forfeiture — Effect of.

Shares forfeited for non-payment of calls should be excluded from the return of allotments by S. 75 (5). The reason is that the forfeiture for non-payment of calls is the only kind of forfeiture described in the Companies Act and in the model table for articles of Association known as Table "A". Section 75 (5) of the Companies Act can be read not as selecting one particular type for exclusion from the return but as excluding the only kind of forfeiture with which the statute was expressly dealing with. It therefore means exclusion of all kinds of forfeiture from the operation of S. 75. The doctrine of "Expressio Unius est Exclusio Alterius" cannot be applied to this case.

The return of allotment mentioned in S. 75 of the Companies Act of 1956 does not therefore cover the case of forfeiture where shares are re-issued after forfeiture. Section 75 (5) is a provision which does not occur in the corresponding S. 53 of the English Companies Act, 1948. It was for the first time introduced by S. 57 of the Amending Act of 1936, with the object of excluding forfeited share subsequently re-issued from the purview of allotment as sub-section (4) of S. 104 of the Act of 1913.

The words "Whenever a company having a share capital makes any allotment of its shares" in S. 75 (1) should be confined to the original or the first allotment or allotment of new shares made of the share capital offered to the public for subscription and should not be extended to include the case of subsequent re-issue of shares in lieu of forfeited shares although such re-issue may loosely be called allotment. The word "allotment" in S. 75 (1) means even subsequent allotments, provided they are allotments of new shares. In Company law allotment of shares means division of the entire share capital into definite shares, each of particular value and also of different classes and an assignment of such shares singly or numerously to different persons. The word "allotment", is inappropriate to describe the act of forfeiture of one or more existing individual shares and re-issue of such share or shares to other persons. ILR (1950) 1 Cal 235; 29 Ch D 421, Rel. on.

The new form prescribed for return of allotments under S. 75 (1) of Act of 1956 is one more argument why the return of allotments of shares contemplated therein does not call for return of re-issue of shares in place of forfeited shares. 61 Cal WN 448: (1957) 27 Com Cas 559: ILR (1958) 2 Cal 349: AIR 1957 Cal 438 (441, 442, 443) (Pt A) (Prs 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 22, 25).

——Ss. 75 and 645 — Companies Act (1913), S. 3 — Notification issued under S. 3 of Old Act conferring jurisdiction on District Court — No notification under new Act issued — Continuation of old notification — (General Clauses Act (1897), S. 24).

Under the Companies Act of 1913 the District Court had been invested with jurisdiction under S. 3 of that Act corresponding to S. 10 of the Companies Act of 1956. Under S. 10 (2) no notification has been issued by the Central Government after the coming into force of the new Act empowering the District Court to exercise jurisdiction under any of the sections of the new Act. The notification published under S. 3 of the old Act of 1913 does not fall within any of the categories enumerated in S. 645 of the new Act of 1956 and is not saved. The old Companies Act of 1913 and all cognate enactments have been repealed by the enactment of the present Act of 1956.

But Section 24 of the General Clauses Act continues the jurisdiction of the District Courts conferred on them by the order of the Government in 1947. Hence, by virtue of this section the notification of the Government in G. O. Ms. No. 654, Development, dated 20th February, 1947 should be deemed to continue in force even after the coming into force of the new Act of 1956. The District Court has, therefore, jurisdiction to entertain an application under S. 75 of the Act of 1956. (1959) 1 Mad LJ 292: (1959) 29 Com Cas 244: 72 MLW 459: 1959 Mad WN 429: AIR 1959 Mad 334 (335) (Pr 5).

Per Gajendragadkar and Wanchoo, JJ., Sarkar, J., contra:

A claim for commission out of the profits of a company is hit by S. 76 (1). Commission there contemplated is commission payable held out of capital as well as profits. If the claim exceeds the limit prescribed by S. 76 (1), it cannot be entertained. After the amendment of S. 76 (2) by Act (65 of 1960), the limit imposed on the payment of commission in respect of shares and debentures applies as such to commissions out of capitals as to those which are paid out of profits.

Section 76 applies even to agreements as to commission made prior to the Act coming into force, and does not prevail if it is inconsistent with the provisions of that section. AIR 1958 Bom 491, Affirmed.

Per Sarkar, J., contra.

Section 76 (1) has to be confined to payment of commission out of the capital moneys of the companies. The section does not affect a company's right to pay out of its profits any commission it likes for subscribing for shares in it. Therefore, agreements for payment of commission for subscribing for shares in a company out of its profits were not affected by S. 76 (1) of the Act of 1956. Madanlal Fakir Chand Dudhediva v. ——S. 76 (1) — Interpretation of — Previous state of law or English law and English decisions — Value of.

Where there is a positive enactment the proper course is to examine the language of that statute and to ascertain its proper meaning. AIR 1928 PC 2, Rel. on.

The mischief intended to be checked by the Indian Act of 1956 being different from the one intended to be controlled by the English Acts, neither the legislative history of England nor the English decisions would be helpful to construe its provisions.

Further, the Act of 1956 was enacted to help the development of companies in this country and put down abuses. Thus the mischiefs which were sought to be avoided by the legislatures in England and India being not quite the same, the Courts must upon a question of construing the Indian Act, look to the language of the said Act and to the intention of the legislators who passed that Act. 60 Bom LR 254: ILR (1958) Bom 250: (1958) 28 Com Cas 312: AIR 1958 Bom 491 (494, 495, 497) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 8, 15) (DB).

——S. 76 (1) — Scope of — Duty of Court.

It is a settled rule of construction that the intention of the Legislature must be gathered from the words used by the Legislature. If the words, which are a medium of expressing intention, fall short of declaring the intention, it is for the Legislature to amend the language of the section. So far as the Courts are concerned, where the words are clear and precise, they must be given their natural meaning.

Upon the language of sub-section (1) of S. 76 which is very clear, there is no doubt, that the sub-section is both an enabling and a restrictive provision. Upon a natural construction of the language of S. 76 (1) (b) (ii) it must be held that the payment of commission on shares and debentures might proceed from any source, capital monies or profit, but it is to be restricted up to a certain percentage, the percentage being different in the case of shares and debentures. 60 Bom LR 254: (1958) 28 Com Cas 312: ILR (1958) Bom 250: AIR 1958 Bom 491 (495) (Pt B) (Prs 10, 11) (DB).

——Ss. 76 (1), 78 (2) and 309 (6) — Commission — Meaning of.

The word 'commission' as used in S. 76 (1) and in other provisions of the Act, refers to a payment of money, not only out of the capital of a company, but from its profit as well. The contention, that the word 'commission' as used in the Act of 1956 has a specialised legal meaning and that it means an amount of money payable only from the capital is not tenable. 60 Bom LR 254: (1958) 28 Com Cas 312: ILR (1958) Bom 250: AIR 1958 Bom 491 (497) (Pt D) (Pr 16) (DB).

——Ss. 76 (1) and 9 — Applicability — Agreement to pay commission at certain rate before Act — Validity.

By an agreement, a company agreed to pay some of its promoters a sum equal to $12^1/_2$ per cent of its net profits. Provisions for this was also made in Art. 3 of the Articles of Association. The agreement was subsequently modified and by another agreement, the promotors reduced the rate of promotor's commission to $6^1/_4$ per cent. On coming into force of the Companies Act, 1956, the company informed the promotors that the agreement was illegal and that the commission could not be paid. The company also proposed to get Art. 3 deleted from the Articles of Association. The promotors sued the company for a declaration that the agreement between the parties was a valid and legal agreement and for an injunction to restrain the company from passing a resolution deleting Art. 3.

Held, that under S. 9, the provisions of the Act shall have effect, notwithstanding the fact that the agreements were executed before the coming into force of this Act and that the plaintiffs would not be entitled to receive any commission from the company in contravention of sub-cl. (ii) of Cl. (b) of sub-section (1) of S. 76, read with S. 9 of the Act. 60 Bom LR 254: (1958) 28 Com Cas 312: ILR (1958) Bom 250: AIR 1958 Bom 491 (497, 498) (Pt E) (Pr 17) (DB).

——S. 76 (1) — Debentures — If capital — (Capital Issues (Continuance of Control) Act (1947), S. 2).

The definition of 'securities' and of the expression 'issue of capital' as contained in S. 2 of the Capital Issues (Continuance of Control) Act would not govern the meaning of the term 'debenture' as it occurs in the Companies Act, 1956. So far as the latter Act is concerned, 'Debenture' is an instrument under seal evidencing a debt. It is not capital. The essence of a debenture is originally an admission of indebtedness and that is its essential characteristic, the central idea.

It is also clear that a debenture being an instrument evidencing a debt, discount on it is not a payment out of capital. 60 Bom LR 254: (1958) 28 Com Cas 312: ILR (1958) Bom 250: AIR 1958 Bom 491 (496, 498) (Pt F) (Prs 13, 18) (DB).

——Ss. 77 and 41 — Rule that company cannot be member of itself and rule prohibiting purchase by company of its own shares — Distinction — Companies Act (1913), S. 54-A.

A limited company cannot be a member of itself. It is inconsistent with the essential nature of a Company that it should be a member of itself to the effect of becoming a debtor to itself for calls or being placed in the list of contributories in its own liquidation. This rule is distinct from the rule which prohibits the purchase by a company of its own shares or a reduction of capital in a manner not sanctioned by the Companies Act. Without violating this rule, a trustee for a Company may be a member of this Company and may acquire and hold the share of the Company in trust for the Company. If the acquisition of shares by the trustee is in substance purchase of its own shares by the Company involving illegal reduction of capital, the transaction would be invalid on the ground that it amounts to illegal reduction of capital and infringes S. 54-A of the Indian Companies Act and not on the ground that the trustee cannot be a member of the Company. ILR (1958) 1 Cal 89: AIR 1957 Cal 293 (308) (Pt L) (Pr 79) (DB).

——S. 78 — Dividend — Share premiums — Credited to company's capital reserve — Distribution as dividend before 1st April, 1956 — Dividend, whether out of profit — Whether taxable as dividend in shareholder's hands — Words and Phrases — 'Profits' — Indian Income-tax Act 1922, S. 2 (6-A) — Companies Act, 1913 (7 of 1913), Table A, Regulation 97.

A company issued shares at a premium in 1945. The share premiums received by the company were held in a separate reserve called 'capital reserve'. In the year 1953, the company declared a dividend out of this capital reserve. The assessee, a shareholder of the company, received Rs. 50,787 under the said declaration. The amount was charged to income-tax in the shareholder's hands as 'dividend' for the assessment years 1954-55. The assessment was sustained by the Appellate Tribunal, whose decision was upheld by the High Court on reference. On appeal to the Supreme Court by Special Leave, the assessee contended that the amount was not dividend since it was not distributable out of profits within the meaning of Regulation 97 of Table A of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, that it was a distribution out of the capital gains of the company and hence exempt and that the share premium amounts in the capital reserve of the company could not, under S. 78 of the Companies Act, 1956, be distributed as dividends.

Held, that before the commencement of the Companies Act, 1956, premiums received on the issue of shares were profits available for distribution. The same connotation should be attached to the word 'profits' in Regulation 97 of Table A of the Companies Act, 1913. S. 78 of the Companies Act, 1956 did not in any way change the taxability of a dividend declared out of premiums on shares received by a company before the said Act came into force. The company had already dealt with the premium in such a way that they had ceased to remain as an identifiable part of the company's reserves. Hence the premiums were to be disregarded under S. 78 (3) of the Companies Act for the creation of the share premium account. If this was so the premiums which had already been distributated could not be invested with the character of capital in the hands of the distributing company. ——S. 81 (1) (c) — Renunciation of offer of share in favour of nominee — Rights of nominee — Nominee for valuable consideration without notice — When entitled to property in shares — (Obiter).

Obiter.— When under S. 81 (1) (c) the offeree of new shares exercises his right to renounce the shares offered to him in favour of any other person, the nominee gets a right to accept the offer and complete the contract. Obviously the nominee gets an enforceable right to compel the issue of shares. This is a chose in action and is capable of being sold or dealt with. If the nominee is a nominee for valuable consideration, bona fide without notice of a breach of trust he would have a higher right than an equitable right. Such a purchaser for valuable consideration who obtains a legal estate at the time of his purchase without notice of a prior equitable right is entitled to priority in equity as well as at law.

Held, on facts, that if the nominees wanted to succeed on the ground that they were bona fide purchasers for value, without notice, the price that they paid or the consideration that passed from them should have been specifically averred in their affidavit or in the affidavit of their seller. In the absence of such material averments their plea could not be entertained. 66 Cal WN 1049: (1963) 33 Com Cas 102.

——S. 81 — Increase in capital — Offer of shares how to be made — Shares sold by member — Property in shares passing to transferee — Member not entitled to accept offer of further shares — Exercise of right of renunciation by him is invalid.

Previously where increase of capital was proposed by issue of further shares, such shares had first to be offered to the 'members'. Now the legislature prescribes that the further shares envisaged by S. 81 shall be offered to the 'persons' who at the date of the offer are 'holders' of these equity shares of the company and unless the articles otherwise provide, the offer shall be deemed to include a right exerciable by the 'person' concerned to renounce the shares offered to him or any of them in favour of any other 'person'. The 'persons' who are entitled to receive this offer are not necessarily 'members' of the company. Thus a person whose name is on the register may have sold his shares and from the moment his property in the shares has passed to his purchaser he ceases to be a 'holder' of those shares. Under S. 81 such a person is not entitled to accept offers of new shares or to exercise any right of renunciation.

A's shares were purchased by B in June, 1960. The company passed its resolution for increase of share capital on the 15th October, 1960. On January 13, 1961 a resolution was passed under S. 81. The proposal was that two shares would be allotted for every three shares. The letters of Allotment and Renunciation were sent out by the company on the 31st January, 1961 to A offering two shares for every three shares held as on the 13th January, 1961. A executed letters of renunciation in favour of C and D. In an application by B for declaring his right to the further shares—

Held, that as at the date of the offer by the Company the 'holder' of the equity shares in question was B and not A, A had no right either to accept the offer of new shares or to execute letters of renunciation in favour of C and D; such acceptance and renunciation by A was, therefore, invalid and inoperative and was of no effect, and C and D acquired no rights whatsoever by virtue of such renunciation. 66 Cal WN 1049: (1963) 33 Com Cas 102.

——S. 81 — Further issue of capital — Powers of Directors — Limitations — Power of company in general meeting to give directions to contrary.

In the absence of statutory restrictions the Directors have power to issue new shares up to the limit of the authorised capital in such manner as they think fit. S. 81 is intended to fetter this power of the Directors where no direction is given on this matter by the company in the general meeing. The section preserves the power of the company in a general meeting to give directions to the contrary. Where the company in a general meeting has given clear directions to the contrary, allotment of new ordinary shares in accordance with those directions to the Managing Agents and the disposal of other ordinary shares in such manner as the Directors deem fit cannot be said to be in contravention of S. 81. (1960) 30 Com Cas 367: 64 Cal WN 458: AIR 1960 Cal 637 (641) (Pt D) (Pr 15) (DB).

——S. 81 (1) (a) — Scope.

The plain meaning of the section is that if the company at a general meeting resolves that the newly issued shares should be allotted to persons other than the equity shareholders, such decision will prevail and will not be open to any question. But in the absence of any specific direction or decision to the contrary the terms of the section have to be followed. The words 'contrary to' in sub-s. (1) of S. 81 mean contrary to what is laid down in the section. (1958) 62 Cal WN 836: (1959) 29 Com Cas 46: AIR 1959 Cal 679 (680, 681, 682) (Pt D) (Prs 4, 5, 6, 8).

——Ss. 81, 106 and 391 — Reduction of capital part of scheme of organisation — 'Modification of rights' clause in Articles of Association — Scope — Separate applications for reduction and scheme — Necessity.

Where the reduction of capital sought is part of a scheme of reorgnaization of the share capital and the capital structure is being reorganized, it is immaterial whether the whole paid up capital is lost or not. The matter of reduction of capital and that of the sanction of the scheme of reorganization are part of one arrangement of scheme. Moreover there is no hard and fast rule that one application has to be made for sanction of the scheme and for confirmation of the reduction if they are to be regarded as integral part of one arrangement. In some cases, two separate applications are made to make the proceeding less cumbrous.

It is not necessary to have recourse to S. 106 or the 'modification of rights' clause contained in the Company's Articles of Association, when the modification or variation of the rights of shareholders is made as part of a scheme of arrangement with the intervention of the Court under S. 391. Where a reduction of capital is based on ground that capital has been lost, it is always prudent to proceed on evidence.

The fact that the successive balance sheets of the Company were duly placed and passed without objection at the annual general meeting is sufficient proof of such loss to justify an order of reduction of the capital being made.

Variation, which merely affects the enjoyment of the right does not require to be dealt with under S. 106. There is a distinction between affecting the enjoyment of the rights and affecting the rights. (1958) 62 Cal WN 889: (1959) 29 Com Cas 144: AIR 1959 Cal 672 (674, 675, 676, 677) (Pt A) (Prs 5, 7, 14, 15, 17, 22).

——S. 81 — Scope — Issue of new shares for allotment to managing agents and outsiders without reference to exising equity shareholders — Validity.

Under S. 81 (a), if the company at a general meeting resolves that the newly issued shares can be allotted to persons other than the equity shareholders, such decision will prevail and will be a valid decision. But in the absence of any specific direction or decision the terms of the section will be followed. The words 'contrary to' mean contrary to what is laid down in the section.

——S. 81 — Conditions for applicability of S. 81 — Private company converted into public company — Old shareholders made shareholders of public company — First issue of new shares after company became public — S. 81 is attracted — Direction to contrary — Whether can exclude existing shareholders. AIR 1962 Orissa 202 Reversed.

It is clear from S. 81 that the existing equity shareholders have the pre-emptive right to the issue of new shares. But this pre-emptive right is subject to the overriding condition that any direction to the contrary which may be given by the company in General Meeting and to the further condition that it is applicable only to allotment subsequent to the first allotment of shares.

Where a private company was converted into a public company and the shareholders of the private company became the shareholders of the public company, it follows as a matter of necessary logic that the shares issued by the Company when it was a private Company became the shares issued by the public Company by operation of law. So, though in point of fact certain new shares were the first issue of the company after it became public, it cannot be treated as the first allotment of shares of the public company in the eye of law but must be treated as shares issued subsequent to the first allotment, and consequently direction to the contrary can be given in the general meeting under S. 81.

The language of S. 81 is plain and the powers given to the company in general meeting to give directions to the contrary are wide and unrestricted and they cannot be restricted only to a decision as to whether the new shares should be allotted to the equity shareholders alone or in between the two classes of shares, equity and preference. Held, that the validity of the resolutions could not be challenged on the ground that they could not be given effect to. The second resolution clearly included a group of persons who did not come within the purview of the existing shareholders and the public. Both resolutions together would mean that further shares would be issued to a select and small circle of friends, customers or connections. Doubtless, small circle of friends or customers or connections were members of the public. But by the express resolutions they were excluded out of the public as referred to in the resolution. 'To the public' also might mean no offer to be made by advertisement or circular to the general public. (1964) 1 Comp LJ 117: AIR 1963 Orissa 189 (206) (Pt J) (Pr 25) (DB).

——Ss. 81 and 397 — Allotment of new shares whether in best interest of company — Allotment to friends of directors controlling majority — Vavidity.

Even if the allottees of new shares privately by the directors might exercise their voting power in support of the majority group, it would not necessarily establish, without proof of further facts, that they are under the control of the majority group.

Where the new shares were to be issued privately in the best interest of the company on the sole direction of the Directors, according to the resolutions of the company, the fact that they were allotted to friends, having independent status, of the directors who controlled the majority shares after the allottees were intimated about the new issue of shares, by itself, does not establish that they were under the control of the majority group. Though, if the voting powers of those allottees could be utilised by the majority group, the fact that a large percentage of the voting power (75 per cent in this case) would concentrate in their hands, by itself does not establish that there is combination. The fact that at the time of hearing of the petition under Ss. 397 and 398, the allottees and their subsequent transferees support the case of the Company does not in any way advance the petitioner's case. They are bound to support the company if they are satisfied that it is being properly managed.

Merely because a suit challenging the validity of the resolution regarding allotment of new shares had been filed, it cannot be expected that it was the duty of the Company not to allot shares but to wait till the disposal of the litigation. (1964) 1 Comp LJ 117: AIR 1963 Orissa 189 (207) (Pt K) (Prs 28, 30) (DB).

——S. 81 — Prior to its amendment in 1960 — Scope and object — Further issue of share capital — Powers of directors — Right of existing members to obtain further shares — 'Subject to any direction to the contrary', meaning of.

The object of S. 81 is to prevent discrimination amongst shareholders and prevent the directors from offering shares to outsiders before they are offered to the shareholders; so long as these two requirements are complied with, the action of the directors in selecting the time when they will issue the shares as also the proportion in which they should be issued is a matter left to their discretion; this is of course subject to the general exception that the directors are not to act against the interest of the Company or mala fide; the statutory right of the existing shareholders to acquire the new shares continue till the time limited has expired and that right can only be lost if a shareholder declines to accept the shares prior to the expiry of the time-limit; the section limits the powers of directors to dispose of the further issue of capital in any manner that they may think most beneficial to the Company; they are under a mandate to offer these in the first instance to the members in proportion to the existing shares held by them; in other words, a member becomes entitled under the provisions of the section by reason of his being the holder of a certain number of shares in the company, to obtain shares in the further issue of capital as of right.

That apart, S. 81 does not contemplate total exclusion of the existing shareholders from participating in the allotment of new shares; the clause 'subject to any directions to the contrary' can only refer to the manner and proportion in which the shares have to be offered to the existing shareholders; it cannot mean any direction not to offer at all to the existing shareholders. AIR 1962 Orissa 202 (218) (Pt E) (Pr 39).

Held on the facts of the case and under R. 94-B of the Defence of Travancore Rules (i) that the word 'issued' was used in the sense in which it is used in mercantile language; and it was used in the same sense in the case of all the four categories of instruments; since in the case of (i) shares, stocks or bonds and (ii) debentures, it was not used in the sense of 'executed' but in the sense of put 'into the money market' it must be in the same sense that it was used in relation to the third and fourth categories, viz., (iii) other instruments creating a charge or lien, on the assets of the company and (iv) instruments acknowledging loan to, or indebtedness of, the company; (ii) that according to the rule of ejusdem generis, the expression 'other instruments' in the rule denoted instruments of the same kind as shares and debentures and not ordinary hypothecation bonds or mortgages.

Where the managing director and secretary of a company executed a hypothecation bond on behalf of the company in favour of the appellant.

Held, that R. 94-B, Defence of Travancore Rules only prohibited the issuing of instruments creating a charge or lien on the assets of the company; it did not prohibit the company from borrowing money without creating a charge or a lien on its assets; that therefore, illegality could attach only to the creation of charge on the assets of the company and not to the borrowing of money.

Where a lease deed was executed by the company in favour of a lessee and the lessee was in charge of the properties, and the charge under the hypothecation, was not registered as required by Section 142 of the Travancore Companies Act within the prescribed time:

Held, that the charge created under the hypothecation bond could not affect the rights of the lessee under the lease deed. (Case Law referred).

Transfer of shares after dividend declared, does not, as against the company, carry the dividend. even where the transferee has expressly bought cum div.; but as between a buyer and seller of shares, the buyer is entitled to all dividends declared after the date of the contract for sale, unless otherwise arranged.

On 28-9-1953, an agreement was entered into between the liquidators and H Company for the sale of the properties. Out of the consideration amount a certain sum were to be paid in cash and the balance, in 1936 shares. Clauses 5 and 6 of the agreement, provided that C, the managing agents of H Company would purchase the shares issued by H Company at the rate of Rs. 500 per share within five months from the date of the execution of the sale deed from such contributories as intended to cash the said shares. The Liquidators were entitled under Cl. 6 to submit up to 700 shares allotted to them by the H Company to C.

The sale deed was actually executed on 18th April, 1954, and the 5 months period provided in Cl. 5 expired on 18th September, 1954.

The Liquidators approached C on 17th September, 1954, asking him to take delivery of the 1936 shares, under Cl. 5 of the agreement and called upon C to fulfil his obligation under the agreement. C however, contended that he was not bound to accept the same.

Having failed in their attempts to induce C to purchase the shares, the liquidators tried to induce one A to purchase those 1936 shares.

On 27th July, 1955, A addressed a letter to the Liquidators offering to purchase the said 1936 shares at Rs. 500 per share. C also about the same time thought of waiving the objections which he had raised to the purported tender by the Liquidators on 17th September, 1954, and approached one of the Liquidators, offering to take the said 1936 shares.

The Liquidators submitted both the offers of C and A for sanction by the Court.

The District Judge, after hearing the arguments advanced before him, by the Liquidators as well as C and A, sanctioned the offer of C. He negatived the contention that C had committed a breach of the agreement observing that the tender purporting to have been made by the Liquidators on 17th September, 1954, was not a valid tender. He, therefore, ordered that the offer of C be accepted by the Liquidators and as the full price had already been paid by him the 1936 shares be delivered to him or his duly authorised agent together with the necessary transfer forms duly signed.

In appeal the High Court set aside the order of the District Judge and ordered that the said shares should be sold in the open market.

Held on appeal to the Supreme Court, (i) that the Liquidators, on 17th September, 1954, did not make a valid tender of the 1936 shares to C and C was well within his rights in refusing to accept the same. The District Judge was right in his appreciation of the situation, and the High Court's conclusion that C committed a breach of the agreement was clearly erroneous.

(ii) On a true construction of Cls. (5) and (6) of the agreement C had no right to acquire these shares from the contributories or the Liquidators. The contributories and the Liquidators were not bound to offer any portion of these shares to him and if they wanted to sell these shares to other parties they would have been entitled to do so. Clauses (5) and (6) of the agreement, however, were beneficial to the contributories and the Liquidators, and the Liquidators had obtained from C an undertaking that, if the contributories offered their shares to C within five months of the execution of the sale deed and likewise they also submitted to him 700 out of these 1936 shares at any time thereafter, C would pay to them the price of these shares at the rate of Rs. 500 per share. In purporting to make the tender, the Liquidators wanted to secure a definite advantage to themselves and the contributories by trying to hold C to his obligation to pay Rs. 500 per share.

(iii) Even though both the offers of C and A were placed before the Court each offering no more than Rs. 500 per share for the purchase of the whole lot of 1936 shares, the District Judge was perfectly right in the exercise of his discretion in sanctioning the offer of C who was fulfilling his obligation under the agreement. There was, therefore, no erroneous exercise of discretion by the District Judge in favour of C.

(iv) There was also no question of giving any notice to the contributories in the matter of the application by the Liquidator.

The District Judge was right in the circumstances of the case in considering the only two offers which were submitted before him and exercising his discretion and giving the sanction in favour of C as he did.

(v) Even though an appeal is in the nature of a rehearing, it could be only for moulding the relief to be granted in the appeal. AIR 1941 FC 5, Rel. on.

(vi) Unless and until the shares were transferred in the name of C in the register of shareholders of the Company before the date of the Annual General Meeting C would not have been entitled to the dividends on these 1936 shares. The position, however, between the Liquidators and C was quite different. Even though C could not under those circumstances claim the dividend from the Company, as between the Liquidators and C, C would be entitled to the dividend and the Liquidators, even though they received the dividend from the Company by virtue of their having been shown as shareholders in the register of shareholders of the Company, would be bound, once the contract of sale had been entered into between them and C, to hand over the said dividend to C.

(vii) As, therefore, the discretion of the District Judge was not, on the facts and circumstances as they then stood, erroneously exercised and as there was also no prejudice to the interests of the contributories, the High Court was not justified in interfering with the discretion exercised by the District Judge and setting aside the order of the District Judge and directing a sale of these 1936 shares by a public auction as it did. ——S. 82 — Transfer of share — Rights of shareholders — Restriction by Articles — Nature of.

Section 82 clearly provides that shares in a company shall be capable of being transferred in the manner provided by the articles of the company, and it is well settled that unless the articles otherwise provide, a shareholder has a free right to transfer his shares to whom he chooses. It is not necessary to seek in the articles for a power to transfer for the Act gives that. It is only necessary to look to the articles to ascertain the mode of transfer and the restrictions upon it. 1957 Nag LJ 603: 60 Bom LR 97: (1958) 28 Com Cas 137: AIR 1958 Bom 247 (249) (Pt B) (Pr 10).

——Ss. 82, 111 and 155, Reg. 21 of Table A in Sch. 1 — Rectification Register — Application by transferee of shares — Transferor whether necessary party — Powers of Court — Whether dependent on order passed by Central Government in appeal from refusal of company to register — Right to transfer shares — Scope of power — Sending deeds and certificates by registered post in lieu of deposit of the documents—Effect.

The powers of the Court under S. 155 of the Companies Act, 1956, to order rectification of the register of members of a company are not dependent upon S. 111 or any order given by the Central Government thereunder. On the contrary, S. 155 is the controlling section and gives the Court an overriding power notwithstanding any previous order of the Central Government under S. 111 made on an appeal from the refusal of a company to register a transfer of shares. Where the transferee of shares, upon the company refusing to register the transfer of shares, makes an application to the Court under S. 155 for an order for rectification of the register of members, the transferor is not a necessary party. A bare denial by a company of the transfer of shares which the company has refused to register, is not sufficient to oust the summary jurisdiction of the Court under S. 155. A member of a company has, under S. 82 of the Companies Act, 1956, a free right to transfer his shares unless the articles of the company otherwise provide. Where the articles of a company, in terms identical with regulation 21 of Table A of the Act, only reserve the right to decline to register the transfer of shares which are not fully paid up, the company has no power to refuse registration of a transfer of shares which are fully paid up. The fact that consideration for the transfer of the shares of a company has not passed as stated in the transfer deed or that the transfer deed was executed some days after the transfer, does not justify the refusal on the part of the company to register the transfer.

Where the articles of a company require that the instrument of transfer and other documents should be deposited with the company for registration of a transfer, sending the instrument of transfer and other documents by registered post for the registration of the transfer is sufficient compliance with the requirement of the articles. ——Ss. 87 to 90 — Scope and object — Shares of companies existing at date of commencement of Act carrying voting rights not in conformity with those prescribed by S. 87 — Voting rights to be brought in conformity with S. 87 within one year from commencement of Act — S. 89 applies to all classes of shares whether preference shares or equity shares — Interpretation of statutes.

The scheme of the Companies Act 1956, is that there should be only two kinds of share capital namely, preference share capital and equity share capital and it is in relation to these two kinds of share capital that voting rights are prescribed by Ss. 87 to 90.

The position that prevailed prior to the commencement of the Companies Act, 1956, was that a company could make any provision it liked in the Articles of Association regarding voting rights in respect of various classes of shares in the share capital of the Company. Persons who had contributed less to the paid up capital of the Company could enjoy greater voting rights than those who had contributed more and consequently control the affairs of the company even though their contribution to the paid up capital of the company was less than that of the other. It was in order to cure this mischief that Ss. 87 to 90 were introduced in the Companies Act, 1956. These sections were enacted with the object of removing the inequality in the voting rights attaching to different classes of shares. This object has been achieved by the Legislature by making the total paid up equity capital of the Company as the pivot round which the structure of voting rights should be centred. Section 87 removes the inequality in voting rights not only as between members holding equity share capital, i.e., share capital other than preference share capital inter se but also as between members holding equity share capital and member holding preference share capital. The new structure of voting rights prescribed by S. 87 would not, by virtue of the express provisions of S. 90 apply to the shares issued before the commencement of the Companies Act, 1956, save to the extent provided in Section 89.

Section 88 in express terms prohibits the issue of equity shares with disproportionate voting rights. It is only if the voting rights attached to the existing equity shares are proportionately uniform that it would be possible to give effect to Section 88.

The net effect of the provisions of Ss. 87 to 89 is that if there are at the commencement of the Companies Act 1956, any shares of any existing company which carry voting rights in excess of voting rights attaching under S. 87 (1) to equity shares in respect of which the same amount of capital has been paid up, the provisions of S. 87 would not immediately apply to such shares, but the company would have a period of one year within which to reduce the voting rights of such shares so as to bring them into conformity with the structure of voting rights prescribed by S. 87.

Section 89 (1) applies to all classes of shares whether they are called ordinary shares or preference shares or deferred shares or founders shares or any other class of shares. The words "the voting rights attaching under sub-section (1) of S. 87 to equity shares in respect of which the same amount of capital has been paid up" in S. 89 (1) are not intended to bring out any contradistinction between equity shares and other shares, but they merely provide a yard stick with reference to which it must be determined in the case of all shares, be they equity shares or preference shares, whether their voting rights are disproportionately excessive and if such voting rights are, tested by this yard stick, disproportionately excessive, they have to be reduced and brought into conformity with the standards provided by this yard stick, which is nothing more than the requirement of S. 87.

The marginal note to S. 89 clearly indicates that the object and purpose of the section is to effect termination of disproportionately excessive voting rights in existing companies. There are no words in the marginal note limiting the object and purpose of the section to termination of disproportionately excessive voting rights only in respect of preference shares. The marginal note also thus indicates that S. 89 (1) applies to all existing shares whether they be preference shares or equity shares.

The test is whether the voting rights of the shares are in the same proportion as the capital paid up in respect of the shares bears to the total paid up equity capital of the company, no matter what the capital paid up in respect of the shares is. If the capital paid up in respect of the shares is the same, the voting rights must equally be the same for otherwise the proportion would be violated. If the capital paid up in respect of the shares is different, the voting rights must equally be different in the same proportion. Sections 87 to 90 do not require as a condition of their applicability that there should be shares on which different amounts of capital have been paid up.

Held, that as under the old articles of association of the company each member had one vote irrespective of the number of shares held by him the voting rights were clearly in excess of those prescribed by S. 87 (1) and the company was bound to bring the voting rights in accordance with S. 87 (1) within the period of one year from the commencement of the Act. The period of one year expired on 1st April, 1957 and each member of the company was, therefore, from and after that date, not entitled to exercise voting rights in respect of the shares held by him in accordance with the old Articles of Association but bound to exercise the voting rights in proportion to his share of the paid up capital of the Company. (1962) 3 Guj LR 715: (1962) 32 Com Cas 1162: AIR 1963 Guj 209 (213 to 221) (Prs 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14).

ment — Finality of the order — No power of revocation of the order of exemption — Interpretation of statutes — Power to pass an order — It includes the power to vary, rescind — Context of particular provision, scheme and object of the Act, relevant factors — Applicability of the General Clauses Act.

The company was a joint stock company, registered on 5th May, 1947, under the Act of 1913, with the authorised capital of Rs. 10 lakhs, divided into 38,000 ordinary shares of Rs. 25 each and 25,000 deferred shares of Rs. 2 each. The issued and subscribed capital was Rs. 7,88,175 divided into 31,527 ordinary shares of Rs. 25 each and Rs. 50,000 divided into 25,000 deferred shares of Rs. 2 each. The company adopted the Table A in the First Schedule to the Act of 1913, with the result the ordinary shareholders and the deferred shareholders had equal voting rights, one vote per each share. On the coming into force of the Act of 1956, the company was exempted by an order made by the Central Government under S. 89 (4) of the Act from complying with the statutory requirement of reducing the disproportionate voting rights of the deferred shareholders for a period of three months from 1st April, 1957. Subsequently an order of exemption was again passed without specifying any time-limit. In 1962 the Central Government purported to rescind the order of exemption. The company applied to the High Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution to quash the said order of revocation of exemption.

Held, that the powers of Central Government under S. 89 (4) of the Act to exempt the company from complying with the statutory obligation of reducing the disproportionate voting rights of the shareholders, would be exercised once and finally only. There was no right of revocation of the exemption once granted. The rule of construction that a power to issue an order includes the power to revoke as contained in S. 21 of the General Clauses Act was not applicable to the provisions contained in S. 89 (4) of the Act. The intention of the Legislature was that the disproportion as regards the voting power existing previously must not continue. Under S. 90 of the Act, voting rights of the deferred shareholders of the previously existing companies were liable to be altered in the only prescribed manner as laid down in S. 89 of the Act. Section 89 (1) and (3) created fresh obligations and could not be termed as merely machinery sections. The obligations cast on companies under S. 89 (1) and (3) could be carried out only once and relate to the circumstances of the company as at the commencement of the Act. The power of exemption under S. 89 (4) must of necessity relate to the obligations mentioned in sub-sections (1), (2) and (3) and if exemption was granted in connection with these obligations at any time, it was difficult to see what other obligations could thereafter survive. The nature of the obligations being of this kind the scheme of the S. 89 was such that an exemption once granted could not be withdrawn at any stage whatsoever. This exemption has no relevance to the period of one year mentioned in S. 89 (1).

Section 21 of the General Clause Act was not applicable to sustain the power of revocation of the order of exemption passed under S. 89 (4) of the Act. In the context of the provisions, objects and scheme of the Act relating to the method of alteration of memorandum and articles of association, protection of voting rights, general meetings, appointment of directors, right of sale of shares, and registration of transfer of shares, to hold that the power of exemption was revocable under S. 21 of the General Clauses Act, would be entirely contrary and repugnant to the whole scheme of the Act.

A petition under Art. 226 of the Constitution at the instance of the company would lie since the question of jurisdiction of the Central Government to pass an order of revocation of exemption under S. 89(4) was involved. ——S. 100 — Modes of reduction of capital — (Companies Act (1913), S. 55).

Section 55 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, corresponding to S. 100 of the Indian Companies Act, 1956, mentions three modes of reduction of capital, namely, (1) extension or reduction of the liability on any of the shares in respect of share capital not paid up, (2) cancellation of any paid up share capital, and (3) paying off any paid up share capital. An illustration of the first mode of reduction of capital is surrender of a partly paid up share not liable to forfeiture in consideration of release by the Company of the surrender from further liability in respect of the shares. Illustrations of the third mode of reduction of capital are:—

(1) Payment of dividend out of paid up share capital;

(2) Purchase by the company of its own shares. The last matter is now the subject-matter of express legislative enactment. ILR (1958) 1 Cal 80: (S) AIR 1957 Cal 293 (307, 308) (Pt K) (Pr 76) (DB).

——Ss. 100, 102 — Reduction of capital — Power of company — Confirmation by Court — Discretion — Principles — Onus of proof.

A company has power to reduce the capital subject to confirmation by the Court and cannot return the capital to members. The company is to determine the extent, the mode and incidence of the reduction. It is the duty of the Court to protect the interest of minority shareholders and creditors. Court will also consider whether the sanction ought to be refused out of regard to the interest of members of the public induced to take shares. Subject to the Court's discretion any loss on the sanction of reduction is to be borne among the members in such manner as a loss in respect of capital is to be borne under the constitution of the company, and, if money is to be returned, it is to be returned in the same way as capital is returnable. The company however is not bound to satisfy the Court that the proposals are not unfair, it is for the objectors to disclose such matters as will stand in the way of the Court's approval. 73 Mad LW 103: AIR 1960 Mad 537 (538, 539, 540) (Pt A) (Prs 8, 13, 14).

——S. 100 — 'Capital' — Meaning of.

The word 'capital' involved in 'reduction of capital' includes nominal share capital, whether issued or unissued and if issued, whether fully paid or not, and 'share' includes 'stock', so that a company may reduce its stock. Every reduction of capital must reduce the nominal capital, and a reduction of unissued capital, may be combined with a reduction of issued capital, while issued capital may be reduced, whether fully paid or not. 73 Mad LW 103: AIR 1960 Mad 537 (538) (Pt B) (Pr 5).

SECTION 106.

——Ss. 106 and 391 — Scheme of arrangement involving reduction of capital and alteration of rights of preference shareholders — Absence of approval of scheme by shareholders — Validity of scheme — Duty of Court.

The special rights attached to a class of shares may lawfully be altered by the machinery of a scheme of arrangement and under S. 391, the Court may sanction a scheme which involves alteration of class rights. The word, 'arrangement', in S. 391 includes reorganisation of the share capital of the company by the consolidation of shares of different classes or by the division of shares into shares of different classes or by both those methods. Considering that the majority required by S. 391 (2) is less than the majority required by the provision referred to in S. 106, the Court is bound to scrutinise this scheme of arrangement involving alteration of rights of shareholders. But the absence of approval of the scheme by the majority required in S. 106 is no bar to the sanction of the scheme of arrangement under S. 391.

A provision in the articles of association of a company authorising the variation of the rights attached to any class of shares with the sanction of the holders of not less than three-fourths of the issued shares of that class is lawful and is sanctioned by S. 106. Where such a provision explicitly states that it does not derogate from any other power which the company would have had if it had been omitted, a scheme of arrangement for reduction of capital which abrogates, modifies and affects the rights of preference shareholders to preferential return of capital is valid and can be sanctioned by the Court although the sanction of the majority of the holders of three-fourths of the issued preference shares has not been obtained in accordance with the provision in the article in question. (1960) 30 Com Cas 367: 64 Cal WN 458: AIR 1960 Cal 637 (642, 643) (Pt F) (Prs 25, 26, 27) (DB).

——Ss. 106 and 107 — Variation of rights of shareholders — When becomes complete.

Section 106 accords a statutory sanction to the provision in a memorandum or articles of a company authorising variation of the rights of shareholders of a particular class, but this sanction prescribes that the specified proportion for giving consent to or for sanctioning a resolution confirming the variation shall in no case be less than three-fourth. The opening words of S. 107 "In pursuance.....at any time varied" indicate that if a variation is effected by reason of the combined operation of S. 106 of the Act and the particular clause in the Memorandum or the Articles of Association of the Company which authorised the variation, the variation can be said to be complete and effectually made. 63 Cal WN 11: (1959) 29 Com Cas 85: AIR 1959 Cal 253 (256) (Pt A) (Pr 30).

SECTION 108.

——Ss. 108 and 155 — Transfer of shares — S. 108 is not mandatory — Transfer of shares otherwise than under S. 108 — Alteration in register of members is not illegal.

When enacting S. 108 of the Companies Act, 1956, Parliament has not followed the wording of S. 75 of the English Companies Act, 1948, and has departed from S. 34 (3), the corresponding provision of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, as amended under the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1936. Parliament can, therefore, be deemed to have had in mind not to declare the non-compliance of S. 108 as unlawful and illegal. As the law does not prescribe the consequences or does not lay down penalty for non-compliance of S. 108, the provision can be considered to be directory and not mandatory. It is true that there has to be substantial compliance of a provision which is merely directory; but in cases not strictly covered by the provision the authority can deviate from that rule and take a decision which is equitable and fair to both the parties. When the provisions of S. 108 of the Companies Act, 1956, are not mandatory and the company appears to have acted in good faith, its action in making alterations in the registers of members giving effect to transfer of shares by agreement of parties cannot be said to be illegal and ab initio void. (1963) 2 Comp LJ 74: (1963) 33 Com Cas 1142: ILR (1963) 2 All 776: AIR 1965 All 135 (139, 140, 141) (Pt C) (Prs 14, 19, 20, 21) (DB).

——S. 108 — Transfer of shares — S. 108 is not exhaustive — Other methods under which transfer may be effected.

Section 108 of the Companies Act, 1956, covers only two kinds of transfer of shares, viz., under an instrument of transfer duly stamped and executed by the transferor and the transferee and transmission by operation of law. There are other instances of a person acquiring title to the shares of a company. Thus, a joint Hindu family can own shares and at the time of separation there has to be an actual partition of shares among the members thereof. Further, under special circumstances, a transfer of shares may be effected by an agreement between the parties. (1963) 2 Comp LJ 74: (1963) 33 Com Cas 1142: ILR (1963) 2 All 776: AIR 1965 All 135 (140) (Pt E) (Pr 20) (DB).

——Ss. 108 and 155 — Applicability and scope of — Application for rectification of share register — Ground for — Death of member holding shares — Heirs entered as holder jointly — Claim by one for partition of estate consisting of shares and other property and to allotment of certain block of shares — Application for rectification on basis of — Competency — 'Default' — What amounts to — Transfer of shares — Registration — Condition precedent to.

An application under S. 155 (1) (b) of the Companies Act, for rectification by entering the name of the applicant as the holder of shares by transfer can be made by a party when the company has acted in violation of the terms and conditions laid down in that section. The applicant must satisfy the Court that the company has committed a breach of duty or default as contemplated by that section; and unless there is evidence of such a breach of duty or default, an application under S. 155 (1) (b) cannot be sustained.

When the applicant for registering a transfer has not lodged with the Company an instrument of transfer, as required by S. 108 of the Companies Act, without which the company is forbidden by law to register a transfer, it cannot be said that the company is guilty of a default which entitled the applicant to move the Court under S. 155.

Where the applicant claims to be one of the heirs of a deceased member of the company, on whose death the shares held by him were registered in the names of the applicant and others jointly, and also claims partition of the entire estate of the deceased including the shares which are only a part of the estate of the deceased, and a partition and division of the shares as well as allotment of shares, in severalty would be necessary before the company can be called upon to rectify the share register on the basis of the applicant's claim to a certain number of shares such allotment, if at all, can be done only upon a partition of the entire estate either amicably amongst parties or by a suit being filed for partition of the estate. The Court, in an application under S. 155, cannot go into the question of partition of the estate of the deceased member, and no order can be made for separate allotment to the applicant of a certain number of shares in respect of which the applicant claims rectification of the Company's share register. Without a proper adjudication, the company is not bound to recognise the claim of one of the joint holders to a particular lot of shares. The company cannot take upon itself the duty of adjudicating upon the rights of several persons who claim to be entitled to the shares which were registered in the name of the deceased member and which, after his death were registered in the names of the heirs of the deceased as joint holders. There are questions into which the Court cannot go in an application under Sec. 155, and can be resolved only either by amicable partition among the parties and the transfer of the shares to the applicant by agreement or by a regular suit for partition of the estate of the deceased member and allotment to the applicant of the shares to which the applicant claims to be entitled. ——S. 108 — 'Duly stamped' — Stamp Act (1899). Ss. 2 (11), 2 (14), 12 — West Bengal Government Notification, dated 24th July, 1941 — Scope.

There is no definition of the expression 'duly stamped' in the Companies Act. But it has been defined in S. 2 (11) of the Stamp Act. Where adhesive stamps have been affixed to the instruments of transfer but they have not been cancelled, the instruments are not 'duly stamped', and the company is justified in refusing registration of the shares concerned: (1958) 28 Com Cas 29 (Punj), Rel. on. The definition of 'instrument' in S. 2 (14), Stamp Act, is not restricted to the kinds of documents specifically referred to. It cannot be said, that an instrument of transfer of shares is not an 'instrument' within the meaning of S. 2 (14) of the Stamp Act. The requirement of S. 108 (1) of the Companies Act, 1956, inter alia, is, that a proper instrument of transfer 'duly stamped' and executed by or on behalf of the transferor and by or on behalf of the transferee must be delivered to the Company. The section does not speak of any execution by the Company.

The West Bengal Government Notification dated 24th July, 1941, merely contemplates a second cancellation by the company 'to render the stamps permanently unfit for re-utilisation'. This second cancellation must be made by the company. The Notification clearly lays down 'even though the stamps were previously cancelled in accordance with S. 12 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899'. The Notification gives an indication that the stamps on the instrument of transfer are cancelled in accordance with the provisions of S. 12 of the Stamp Act. (1962) 32 Comp Cas 568: AIR 1961 Cal 528 (529, 530, 531) (Pt B) (Prs 13, 17, 18, 20, 22).

Where a company has recognised a transfer of shares in favour of a stranger and has registered the transfer and taken the transferee as a Director, on the basis of a transfer deed duly signed by the transferor along with a letter from him, it cannot subsequently turn round and impeach the registration of the transfer as ultra vires on the ground that certain formalities laid down in the Articles of Association of the Company had not been followed. This is particularly so when the Articles do not prohibit a transfer per se, but only prescribe a particular manner or procedure for transfer of shares. If the procedure prescribed is not followed all that can be said is that the transfer was irregular but it cannot be held that the transaction is ultra vires. The transfer would be ultra vires only if the Articles of Association lay down an absolute embargo on transfer in favour of a stranger.

A distinction must be made between acts which are ultra vires and those for the validity of which certain formalities are necessary. In the latter case, persons dealing without any notice of any irregularity are entitled to presume that the Company is acting within the scope of its authority. Accordingly a Company which, possessing the requisite powers, so conducts itself in issuing debentures as to represent to the public that they are legally transferable, cannot set up any irregularity in their issue against an equitable transferee for value who has no reason to suspect it. If the directors have power to bind the Company but certain preliminaries are required to be gone through on the part of the Company before their power can be duly exercised, persons dealing with the company in good faith and without notice are not bound to see that all those preliminaries have been observed, but are entitled to presume that the Directors are acting regularly; this principle, known as the doctrine of indoor management, is designed to protect innocent parties who are acting bona fide in the belief that the Company is transacting business in accordance with its Articles. In such a case the doctrine that a party cannot by representation, any more than by other means, raise against himself an estoppel so as to create a state of things which he is legally disabled from creating, does not apply. ●——S. 110 and Table A, Regn. 19 — Companies Act (1913), S. 34 and Table A, Regn. 18—Transfer of share in blank — Effect of on Company — Equities between transferor and transferee.

Transfers of share of a company take place either by a fully executed document such as is contemplated by Regulation 18 of Table A of the Companies Act, 1913, or by what are known as 'blank transfers'. In such blank transfers, the name of the transferor is entered, and the transfer deed signed by the transferor is handed over with the sharescrip to the transferee, who, if he so chooses, completes the transfer by entering his name and then applying to the company to register his name in place of the previous holder of the share. The company recognises no person except one whose name is on the register of members, upon whom alone calls for unpaid capital can be made and to whom only the dividend declared by the company is legally payable. Of course, between the transferor and the transferee, certain equities arise even on the execution and handing over of 'a blank transfer', and among these equities is the right of the transferee to claim the dividend declared and paid to the transferor who is treated as a trustee on behalf of the transferee. These equities, however, do not touch the company, and no claim by the transferee whose name is not in the register of members can be made against the company, if the transferor retains the money in his own hands and fails to pay it to him. In the exercise of the power under S. 155, the Court has to act judicially, to adjudicate upon the right exercised by the directors in the light of the powers conferred upon them by the Articles of Association.

The restrictions which inhere in the exercise of the power of the Court also apply to the exercise of the appellate power (under S. 111) by the Central Government, i.e., the Central Government has to decide whether in exercising their power, the directors are acting oppressively. Prima facie, the exercise of such authority would be judicial. It is immaterial that the statute which confers the power upon the Central Government does not expressly set out the extent of the power; but the very nature of the jurisdiction requires that it is to be exercised subject to the limitations which apply to the Court under S. 155. An application for deletion from the register of the name of a member already entered on it, is to be made only if such name is entered in the register 'without sufficient cause'. Where the Central Government, in its appellate order under S. 111 (5) of the Act, directs that the name of the transferee be registered by the Company in its register of members, and the company complies with that direction, it cannot be said that the entry of the name in the register is 'without sufficient cause' and in such a case the petition under S. 155 of the Act for deletion of the name so entered cannot be maintained.

The Central Government hearing an appeal under S. 111 (5) is exercising judicial functions and it is not feasible to hold that a position could arise in which there would be a conflict between the orders made by two authorities acting judicially, namely, the Central Government under S. 111 (5) and the Court under S. 155. S. 155 does not purport to confer overriding powers on the Court.

Where the Central Government makes an order directing the Company to effect registration of a transfer within a period of ten days, the company is bound to comply with the same, as otherwise the company would be liable to the penalty under Section 111 (9) of the Act as amended in 1960. Officer as defined in Section 2 (30) of the Act includes, the managing agent, and where the managing agent is a firm, any partner of the firm. The function of the Directors to approve of the transfer or not would come to an end as soon as the Central Government makes its order directing registration, and unless the order is complied with within the time specified, the Deputy Managing partner of the Managing Agency Firm, who having knowledge of the order, does not carry it out would be 'an Officer who is in default' within the meaning of S. 2 (31) and S. 111 (9) of the Act and therefore, a registration of transfer effected by him would be perfectly valid and cannot be held to be illegal. Under S. 155 (1) of the Act, not only the person aggrieved but also any member of the Company has locus standi to move the Court for rectification. (1963) 1 Com LJ 239: ILR (1963) 1 Punj 749: (1963) 33 Com Cas 534: AIR 1963 Punj 341 (344) (Pt B) (Prs 12, 15).

The recitals of the trust deed have to be looked into for determining the scope and ambit of the powers of the trustees of the debenture holders of a company when they enter upon possession, especially with reference to the question of their right to carry on the business. Where different items of property referred to in the Schedule to the deed are transferred to the trustees absolutely subject to the right of redemption, the business is not a part of the security.

Held, that a combined reading of the relevant provisions in the deed seemed to warrant the inference that it seemed to be the intention of the indenture that on the occurrence of the default and subject to the option of the debenture holders, the Debenture Trustees could carry on the business, either by themselves, or through their agents. This power was not limited to the period pending the realisation of the security by the sale of the mortgaged premises as a going concern. The power to run the business was conferred upon the debenture holders through the Debenture Trustees or their agents as a substantive alternative to the right to realise the security by the sale of the hypotheca; the Debenture Trustees had the right to carry on the business on behalf of the mortgagor-Company and at its risk, so that the actual losses incurred by them and the lawful debts contracted by them were binding upon the Company. (1886) 33 Ch D 279, Rel. on; when the Debenture Trustees, through their agents started the carrying on of the business, it was the old business of the Company that they did carry on and not a fresh business which they started on their own; inasmuch as the mortgaged premises were used for the carrying on the business by the Debenture Trustees, or their agents under the trust deed for the purpose of discharging the mortgage debt from out of the net profits of that business, and inasmuch as the business carried on was the business of the company it could not be said that the Debenture Trustees were bound to account, and they should do so only as mortgagees in possession; it was not open to the Official Liquidator of the Company after the lapse of many years to repudiate what the shareholders had done in a validly summoned and constituted meeting. The shareholders, it must be held, were satisfied with the balance-sheet and the reports of the Directors and auditors. (1935) 2 KB 113, Distinguished; it could not be said that the acceptance of the accounts by the Directors and their eventual passing at the meeting of the general body of the shareholders had no legal effect: 1912 AC 254 (263), Distinguished; so long as the constitution of the Company lawfully permitted the formation of the Board in a particular manner, the fact that the Debenture Trustees and the managing agents nominated their representatives on the Board, could not invalidate what they had done without proof of fraud; there was a settlement of accounts between the Official Liquidator and the trustees, but this fact did not prevent its being re-opened in case of proved fraud or mistake. (1877) 9 Ch D 529, Relied on; the mortgage of the mills was an English mortgage. The requirements of S. 69 (1) (a), T. P. Act were satisfied and the trustees had power to sell the mills which were mortgaged, without the intervention of the Court; the trustees were not debarred by S. 90 of the Trusts Act from receiving the dividends; the fact, that the Official Liquidator settled the accounts and paid dividends to the trustees, precluded the Official Liquidator from challenging the transactions as fraudulent.

The case fell within Art. 95 and not Art. 115 or 116 of the Limitation Act. Debenture Trustees represented the mortgagees. Mortgagees were not the trustees for the mortgagor. Neither the Debenture Trustees nor their agents could be regarded as express trustees. That being so, S. 10 of the Limitation Act had no application. The suit must have been instituted within three years from the date of the knowledge of the fraud. The suit having been instituted beyond three years by the Official Liquidator, was barred. (1963) 33 Com Cas 966: AIR 1962 Andh Pra 274 (283, 285, 288, 289) (Pt A) (Prs 31, 34, 37, 38, 40, 41) (DB).

Held, on facts that so far as the charge on the immovable properties in the ownership of the company on the date of creation of charge was concerned, the debentures required registration under S. 17 (1) (b) of the Registration Act since a debenture which does seek to create, declare or limit any right, title or interest to or in immovable property would be covered by Cl. (b) of S. 17 (1). The combined effect of Ss. 17 and 49 of the Registration Act was to make debentures ineffective so far as they sought to create a charge on immovable property of the Company. (1962) 32 Com Cas 925: AIR 1962 All 101 (104, 105, 106, 107) (Pt A) (Prs 7, 12, 19, 20) (DB).

——S. 125 — (Companies Act (1913), S. 109) — Floating charge — Meaning — Right under — Nature of.

A floating charge is created by making the assets or the undertaking of the Company a security for the payment of debts into which a company enters. Such a charge might cover properties which may be especified or unspecified in the document creating the charge. The description may be a general one. A peculiar feature of this transaction, however, is that it is not possible to predicate the exact property on which the charge would operate until the happening of a future event. This future event may be the appointment of a receiver at the instance of the creditors of a company for the realisation of their debts or the winding up of the Company itself. Till such a future event happens, the charge is of an ambulatory or roaming character. Once, however, this future event occurs the charge settles down, and attaches itself to a fixed property. The right created under it is no doubt a right in presenti. The securily in repect of which the right is created, however, becomes crystallized only when the future event takes place. (1962) 32 Com Cas 925: AIR 1962 All 101 (103) (Pt C) (Pr 5) (DB).

——S. 125 — Companies Act (1913), S. 109 — Scope and object — Mortgage of immovable property — Effect of non-registration — Mortgage not rendered invalid — Creditor of company purchasing mortgaged property in execution of his money decree — Sale certificate clearly showing that what was sold in auction was only right and interest of judgment-debtor — Auction-purchaser cannot claim priority over mortgagee.

On the plain reading of Section 109 it cannot be said that the failure to register a mortgage created by a company renders the mortgage invalid and a nullity. The effect of the section is that if the mortgage is not registered, the liquidator is not to take notice of it as a mortgage. The debt will survive and it will be treated on a par with other debts. The property which is the subject-matter of the security will be available as the assets of the company to the liquidator for payment to the creditors. The creditors in liquidation will not be affected by the mortgage. This section does not take away the right of the company to deal with its property. If the company can validly deal with its property, any transfer made by the company will be binding on the company. If the company mortgages certain property, any person who subsequently purchases the property from the company will take it subject to the mortgage and Section 109 is no bar to the mortgagee enforcing his mortgage as against the transfer of the company simply because it has not been registered under Section 109.

Hence, it is not open to the creditor of a company (which has not gone in liquidation), who in execution of his money decree has purchased the mortgaged property, to contend that his purchase is free from the mortgage. The purpose of S. 109 in calling upon a company to register the charge or mortgage is for the benefit of the liquidator and the creditors in liquidation.

In order to find out as to what was actually purchased by the auction-purchaser it is necessary to refer to the sale certificate and the proceedings in execution of the decree. Where, it is clear from those proceedings and the sale certificate that the property was sold in auction after declaration of the said mortgage, it is clear that what was purchased by the decree-holder was the right and interest of the judgment-debtor, and it is not open to the auction-purchaser to say that what the plaintiff purchased under the sale certificate was the property and that the interest which he purchased was larger than the interest of his judgment-debtor in the property. ——S. 125 — Scope of — Effect of non-registration — Who can avoid the mortgage — (Words and Phrases — "Any creditor").

S. 109 (Now S. 125) makes the security void not as against everybody or as against the company grantor, but as against the liquidator, and against any creditor, and it leaves the security to stand as against the company while it is a going concern. It does not make the security binding on the liquidator as successor of the company.

In spite of the generality of the expression, "any creditor", an ordinary unsecured creditor of the Company cannot avoid the mortgage, for he has no enforceable right either against the mortgagee or against the property comprised in the mortgage. Only a creditor of the Company who has acquired a right against the property may intervene and avoid the mortgage, e.g., where he has a charge over the property or where the Company is in liquidation and he has acquired a right to the rateable distribution of the assets of the Company. ('56) 60 Cal WN 278: (1956) 26 Com Cas 109.

The two characteristics of a floating charge are: (1) non-permanence of the property which is the subject of the charge, and its constant change from time to time, and (2) that it does not of itself fasten and settle down even on the property existing at the time of the creation of the security. It is no doubt an existing charge, and is rightly termed so, but it does not settle down and fasten on the property which is the subject of the charge until a particular event occurs or until a particular act is done.

The event which transforms a floating security to a fixed charge is either the cessation of the carrying on of business by the company or the actual intervention by the debenture-holders. A mere right on the part of the debenture-holders to intervene or a mere default on the part of the company to pay the amount on the due date is not sufficient to crystallise the security. The institution of a suit claiming a charge on the movables is an act sufficient in law to bring about a crystallisation of the security. Not only the appointment of a receiver, but also the bringing of an action to enforce security would work the crystallisation of a charge.

Before the security becomes crystallised, an execution creditor is entitled to levy execution and retain the fruit thereof, and the possibility of the charge becoming crystallised in a future contingency is no answer to his claim to retain it. If the debenture-holder chooses to intervene in the affairs of the company without interrupting its licence to carry on its business, certainly the execution creditor will be entitled to retain the fruits of his execution.

It is not correct to say that a company can be considered to have ceased to be a going concern only when it is dissolved. Nor is it correct to say that a company must be deemed to carry on business simply because its name remains on the Register of Companies. (1963) 2 Comp LJ 164: 1963 Ker LJ 605: (1963) 2 Ker LR 19: ILR (1963) 2 Ker 209: 1963 Ker LT 714: AIR 1963 Ker 301 (304, 305) (Prs 8, 9, 11) (DB).

——S. 141 (1) — Conditions of relief under — Scope of authority — Effect of extension of time.

Section 120 (1) (Now S. 141 (1)) specifies five alternative conditions of relief. The Court may grant relief if the omission to register the mortgage is either: (a) accidental or, (b) due to inadvertence or, (c) due to some other sufficient cause or, (d) is not of a nature to prejudice the rights of creditors or shareholders of the company or any person interested or, (e) if, on other grounds, it is just and equitable to grant the relief.

The section confers a wide judicial discretion. In exercising this discretion it is not material to consider, (a) the solvency or insolvency of the company; (b) the presence or absence of any judgment against the company; and (c) the pendency of a winding up petition. Even if the petitioner makes out a condition of relief the Court is not bound to extend the time and may decline to do so in appropriate circumstances, e.g., where the order for extension will be useless. The effect of extension of the time of registration and of actual registration within the extended time is that the mortgage is constituted a valid charge ab initio, from the date of its execution subject to the conditions, if any, imposed by the order for extension. 60 Cal WN 278: (1956) 26 Com Cas 109.

——S. 141 (1) — Due to inadvertence — Meaning of.

The words "due to inadvertence" are satisfied if there is "negligence or carelessness, where the circumstances show an absence of bad faith". The section gives a right to the mortgagee to come to the Court to be relieved of the consequences of his own negligence which is not actuated by any fraudulent or improper motive. (1889) 53 JP 263 and (1949) 1 Ch 138, Ref. 60 Cal WN 278: (1956) 26 Com Cas 109.

——S. 141 (3) — Effect of — Protection of secured and unsecured creditors.

The effect of S. 120 (2) (Now S. 141 (3) is to subject every such order to the statutory condition. Even if an order for extension is now made unconditionally, the order does not prejudice any right acquired in respect of the charged property prior to actual registration of the charge including the right acquired by the general body of creditors under a winding up order.

Though the sub-section has not put a fetter on the general power conferred by sub-section (1) upon the Court to attach to the order such terms and conditions as may be just and expedient, in view of the statutory condition it is no longer necessary to attach to the order the usual condition for the protection of such rights. 60 Cal WN 278: (1956) 26 Com Cas 109.

——S. 141 (3) — Order of extension of time after winding up order — Effect of, on rights of creditors.

The right acquired by the general body of creditors under an order for winding up of the Company is clearly an accrued right acquired in respect of all the assets of the Company including the property concerned and is, therefore, equally protected by sub-section (2) of S. 120 (Now S. 141 (3)) of the Indian Companies Act.

Where, therefore, an order for extension under S. 120 (i.e., S. 141 (1)), Companies Act is made after the passing of an order for winding up and appointment of a liquidator, the applicant cannot enforce the unregistered charge against the liquidator and cannot also acquire any priority over any creditor of the company. The order in such circumstances is useless and the Court in the exercise of its discretionary power will not make such order.

The practice in England is not to make an order for extension after a winding up order had been made. This practice is not changed by the enactment of sub-section (2) of S. 120 (i.e., S. 141 (3)) of the Indian Companies Act. An order for extension subject to the statutory condition, contained in that sub-section is useless if it is made after a winding up has commenced, and hence ought not to be made. SECTION 149

——Ss. 149 (1) (a) and (d) and 433 — Company—Commencement of business — Minimum subscription of shares — Payment in cash — Allotment of shares for minimum subscription, in lieu of debts payable by the company — No compliance with the essential and imperative statutory requirement.

The Registrar of Companies filed an application under S. 433 (c) of the Companies Act of 1956 for winding up the company on the ground that it had not commenced its business within a year of its incorporation. The application was allowed in the first instance for the reason that the minimum subscription has not been subscribed under S. 149 (1), of the Act. In the appeal against that order, on the representation of the company that it was in a position to comply with the statutory requirements and commence the business, the matter was remanded. The company had allotted shares for money due by the company. The Company Court allowed the application for winding up holding that the allotment made did not satisfy the conditions of S. 149 (1). On the appeal by the company.

Held, no interference with the discretionary exercise of the Company Judge in ordering the winding up of the company is called for. The direction in S. 149 (1) (a) that shares to an amount not less in the whole than the minimum subscription should be allotted and be held subject to the payment of the whole amount thereof in cash is imperative. The conditions laid down will not be complied with in a case where the company allots shares in lieu of debts payable by the company for the purpose of the subscription of minimum shares. Where the company incurs debts, despite the prohibition in the section, these debts being payable only after the minimum subscription is raised, it cannot support a plea of payment by set-off for the purpose of raising the minimum subscription. (1873) 8 Ch D 407, Ref. (1965) 2 Comp LJ 143: 1965 Ker LT 1041: 1965 Ker LJ 735.

——S. 149 (1) (a) and (4) — 'Allotment of shares for payment in cash' — What amounts to — Allotment of shares by set off against debts incurred before commencement of the company does not amount to allotment within the section.

Payment for shares allotted by set off against a debt due by the company, can be regarded as payment in cash for purposes of S. 149 (1) (a), only if the debt contracted is a debt of the company. A debt contracted by the promoter, even if it be for and on behalf of the Company before the date at which the company was entitled to commence its business cannot be set off against payment in cash for allotted shares, as such debt is only provisional at the time it was incurred and was not binding on the company. Allotment of shares in accord and satisfaction of such a debt would not be an allotment of shares for payment thereof in cash within S. 149 (1) (a).

For application of the rule in Spargo's case, (1873) 8 Ch 407 two conditions are necessary namely that there must be a debt due and presently payable by the company and there must be payment for the shares by set off of the debt and not an accord and satisfaction of the debt by allotment of shares. The first condition can never be satisfied for the purposes of S. 149 (1) (a) where the allotment is for money due by the company, since, in view of sub-sections (1) and (4) of the section, money can be due and presently payable by the company only from the date on which the minimum subscription has been raised. Hence, even if, despite the prohibition in sub-section (1) of the section, the company incurs debts those debts, being payable only after the minimum subscription is raised, cannot support a plea of payment by set off for the purpose of raising the minimum subscription and therefore it is doubtful whether the rule in Spargo's case would be at all applicable in this country in view of the express provisions in S. 149 (1) (a) and (4). AIR 1964 Ker 311 (313) (Prs 6, 7).

——Ss. 149 and 70 — Scope and distinction — Company issuing prospectus, inviting public to subscribe for its shares — Compliance with S. 70 — If absolves company from duty to comply with S. 149 (1).

Section 149 (1) of the Companies Act applies to a company which has issued a prospectus inviting the public to subscribe for its shares, while S. 149 (2) applies to a company which has not issued such a prospectus. Section 70 prohibits allotment of shares or debentures in certain cases unless a statement in lieu of prospectus has been delivered to a Registrar. It applies both to a company which has not issued a prospectus on or with reference to its formation as well as to one which has issued such a prospectus but has not proceeded to allot any of the shares offered to the public. Ss. 70 and 149 deal with different matters. Section 70 relates to the allotment of shares or debentures. The object of S. 149 is obviously to secure a certain degree of substantiality in a company before it enters into engagements with outsiders or obtains money by borrowing. The words 'commence any business' in S. 149 are very wide; but they evidently do not include the issue of prospectus, or the making of provisional contracts, or the allotment of shares, or the employment of experts, or other preliminary steps. In other words, compliance with S. 70 is only the completion of a preliminary step; it will not in any way exonerate a company from the necessity of complying with the provisions of sub-section (1) of S. 149, if it had issued a prospectus inviting the public to subscribe for its shares. (1963) 2 Comp LJ 5: 1963 Ker LJ 460: 1963 Ker LT 517: (1963) 33 Com Cas 813: ILR (1963) 2 Ker 645.

——S. 153 — Claim of petitioner to be registered as an administratrix not sustainable.

At the meeting of the Directors the Petitioner requested the Chairman to enter her name in the share Register in respect of certain shares "in the place and stead of the deceased as the administratrix to the estate of the said deceased including the said shares."

Held, that her claim to be registered as administratrix in view of S. 153 was wholly unsustainable. (1963) 33 Comp Cas 36: AIR 1962 Cal 380 (384) (Pt B) (Pr 19).

——Ss. 153, 155 and 176 (5) and 2 (7) — Applicability and scope — Right of the Official Trustee to vote — (Official Trustees Act (1913), Ss. 6 and 14).

Sections 153 and 176 (5) have no relevancy at all in deciding the question as to whether the Official Trustee is entitled to vote or not. Section 153 does not at all stand in the way of recognising a right in the Official Trustee to exercise his power of vote either by himself or by proxy. The expression 'body corporate' defined in S. 2, Cl. (7) does not mean that a 'corporation sole' cannot be a shareholder under the Companies Act or cannot execute a proxy. Reading Sections 6 and 14 of the Official Trustees Act together, the Offcial Trustee is entitled, as a 'Corporation sole' to be entered as a shareholder in the registers of a company. The entry of the Official Trustee by that name shall not constitute notice of trust. There is absolutely no conflict between the provisions of S. 153 of the Companies Act and S. 14 of the Official Trustees Act. The Official Trustee having been entered in the register of the company as a shareholder, it was not open to the President of the general meeting to hold that the official trustee was not entitled to take part in the proceedings, without having taken the necessary steps under S. 155 to have the register of members rectified if he was so advised. The name contemplated under the Act is only the Official Trustee of the State and it is only by that name that S. 6 of the Official Trustees Act empowers him to sue and to be sued in his corporate name. 1959 Ker LJ 309: AIR 1959 Ker 254 (260, 261) (Pt A) (Prs 35, 36, 37) (DB).

——S. 153 — Transfer of shares — Purchaser's name not registered — Title in shares — Position of transferor.

For the purposes of the company and its dealings the transferor of shares continue to be the legal owner of shares so long as his name stands as the holder thereof in the company's register of members. Till the name of the purchaser is registered as the holder of those shares, the company ordinarily shall not recognise the rights of the purchaser or take any notice of them. The transferor remains liable to the company for payment of call money until and unless the transfer is accepted by the company and the name of the transferee is brought on the register. The company is not concerned with the person in whose favour the transfer form is executed or who pays the consideration for the transfer. Under S. 155 of the Act, as it stood before its amendment in 1960 it was well settled that a person aggrieved by the refusal to register the transfer of shares had two remedies, viz., (1) to apply to the Court for rectification of the register under S. 155 and (2) to appeal against the resolution refusing to register under S. 111. Under the amended Act also the remedy by way of an application under S. 155 as also the remedy by way of an appeal under S. 111 are open to the aggrieved party. See Ibid, S. 153. AIR 1959 Ker 254.

2. Person aggrieved or any member may apply.

——S. 155 — Applicability — 'Person aggrieved'.

It is fundamental for the Court to see that under S. 155, it does not put on the share register some person who has not at least a prima facie title to the shares in question.

Where the applicant was not applying for registration of his own name but was applying for registration of somebody else's name and that somebody else was no longer the purchaser of those shares because he had already cancelled and repudiated the sale.

Held, in the circumstances, that the applicant could not use S. 155 for rectification of the Share Register to put on it the name of a person who, in fact, or in law could not be called an owner of the shares. (1958) 28 Com Cas 62: AIR 1957 Cal 476 (478) (Pt B) (Pr 10).

——S. 155 (3) — 'His name' — Interpretation of.

The language of sub-section (3) of S. 155 indicates that the question should be one between members and/or alleged members and/or the Company. The words "to have his name" mean the name of the person the question relating to whose title is being decided by the Court on the application. Where a person has admittedly no title to the shares the Court should not and cannot rectify the share register by putting his name on the share register as holder of shares, even though he is a party to the application. (1958) 28 Com Cas 62: AIR 1957 Cal 476 (478) (Pt C) (Pr 12).

——S. 155 (1) (a) (ii) — Rectification of share register — Proceedings for — Sufficient cause — Validity of forfeiture of shares whether can be canvassed.

The company Court has jurisdiction to set aside the forfeiture of shares in an application for rectification of the register of the company. A shareholder has a right to have his name placed on the register of members of the company concerned. If his name is not placed on the register, he can apply to the company for rectification of the register and if the company fails to do so, he can apply to the Court so that the Court may order the company to make the necessary rectification. Where his shares are forfeited, his name would be omitted from the register of the company. The aggrieved shareholder has a legal right to approach the Court to rectify the register on the ground that the forfeiture is irregular, illegal and void. 75 Mad LW 306: ILR (1962) Mad 697: (1962) 2 Mad LJ 113: 1962 Mad WN 211: 1963 Comp Cas Rep 58: AIR 1962 Mad 276 (282, 283) (Pt B) (Prs 26, 29) (DB).

——S. 155 (1)—Who can apply—Member of the Company.

Under sub-section (1) of S. 155 it is not only the person aggrieved who can move the Court to rectify the register of members but also 'any member of the company'. A shareholder of the Company can, therefore, apply under the section. (1963) 1 Comp LJ 239: ILR (1963) 1 Punj 749: (1963) 33 Com Cas 534: AIR 1963 Punj 341 (342) (Pt A) (Pr 6).

3. Application by Company.

——S. 155 — Rectification of Register of Members — Application by Company for — Company seeking confirmation of entries in Register of Members and maintaining that its register as it stood was correct — Application under S. 155, held not maintainable — Words and Phrases — Rectification.

Where in an application under S. 155, the contention of the applicant company was that register of the company rightly bears the names of the respondents as its members, to whom shares had been allotted on their failure to carry out their contractual obligations:

Held, that the relief by way of rectification of the register of members was not available to the company. It is for the Respondents (members) who already figure as shareholders of the company to seek rectification by omission of their names. As they had not made such application and had merely contented themselves by opposing the application by the Company, the Court was not moved by any aggrieved person and there was no occasion in the circumstances of the case to order rectification of the register. The petition by the company was therefore incompetent: (1958) 28 Com Cas 435, Rel. on; AIR 1960 Bom 136 and 300, Not applied. (1961) 31 Com Cas 138 (Punj).

4. Necessary parties.

———S. 155 — Proceedings for registering transfer of shares — Transferor not necessary party.

There is no provision of law which makes it essential that the transferor should be a party to a proceeding in which the transferee requires a company to accept a transfer deed and register the shares in his name. In fact, the normal procedure in this behalf is to give notice to the transferor and if no reply is received objecting to the transfer, to accept the transfer as genuine. 1957 Nag LJ 608: 60 Bom LR 97: (1958) 28 Com Cas 137: AIR 1958 Bom 247 (251) (Pt E) (Pr 28).

On an application under S. 155, although it is proper to give a notice of such application to the Official Receiver appointed in respect of those shares in a previous suit, the application cannot fail in absence of notice because it is a purely formal defect of a kind which does not prejudice any party. (1958) 28 Com Cas 62: AIR 1957 Cal 476 (478) (Pt D) (Pr 8).

6. Entry or omission of name without sufficient cause.

———S. 155 and Regulation 16 of Table 'A', Schedule 1 — Forfeiture of shares — Notice of intended forfeiture for non-payment of share calls — Call money with interest at 6 per cent from date of default and expenses accrued due to be paid — Time and place of payment recited — No mention of a definite sum as accrued expenses — Notice not complied with — Forfeiture made — Notice defective and invaiid — Forfeiture liable to be set aside — Order for rectification of share register, proper — Pleadings vague — Points argued without objections — Objection in Second Appeal, not allowed — Maxim 'he who comes into equity must come with clean hands' — Applicability and scope.

Held on facts, that the Regulation relating to calls are followed by Regulations for forfeiture (as in Articles 29 and 30 of the Company). In the light of Art. 29 read with similar regulations relating to calls there is no difficulty in holding that the notice, dated 20th January, 1957 requiring payment of interest on the call money from the date of default (19th January, 1957) to the date of actual payment is valid. (In the present state of the record, no opinion is given as to whether the notice is defective in respect of the demand of interest. The object of the notice under Art. 29 is to give the shareholder an opportunity for payment of the call money, interest and expenses. The amount of expenses incurred by the company by reason of non-payment is not disclosed. The finding of the High Court that the notice is defective in respect of the demand for expenses has to be agreed to. A proper notice is a condition precedent to forfeiture. The defect in the notice, though slight, invalidates it and is fatal to the forfeiture. Though the affidavits of the respondents in support of their petitions did not give particulars of the defect in the notice of 20th January, 1957, it was pointedly raised in the arguments in the first Court without any objection. The appellant cannot now complain that the pleadings were vague.

Section 155 (1) (a) (vii) of the Companies Act allows rectification of the Share Register if the name of any person after having been entered in the Register is without sufficient cause omitted therefrom. The omission, due to an invalid forfeiture of shares, is no sufficient cause for the omission of the name of the person holding such shares from the Register.

The order of Court (in another proceeding), dated 30th January, 1957 directing the respondents to deposit into Court the call money within a week, cannot be deemed to be a fresh notice under Art. 29. The Court may refuse relief under S. 155 and relegate the parties to a suit only where by reason of its complexity or otherwise the matter can be more conveniently decided in a suit. The point as to the invalidity of notice of intended forfeiture in the instant case could well be decided summarily; the Courts below rightly decided to give relief in the exercise of its discretionary jurisdiction under the section. The maxim 'he who comes into equity must come with clean hands' is applicable only when an equitable relief is prayed for; and the maxim can be invoked where the conduct complained of is untair or unjust in relation to the subject-matter of the litigation and the equity sued for. It does not mean that every improper conduct of the applicant disentitles him to relief. Public Passenger (Private) Ltd. v. M. A. ———S. 155 — Scope — Rectification of register of shares — Transfer of shares without consideration and without knowledge of owner — Legality —Application by owner for restoration of his name — If to be allowed.

If the holder of shares in a company hands over the share certificates to another along with a blank transfer application, and the latter accepts them on payment, there can be no doubt that the transferee would have a valid title to the shares. But when there is no proof of consideration having passed for the transfer of the share certificates and the blank transfer application, there can be no valid transfer.

The third respondent, in the instant case, with a view to defeat the statutory prohibition contained in the Insurance Act of excessive holding of shares, resorted to the device of transferring the excess shares in favour of the petitioner and, at the same time, retained with him the share certificates and secured from the petitioner, a blank transfer form signed by her. Subsequently, after the statutory prohibition ceased to exist, on the nationalisation of life insurance business, the third respondent used the blank transfer application in favour of the second respondent (third respondent's daughter. It was admitted that there was an effective and valid transfer by the third respondent to the petitioner. The petitioner applied under S. 155 of the Companies Act for rectification of the share register by restoring the petitioner's name as owner of the shares.

Held: There having been a valid transfer in favour of the petitioner, as the subsequent transfer of the shares in favour of the second respondent was made without the knowledge of the petitioner and without consideration therefor, there was no valid transfer in favour of the second respondent and therefore the name of the petitioner should be restored as the owner of those shares. Held further, that the third respondent should be held to his word that there was an effective transfer in favour of the petitioner and should not be permitted to resile from it in the interest of public policy underlying the statutory prohibition against excessive holding of shares. The Central Government hearing an appeal under S. 111 (3) is exercising judicial functions, and it is not feasible to hold that under the Act a position could arise in which there could be a conflict between the orders made by two authorities acting judicially, the Central Government under sub-section (5) of S. 111 and the Court under S. 155. Since S. 155 does not purport to confer overriding powers on the Court, it should be held that the two sections provide alternative remedies. An application for deletion from the register of members of the name of a member already entered on it, is to be made only if such name is entered in the register 'without sufficient cause'. Where the Central Government, by its appellate order under sub-section (5) of S. 111, directs that the name of a transferee of shares be registered by the company in its register of members, and the company complies with that direction, it can not possibly be said that the entry of the name in the register is 'without sufficient cause' and in such circumstances a petition would not be maintainable under S. 155. (1963) 1 Comp LJ 239: ILR (1963) 1 Punj 749: (1963) 33 Com Cas 534: AIR 1963 Punj 341 (344) (Pt B) (Prs 12, 15).

The doctrine that a party cannot by representation, raise against himself an estoppel so as to create a state of things which he is legally disabled from creating cannot apply where the transfer of shares per se is not prohibited by the Articles of Association. A distinction must be made between acts which are ultra vires and those for the validity of which certain formalities are necessary. In the latter case, persons dealing without notice of any informality are entitled to presume omnia rite esse acta. Accordingly a company which, possessing the requisite powers so conducts itself in issuing shares or debentures as to represent to the public that they are legally transferable, cannot set up any irregularity in their issue against an equitable transferee for value who has no reason to suspect it and who is well protected. (1896) 2 Ch 841, Rel. on.

This doctrine of indoor management is designed to protect innocent persons who are acting bona fide in the belief that the company is transacting business in accordance with its Articles of Association. It is only an ultra vires act which can still be challenged although the Directors have given their assent to it. ——S. 155 — Issue of new shares by directors not shown to be motivated by any ulterior considerations — Court will not interfere.

Where on the data furnished it could not be said definitely that the object of issuing new shares was to benefit certain friends and relations of the majority of the directors at the cost of the company, and it was not substantiated that the Chairman in fact had acquired a definite and permanent majority by issue of new shares but on the contrary it was conceded that after the issue of new shares the majority was on the petitioners' side, and it had not been shown that the directors in issuing new shares had been motivated by any ulterior considerations and no objections had been raised by anybody including the directors in the minority to the allotment of new shares.

Held, that the Court would not be justified in invoking its powers under S. 155 of the Companies Act. ——Ss. 155 and 395 — Rectification of register — Meaning and implication of — Sufficient cause — Removal of name — Remedy under S. 395 given up — Relief under S. 155 — If available.

'Rectification' in S. 155 implies the correction of an error or removal of defects or imperfections. The register kept by the company has to be shown to be wrong or defective. When the register is amended by operation of law and in accordance with the directions of the Court, it cannot be said that it was defective and no question of "rectification" of the register arises. (1867) 2 Ch App 431, Rel. on.

Further the expression 'sufficient cause' in S. 155, implies the presence of legal and adequate reason. The word 'sufficient' means 'adequate', 'enough' 'as much as may be necessary to answer the purpose intended'.

The removal of names of shareholders on compulsory transfer of their shares in accordance with the provisions of S. 395 cannot be said to be not for a sufficient cause within the contemplation of S. 155 of the Act.

Section 155 is not intended to provide relief where a remedy specifically provided under S. 395 had not been availed of or relief, if sought, could not be given because of non-compliance with the provisions. Relief under S. 155 is not in the nature of an additional or alternative remedy. The jurisdiction conferred on the Court under S. 155 is almost unlimited but there is a discretion in the Court to grant or refuse the reliefs sought in the circumstances of each case and the applicant is not entitled to an order ex debito justitiae.

Held, on facts, that relief under S. 155 could not be granted to the petitioners when a distinct and separate remedy provided under S. 395 had been sought but later on given up, when the objections raised by the opposite party were realised to be fatal. (1958) 28 Com Cas 435: 61 Punj LR 98: AIR 1959 Punj 232 (235, 236) (Pt B) (Prs 21 to 26).

——S. 155 (1) (b) — Default in entry in share register — Instrument of transfer of shares not presented — Refusal by Company to record transfer — Refusal cannot be termed as default contemplated by the section.

A company cannot rectify its share register by recording a transfer unless an instrument of transfer has been furnished by the transferee as required by S. 108 of the Act. Until such an instrument of transfer has been furnished a company owes no duty or obligation to the transferee. Where, therefore, an instrument of transfer is not lodged by a transferee of shares strictly in compliance with S. 108, it cannot be said that the company has any obligation to register the transferee, or that by reason of refusal to register, the company has committed a default as contemplated by S. 155 (1) (b) of the Act. An incorporated company is a creature of statute. Its rights, obligations and duties are defined and controlled by the Statute and its Articles. The rights of members of the company and also of persons who claim to have become members are also controlled by the statute. A company can be brought to book, only if it has committed a default or an act of omission in respect of a duty imposed upon it by the statute or its Articles. (1964) 2 Com LJ 75: (1964) 34 Com Cas 875: 68 Cal WN 1007: AIR 1965 Cal 436 (440) (Pt B) (Prs 15, 16).

B held some shares in a company, and, on his demise, his widow N obtained letters of administration and applied to the company to transfer the shares standing in her husband's name to her name. The company made a default and unnecessarily delayed transferring the shares.

Held, the legal representative of a deceased member is the legal owner of the shares held by the deceased, but he does not become a member of the company until his name is put on its register of members. Subject to the powers of the company to decline registration of his name as a member, the legal representative of the deceased member is entitled to registration of his name as a member of the company in respect of the shares held by the deceased.

The prospective transferee lodged with the company the original grant of the letters of administration to the estate of the deceased. The company could not reasonably require production of any other evidence in proof of her representative title and in fact did not require any evidence. In these circumstances the prospective transferee fully made out her title to the shares and her right to have her name entered as a member to the register of members. Though the company was not guilty of any default before the application was made, the Court may take notice of events which happened since the making of the application and afford relief to the parties on the basis of those events where it is necessary to base the decision on the altered circumstances in order to shorten litigation or to do complete justice between the parties. AIR 1915 Cal 103, Rel. on.

The company had ample opportunity to consider the application of the transferee and yet they did not take any action except adjourning the consideration. There was thus both a default and an unnecessary delay on the part of the company in entering on the register the fact of her becoming a member and the fact of her husband having ceased to be a member.

Section 155 (1) (b) covers all cases of improper refusal or neglect, and even if default on the part of the company is not proved, and if, upon deciding the question of legal title it appears that the right name is not registered there is jurisdiction in the Court to rectify the mistake. (1964) 1 Com LJ 240: (1964) 34 Com Cas 704: 68 Cal WN 702: AIR 1965 Cal 34 (36, 38) (Pt A) (Prs 3, 6) (DB).

8. Powers of Court.

——S. 155 (1) (a) — Scope of S. 155 — Court may order or decline to order rectification of register.

The summary remedy provided by S. 155 of the Companies Act, 1956, need not be availed of or the Court may decline to exercise the power under S. 155, leaving it open to the aggrieved party to seek remedy before a regular Court, where there exists a serious dispute relating to the title of a party to the proceeding. However, the rectification of the register of members of the company can be ordered by the Company Judge, without his entering into the complicated question of title, if it is found that the company has acted illegally and has intentionally disregarded the mandatory provisions of the law. This is based upon the general rule that no one can be permitted to derive undue advantage of a fraudulent or illegal act of his and, parties must be relegated to the position they occupied before the fraudulent or illegal act was done unless under the law the improper act can be condoned.

Held, that action taken by the company in recognising transfer of shares by agreement between the parties was neither illegal nor void and that in the present case, the Court should refuse to exercise its jurisdiction vested in it by S. 155. (1963) 2 Comp LJ 74: (1963) 33 Com Cas 1142: ILR (1963) 2 All 776: AIR 1965 All 135 (138, 139, 142) (Pt B) (Prs 8, 9, 30) (DB).

——S. 155 — Scope of — Compromise to sell shares — Held could not be recorded.

Under S. 155 the Court either should refuse to rectify the register or should grant the prayer for rectification of the register. The provisions of the section do not contemplate that it could pass any other kind of order. If the Court could give force to a compromise or any arrangement between the parties then that arrangement must be within the scope of that section.

A purchased five shares of a company in a Court sale. He applied under S. 155 for entering his name on the register of members of the Company. The application was opposed by the Company on the ground that a stranger had no right to purchase the shares. The matter was compromised. Under the compromise A agreed to transfer shares to Company's nominees provided Directors deposited price and profits within particular period. Directors failed to deposit. A resiled. District Judge, however, ordered A to transfer the shares on above terms. In appeal therefrom:

Held, that there was no justification in the order of the District Judge to compel A to sell or transfer the shares. Such an order being beyond the scope of S. 155 any compromise to that effect could also not be recorded even if the District Judge as a company Judge had such powers to record a compromise. That order must be set aside. (1963) 2 Comp LJ 126: AIR 1964 All 45 (46) (Prs 3, 4).

——S. 155 (3) — Applicability and scope — If dependent on S. 111.

Section 155 is not dependent upon S. 111. On the contrary it appears that S. 155 is the controlling section and gives the Court an overriding power notwithstanding any previous order of the Central Government. It would be meaningless to give the Court a general power to decide any question including any question relating to the title of a person as is given by S. 155 (3) and then indirectly cut off that power by giving the Central Government the same power to decide the same question in appeal first. 1957 Nag LJ 603: 60 Bom LR 97: (1958) 28 Com Cas 137: AIR 1958 Bom 247 (249) (Pt A) (Pr 8).

If they exercise their power wantonly and capriciously, it must be alleged and proved; and the Court will then interfere but not otherwise. Where, however the articles of association do not give to the directors absolute and uncontrolled discretion to refuse to register any transfer of shares the above rules do not apply. Section 155 of the Companies Act (1 of 1956) confers upon the Court very wide powers in the matter of the rectification of the register of members, but the exercise of these powers is circumscribed by the judicial discretion of the Court. It is now well settled that a petitioner seeking rectification of the register of members is not entitled to an order ex debito justitiae. The jurisdiction under this provision and under similar provisions under the previous Acts is unlimited, but it has always been open to the Courts to allow or reject the petition, and in exercising the discretion they are guided by equitable principles. ——S. 155 — Power of Court to entertain application under.

Where in the proceedings started on an application under S. 155 the only question for determination before the Company Judge was, whether the Company possessed the requisite authority to forfeit the shares and whether the name of the shareholder which was entered in the register could be struck off by the company, or whether the application for rectification of the register of members was correct, and there was no question of the validity or otherwise of the forfeiture of shares or any other complicated questions of fact and law:

Held, that the Company Judge had the power to order rectification of the register of members under S. 155. ILR (1965) 15 Raj 639: 1966 Raj LW 37: AIR 1966 Raj 136 (140) (Pt B) (Pr 17) (DB).

——S. 155 — Application under, by member against forfeiture of shares by Company—Defence that there was breach of contract — Articles of Association showing no breach of contract — Rectification of register could be allowed.

Monopoly was granted to certain persons to carry passengers and goods by motor transport within erstwhile Kotah State for a period of ten years. Grantees floated a company and in consideration of the said grant allotted certain fully paid-up shares to the Government of Kotah State. Later on, the State was merged into the State of Rajasthan. When the Motor Vehicles Act came into force in the State of Rajasthan, the Company forfeited the shares on the ground that on account of the promulgation of the Motor Vehicles Act and issuing of permits to others to ply buses on the routes granted to the company, the monopoly had come to an end before the expiry of ten years, and there was therefore a breach of contract on the part of the Government. Articles of Association of that Company however showed that the grantor had reserved to itself the right to terminate the licence and monopoly covered by the grant. The State of Rajasthan therefore filed an application under S. 155 (1) for rectification of the Register of Members.

Held, that if the Company's monopoly could not continue on account of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939 coming into force and the permits being issued to other bus operators, it was because the contract was frustrated on account of the operation of law. The Company could not take the law into its own hand and forfeit the respondent's share. In the circumstances rectification of the Register of members could be allowed. ILR (1965) 15 Raj 639: 1966 Raj LW 37: AIR 1966 Raj 136 (141) (Pt C) (Pr. 18) (DB).

——Ss. 155 and 81 — Rectification of register — Powers of Court — Court has to exercise judicial discretion — Allotment of shares to outsiders in contravention of S. 81 — If void — Allotment made bona fide in interest of company and in ignorance of S. 81 — Allotments will not be cancelled.

It is now well settled that a petitioner seeking rectification of the register of members is not entitled to an order ex debito justitiae. The jurisdiction under this provision and under similar provisions under the previous Act is unlimited, but it has always been open to the Courts to allow or reject the petition and in exercising the discretion they are guided by equitable principles. AIR 1959 Punj 106; (1901) 2 Ch 265 and (1867) 3 Ch A 199, Ref.

Held, that the allotment of shares to outsiders without first offering them to existing shareholders as required by S. 81 of the Companies Act, having been made by the directors bona fide in the interest of the Company in ignorance of the provisions of S. 81 of the Act, it would not be just and equitable to set them aside and rectify the register accordingly. Held further, that so far as allotment of shares made on 13th July, 1962, was concerned they were bad because the meeting at which they were made was invalid and they were made mala fide with full knowledge that the provisions of S. 81 were being violated. Further the allotments were made with the object of converting the minority group into a majority group.

Allotment of shares in contravention of S. 81 of the Act cannot be said to be void or ultra vires the company, for the company could waive the requirement of S. 81 by passing a special resolution. ILR (1964) 14 Raj 135.

10. Nature of enquiry which can be made.

——S. 155 (3) — Petition for rectification of register of members — Petitioner's title seriously disputed — Complicated questions of fact and law involved — Regular suit is proper remedy — Petition not maintainable.

It is well settled that S. 155, Companies Act, 1956, confers a jurisdiction of a summary nature and that it contemplates a relief which is available at common law as well. The remedy under the general law is the primary remedy. Where however, complicated questions of fact and law are involved only a regular suit would be the proper remedy and no petition under this section will be maintainable. (1965) 35 Com Cas 651: (1965) 1 Comp LJ 151: 1965 All LJ 409.

——S. 155 — Relief contemplated by S. 155 — Ordinary civil suit is maintainable — Remedy under S. 155 is summary — Suit has to be filed in Court having territorial and pecuniary jurisdiction.

The provision made in S. 155 for a procedure by way of an application is only a provision for a summary procedure. It is open to the aggrieved party to avail of the procedure laid down by that section and proceed by way of an application or by such proceeding as may be laid down by the Supreme Court in the rules made by it. The Court, however, is not bound to give the relief under that section in that proceeding, if it finds that complicated questions of facts and law are involved. It has got the power to direct the party concerned to a Civil Court and to file a proper action for the purpose of securing the relief which he seeks in the summary proceeding. This direction is given by the Court in exercise of its discretion, because it is the civil Court which has got the jurisdiction to decide all such matters in the first instance and it is only by way of a summary remedy that a party can proceed by an application or a petition under S. 155 of the Companies Act, 1956. AIR 1928 Mad 571 and AIR 1960 Punj 388, Rel. on.

As a summary proceeding by way of an application or a petition under S. 155, the High Court can well be approached for the purpose of the necessary relief, but for the purpose of getting the same relief in a regular suit the relevant provisions of the C. P. Code and the questions both of territorial as well as pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is filed have got to be considered. If the subject-matter of the suit is valued at more than Rs. 25,000, the High Court would have jurisdiction to entertain it, but it would not entertain it as a Court exercising its jurisdiction under the Companies Act, but as a Court in exercise of its Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction. But a suit valued at only Rs. 1,300 is exclusively triable by the City Civil Court and since the provisions contained in Rr. 10 and 11 of O. 7 of the C. P. Code do not apply to the High Court by virtue of the provisions of R. 3 of O. 49 the only alternative that is left to the High Court is to dismiss the suit. Suit filed in High Court which it has no pecuniary jurisdiction to entertain, cannot be treated as an application under S. 155. 64 Bom LR 532: 1962 Nag LJ 574: (1963) 1 Comp LJ 150: (1963) 33 Com Cas 826: AIR 1963 Bom 40 (41, 42) (Prs 4, 5).

——S. 155 — Applicability — Complicated questions involved — Summary procedure — Propriety.

Where discovery and inspection are necessary and complicated questions such as forgery and fabricated documents arise the summary procedure of trial by petition under S. 155 should not be allowed. ——Ss. 155, 108 — Application for rectification — Question of allotment of shares in severalty — Question can be decided only in an action for partition — Company has no power of division and allotment of shares.

An allotment in severalty of the shares can only be done in an action for partition, unless the parties agree to amicable partition. The company cannot take upon itself the obligation to divide and allot the shares among the several joint holders and indeed, under the Companies Act, 1956, it has no power to do so. It is for the purpose of avoiding the serious mischief that may be caused to members of a company, by giving to the company the power to alter its Register of Members at the request of one party, that the mandatory provisions of S. 108 have been introduced. ——S. 155 — Applicability and scope — Disputed questions of fact, if can be summarily tried.

Serious questions involving disputed questions of facts should not be tried in a summary procedure in an application for rectification of the share register under S. 155 because they are more appropriate subjects for a trial in a suit on evidence after a full discovery of documents and inspection. (1958) 28 Com Cas 62: AIR 1957 Cal 476 (478) (Pt A) (Pr 9).

——S. 155 — Scope — Section deals with non-controversial matters only.

Although the power conferred by the section on Courts is very wide, the law seems to be well settled that the remedy provided by the section is summary. It can be invoked in non-controversial matters requiring quick decision. Section 155 is not meant to be used for deciding disputes requiring investigation. In the case of a dispute of complicated nature involving controversy under several heads and necessitating a regular investigation, the section ought not to be allowed to be used and the party concerned should be directed to proceed by way of a regular suit. Halsbury's Laws of England, Third Edition, Volume 6, Page 218 and (1924) 40 TLR 48 and AIR 1915 Lah 100 (1) and AIR 1959 Punj 352 and AIR 1957 Cal 476, Rel. on; AIR 1960 Punj 388 and AIR 1962 Mad 276, Ref.

In a petition under S. 155, allegations were made about a design of fraud on the part of Managing Director, which resulted in the petitioner's shares being forfeited and sold. It was necessary to decide as to when the petitioner became aware of the forfeiture and sale of her shares and whether her claim in respect of her shares was within time.

Held, that it would not be proper for the Court to decide these questions, in summary proceedings under S. 155. These questions could only be decided after recording evidence. (The petitioner was directed to establish her claim in a regular suit.) (1965) 2 Com LJ 133: AIR 1966 Punj 44 (45, 46) (Prs 7, 8).

——S. 155 — Discretion of High Court — Summary remedy — When available.

The summary remedy under S. 155 of the Companies Act, 1956, is not available to the litigant as of right without the Court having discretion to refuse it. If the case be one of difficulty and complication, it should more appropriately be decided at a regular trial, as this provision was not intended for settling controversies under several heads necessitating a regular investigations. Whether judicial discretion should be exercised by the Court for purposes of directing or refusing rectification of register of members, depends on the facts of each particular case.

Held, that having regard to the nature of the controversy and simpler facts of the case the matter could be disposed of under S. 155 by the High Court. So the offence of failure to file the returns (Ss. 159/162) is committed not at place, where the company has got its head office, but, since the offence involves failure to file a particular return or particular balance sheet in the office of the Registrar at Madras City, the offence is one which is committed in the Madras City, and the Presidency Magistrate Madras has jurisdiction to try it. ('65) 78 Mad LW 650: (1966) 36 Com Cas 7.

——Ss. 159, 162, 220 and 256 — Applicability — Private company not subsidiary of public company — Articles of Association providing for appointment of Directors and for retirement by rotation in terms similar to S. 256 — No Annual General Meeting held after 25th June, 1955 — Directors due to retire at end of financial year of 1958 — Liability to conviction for failure to submit annual return and balance-sheet for subsequent financial year ending 30th September, 1959.

Appellants 2 and 3 were directors of a limited company (first accused) which was incorporated as a private company under the Companies Act, 1913. The Articles of Association of the Company provided inter alia for appointment of directors and the proportion of those who were to retire by rotation in terms similar to those contained in S. 256 (1) and (4) of the Companies Act, 1956, relating to public companies. It was in evidence that the last Annual General Meeting of the Company was held on 25th June, 1955. There were also other directors besides the appellants and there was no evidence to show that there was any duty cast on the appellants to have called for a meeting for the appointment of directors in their place when they retired from their office as Directors. All the accused were prosecuted and convicted under Section 159 read with Section 162 of the Companies Act and under Section 220 (1) read with S. 220 (3) for failure to submit annual return and for failure to submit balance-sheet for the financial year ending 30th September, 1959. The appellants pleaded that they ceased to be directors before the financial year in question and were not liable to submit the annual return or balance-sheet.

Held, (1) Though S. 256 (1) of the Companies Act did not apply to the accused company which was not a subsidiary of a public company, the latter had adopted its provisions in the Articles of Association and therefore, the principle of S. 256 would apply. (2) When in any calendar year an annual meeting is not held, those directors who would have retired at the meeting, if the same had been held, would vacate their office on the last date of the year, and the appellants should therefore be held to have retired from their office as Directors by the end of the financial year of 1958, ending with 30th September, 1958, if not earlier, and they could not therefore, be held liable for the failure to submit the balance-sheet or the annual return for the subsequent financial year ending with 30th September, 1959. (3) Where despite the mandatory provisions of S. 166 and in breach of their duty as directors, the latter do not call on annual general meeting of the company for any length of time, they cannot claim to continue in their office of director, after the expiry of the period specified for calling the meeting and their purported acts would be invalid and they cannot by any action or representation on their part continue to be directors of the company after 1958. (4) Since the appellants were not directors of the company for the financial year 1958-59, they could not be prosecuted or convicted for failure to submit the annual return and the balance-sheet. (1963) 1 Mad LJ 395: 1963 Mad LJ (Cr) 251: (1963) 33 Com Cas 548: (1963) 1 Comp LJ 308: 1963 Mad WN 312: 1964 (1) Cri LJ 105 (2) (106, 107) (Prs 4, 7).

——Ss. 159, 162 and 220 — Applicability — Failure to file annual return and balance sheet and profit and loss statement — Plea that annual general meeting was not held for want of quorum in Board of Directors — Sustainability.

In a prosecution of a limited Company and its Managing Agent Accused (1 and 2) for the offences of failure to comply with Ss. 159 (1) and 220 (1) of the Companies Act, 1956, it was pleaded that no Annual General Meeting was or could be held for want of quorum in the Board of Directors consequent on the resignation of two directors and therefore, it was not possible to lay the balance sheet and profit and loss account as well as the annual return before the general meetings or to file them with the Registrar as required by Ss. 159 (1) and 220 (1) of the Act, and hence no offence was committed.

The Articles of Association empowered the Managing Agent to nominate one-third of the total number of directors, but the second accused did not exercise his power to nominate any director and did not take the necessary steps to comply with Ss. 159 (1) and 220 (1).

Held, that the fact that no general meeting of the Company was held was no defence to the charge of non-compliance with the statutory requirements and the accused could not rely on their own behalf as an answer to the charge. Therefore, the accused were guilty of the offence charged and liable to conviction under S. 159 and Section 220 (1) of the Companies Act. (1964) 1 Comp LJ 56: (1964) 34 Com Cas 160: 1964 Mad LJ (Cr) 155: (1964) 1 Mad LJ 158.

The accused, charged under S. 159 (1) read with Section 162, cannot be allowed to take advantage of their own failure to hold an annual general meeting of the company as a pretext for not submitting the returns required to be submitted by S. 159 of the Act. Under S. 159 as it was before its amendment in 1960, the starting point for calculating the time limit for the filing of a return could not be ascertained in a case in which no annual general meeting had been held at all, and if was also not possible to prepare the return when the date with reference in which it had to be prepared was not known. For not holding the annual general meeting, the Directors were liable to punishment under Section 156/168 of the Act, but they could not be penalised again under Section 159/162 for not filing the return.

The explanation added in 1960 had now created a distinct offence for breach of the provisions of Section 159 of the Act also even when the annual general meeting has not been held. 1962 Raj LW 585: ILR (1962) 12 Raj 584.

The Governing director of a company under the Companies Act has two capacities combined in him, one that of a director and the other that of a manager or an officer. Where the default was due to reasons beyond the control of the company and its directors, it would be hard if they are to suffer criminal liability on account of the default. Where by reason of the Books of the Bank being seized by the police and produced in Criminal Court the balance sheet and profit and loss account, etc., were not filed, the company and the directors will not be liable.

Under S. 633 of the Companies Act it is only an officer of the company and not the company itself that can be relieved.

If the word 'proceeding' in S. 633 (1) is wide enough to cover a criminal prosecution, the word 'claim' in sub-s. (2) must be construed as having been used in a special sense so as to include also a criminal prosecution. Therefore, sub-s. (2) of S. 633 is wide enough for the Court to grant relief against an apprehended criminal prosecution. (1959) Mad LJ (Cr) 812: (1960) 30 Comp Cas 284: 1959 Ker LT 839: 1959 Ker LJ 897: ILR (1959) Ker 1031: AIR 1960 Ker 15 (16) (Pts A, B) (Prs 3, 4).

——Ss. 166, 255, 256 and 260 — Elected director — Tenure of office — Annual General meeting not called — Effect.

The Court has to ascertain the tenure of the Office of an elected director not merely from Section 256 but from the language of Ss. 166, 255 and 256 read together. In a case where despite the mandatory provisions of S. 166 and in breach of their duty as directors, the directors do not call an annual general meeting of the company for any length of time, they cannot claim to continue in their office of director after the expiry of the period mentioned in the section for calling the statutory meeting. A director vacates his office at the latest on the last day on which an annual general meeting could have been called as required by S. 166. The same principle will apply to an additional director as to a director who is to retire by rotation. When there is a provisional liquidator functioning no general meeting under Section 166 of the Act is contemplated any more than such meetings are contemplated once a winding-up order has been made and the liquidator begins to function. It makes no difference whether the appointment is of a liquidator in winding up by virtue of Section 449 or of a provisional Liquidator under Section 450 (1) of the Act. In either case the powers of the directors cease, in the former permanently, in the latter temporarily.

Obiter — The directors, if they are so advised, may proceed to hold the Annual General Meeting and the provisional liquidator if so requested, may make the books of the company available for inspection in his office to the auditors of the company. There is no provision in the Act that if the Company in General Meeting has taken one decision at one time, it cannot be altered by a subsequent decision of the Company in the General Meeting. So the subsequent meeting of the Company changing the earlier view that the new shares would be allotted to outsiders cannot be characterised as either illegal or without jurisdiction. (1964) 1 Comp LJ 117: AIR 1963 Orissa 189 (205) (Pt G) (Pr 24) (DB).

The Managing Director of a company can be convicted and sentenced under S. 210 (5) for omission to take all reasonable steps to lay the balance-sheet and the profit and loss account at the annual General Meeting even though he has already been convicted and sentenced under Section 168 for omission to call an annual general meeting of the company within the statutory period. The Managing Director is primarily responsible for calling a general meeting of the company, and having failed to call such a meeting and thereby contravened S. 166, he cannot be permitted to take advantage of this omission, and then plead that he could not lay the balance-sheet or profit and loss account because no meeting was called. It is a well known principle that a person should not be permitted to take advantage of his own wrong. (1911) 1 KB 588 and AIR 1917 Cal 1 and (1952) 1 Mad LJ 608: 1953 Cri LJ 19: AIR 1952 Mad 800 and (1963) 1 Mad LJ 408: 1953 Cr LJ 1062: AIR 1953 Mad 558, Rel. on. 38 Cr LJ 695: AIR 1937 Mad 341, Dist.

An offence under S. 168 of the Companies Act is distinct from the offence under S. 210 (5) of the Act. Reasonable steps for laying the profit and loss account and balance-sheet could be taken even before the actual date on which such meeting is held and where there is omission to take such steps the offence under Section 210 (5) is complete. Once it is held that the act or omission which constitutes the offence under S. 168 of the Companies Act is distinct from the act or omission which constitutes the offence under S. 210 (5), the principle of S. 26 of the General Clauses Act cannot apply, and it is immaterial as to whether the contravention of S. 210 was brought about on account of the commission of the offence under S. 168 by the same persons. 29 Cut LT 470: 1964 (1) Cr LJ 64: (1964) 34 Com Cas 31: AIR 1964 Ori 14 (15, 16) (Prs 7, 8).

It is settled law that no business can be discussed at a meeting of a company for which no notice is given unless such business is of a purely informal nature. The object for which a notice has to be given is to see that a sufficiently full and frank disclosure is made to the shareholders of the facts upon which they were asked to vote and unless that is done the resolutions passed at a meeting with such an insufficient notice are invalid. (1818) 99 LJ Ch. 119; (1915) 1 Ch. 503 and (1898) 1 Ch. 358. Rel. on.

The principle that if all members are present and waive the formality of notice, a resolution passed at such meeting would be good, even though the members were not assembled for that particular purpose, is not applicable to the present case as all the 48 shareholders of the Company were not present at the meeting, dated 27th March, 1962. The disputed resolution, if passed, would therefore, have been invalid and would not have any effect even under S. 81 (1-A) (b). Under S. 81 (1-A) (a) a special resolution is required for which in addition to the notice and explanatory statement referred to above the further requirement under S. 189 is that the intention to propose the resolution as a special resolution has been duly specified in the notice calling the general meeting. Even an ordinary notice of the resolution was not given. (1920) 1 Ch. 466, Dist. ILR (1964) 14 Raj 135.

——S. 173 — S. 294, Companies Act (1956), is mandatory and not directory — Effect of non-compliance — Appointment of sole selling agent — Appointment not approved as a special item of business as contemplated by S. 173 at the first annual general meeting of Company — Report of directors referring to such appointment approved at annual meeting only as ordinary business — Appointment of agent is invalid and cannot be ratified by approval at subsequent meeting. See Ibid. S. 294 ('65) 69 Cal WN 369.

——S. 173 (2) before amendment of 1960 and S. 397 (2)—Notice of special meeting — Failure to give details — Effect — "All material facts" and "nature and extent of interest" are questions of fact — Shareholder knowing work to be transacted at meeting cannot complain as to insufficiency of notice.

Failure to comply with the details of S. 173 (2) does not make it a case ipso facto of oppression in conducting the affairs of the company. If such a meeting is invalid then the Companies Act provides procedure for calling valid or regular meetings or for regularising irregular proceedings. That right is always open to every shareholder. Further, a shareholder who by his conduct shows that he knew the real effect of the work to be transacted at a meeting, cannot complain of a notice on the ground of insufficiency. 66 Cal WN 63: (1962) 32 Com Cas 207: AIR 1962 Cal 127 (130) (Pt F) (Prs 17, 18) (DB).

——S. 173 — Notice of meeting — Changes proposed in Articles — Full and frank disclosure — Need for.

A notice of meeting of a company which is served upon its shareholder should fully and frankly disclose the changes that were intended to be effected in the Articles of the company at the meeting. In a case where there is a large body of shareholders who reside at great distances from the registered office of the company it will not be fair on the part of the company to leave the proposed Regulations at the registered office and give the shareholders notice of that fact. In such a case printed copies of the proposed new Articles should be sent with the notice. 56 CWN 361: (1952) 22 Comp Cas 248: ILR (1954) 1 Cal 185: AIR 1952 Cal 645 (649) (Pt B) (Pr 22) (DB).

——S. 173 — Scope and object — Provision whether mandatory or directory — Intention of Legislature how ascertained — Non-compliance of S. 173 — Effect of — Interpretation of Statutes.

The question as to whether a statute is mandatory or directory is a question which has to be adjudged in the light of the intention of the legislature as disclosed by the object, purpose and scope of the statute. If the statute is mandatory, the thing done not in the manner or form prescribed can have no effect or validity; if it is directory penalty may be incurred for non-compliance but the act or thing done is regarded as good. Judged by that test, section 173 enacts a provision which is mandatory and not directory. The object of enacting section 173 is to secure that all facts which have a bearing on the question on which the shareholders have to form their judgment are brought to the notice of the shareholders so that the shareholders can exercise an intelligent judgment. Any disobedience to its requirements must lead to nullification of the action taken. Thus, a meeting of the company held in contravention of the provisions of section 173 would be invalid and so also would the resolution passed at that meeting be invalid. (1964) 1 Comp LJ 326: (1964) 34 Com Cas 777: (1964) 5 Guj LR 804: ILR (1964) Guj 752: AIR 1965 Guj 96 (104) (Pt H) (Pr 59).

——Ss. 173 and 186 — Business transacted at general meetings — Categories — Appointment of directors is ordinary business — It has to be transacted at annual general meeting — Court cannot call extraordinary general meeting for election of directors.

Clause (a) of S. 173 (1) of the Companies Act, 1956, categorises all business to be transacted at general meetings of a company into two broad heads, (1) special, and (2) other than special. In the case of annual general meeting four things mentioned therein are not included in the expression of "special" business and as such those four things will constitute "ordinary" business. Appointment of directors is one of such "ordinary" business which has to be transacted at an annual general meeting. Under clause (b) of that section all business transacted at an extraordinary general meeting is deemed special. It follows that the business of the appointment of directors cannot be transacted at an extraordinary general meeting of the company. Although, therefore, the Court has power to call an extraordinary general meeting of a company under S. 186 of the Act it cannot direct the appointment of directors at such a meeting. (1961) MPLJ (Notes) 246: 1962 Com Cas 896: 1961 Jab LJ 299: AIR 1961 Madh Pra 340 (343, 345) (Pt D) (Prs 14, 18, 26, 27, 29).

Article 13 of the articles of appellant Company read with S. 174 (1) of the Act (the effect of which latter provision is to make the requirement statutory and not merely contractual) makes it quite clear that, a general meeting at which less than three members are personally present is not a meeting at all for want of the required quorum. An extraordinary general meeting is as much a general meeting as an annual general meeting or statutory meeting and there is nothing in the Act which would justify the restriction of the term, 'general meeting' to annual general meetings. (1964) 2 Com PJ 105 : 1964 Ker LT 467 : 1964 Ker LJ 846 : (1964) 1 Ker LR 434 : AIR 1964 Ker 273 (274) (Pr 2).

The chairman of the board of directors, who under the Articles of the Company is supposed to be the chairman of the extraordinry general meeting of the shareholders called and before which a resolution for the removal of the chairman from the board of directors is coming up, will not be a judge in his own cause. Unlike a judge's decision the chairman will not decide on the validity of his own nomination at the meeting of the shareholders. It will be for the shareholders to vote for his removal from the office of director and not for him to decide it. The doctrine, therefore, that a man cannot be a judge in his own cause cannot be applied in this context at all. 60 Cal WN 956 : (1957) 27 Com Cas 86 : AIR 1956 Cal 658 (660, 661) (Pt C) (Pr 11).

——S. 186 — Scope — Before ordering general meeting under S. 186 Court must be satisfied that it is impracticable to hold meeting in accordance with company's articles or in the manner prescribed by the Act.

Under section 186, the Court may order a general meeting to be called only if for any reason, it is impracticable to call a meeting of the Company or to hold or conduct the meeting in the manner prescribed by the Act or the Articles of the Company. Before the Court makes an order for a general meeting under section 186, the Court must be satisfied that it is impracticable to hold the meeting in accordance with the Company's articles. The power of the Court under section 186 should be used, if at all, sparingly and with great caution. 55 Cal WN 646, 55 Cal WN 653, 60 Cal WN 957, Rel. on. 68 Cal WN 884 : (1964) 1 Com LJ 301 : (1964) 34 Com Cas 731.

——S. 186 — Applicability — Conditions.

Section 186, Companies Act, 1956, introduces new principles of company management. It provides power for the Court to order company meetings. For its applicability the first essential condition is that the Court must have reason to be satisfied that it is impracticable to call a meeting of the company or to hold or conduct the meeting of the company in the manner prescribed by the Act or the articles. The second feature of this statutory provision is that the Court's power under S. 186, Companies Act, 1956, is discretionary. It is an alternative remedy to be applied only when the normal machinery of company management fails. 60 Cal WN 956 : (1957) 27 Com Cas 86 : AIR 1956 Cal 658 (660) (Pt A) (Pr 7).

——S. 186 — Object and scope.

It is not the purpose of S. 186, that the Court should intervene to conduct a company meeting not in the manner prescribed by the Act or by the Articles of the Company and to override the express provisions thereof. When the Court directs a meeting to be held under S. 186 of the Act it must necessarily modify or supplement the Articles or the Act and that is why express provision is made for the same under S. 186 (1) (b) of the Act. But that provision for modifying or supplementing the Articles or the Act is only with a view to enable the Court to call, hold and conduct the meeting under S. 186 of the Act which normally it cannot without contravening the Articles and the Act. 60 Cal WN 956 : (1957) 27 Com Cas 86 : AIR 1956 Cal 658 (660, 661) (Pt B) (Pr 11).

——S. 186 — "Impracticable", meaning of.

——S. 186 — Power of Court — Exercise of.

In spite of S. 186, Companies Act, 1956, the Court will not easily intervene in any company meetings either in holding or calling or in conducting such meetings. Further, S. 186 introduces the power which is also by its nature irresponsible. As the power is great, unsuitable and irresponsible, the discretion granted under S. 186, Companies Act, 1956, must be very sparingly used and it should be used with great caution, so that the Court does not become either a share-holder or a director of the company trying to participate in the internecine squabbles of the company. 60 Cal WN 956 : (1957) 27 Com Cas 86 : AIR 1956 Cal 658 (661, 662) (Pt E) (Pr 17).

——S. 186 — Scope — Power to call for annual general meeting.

Section 186 does not give power to call for annual general meeting. The power is given only to call a meeting other than an annual general meeting. The approving of a balance-sheet and such other matters can be done only at an annual general meeting. 1959 Ker LJ 309 : AIR 1959 Ker 254 (264) (Pt C) (Pr 47) (DB).

——Ss. 186, 167, 256 — Powers of Court under S. 186 — Directors can be appointed only in annual general meeting — They cannot be appointed in extraordinary general meeting called under S. 186.

Under the Companies Act of 1956, there has been a bifurcation of the power to call an annual general meeting and the power to call any meeting other than an annual general meeting. The two powers having been separately given to two different authorities (the former to the Central Government and the latter to the Court) they must be exercised in water-tight compartment. The Court has power under S. 186 to call or direct the calling of only an extraordinary general meeting of a company, but not an annual general meeting. The expression "annual general meeting" in S. 256 refers to a meeting which is to be held annually under the mandatory provisions contained in S. 166. Therefore, the only remedy for appointing new directors is that an ordinary meeting of the Company should be convened and held. Hence, even if the Court is empowered to call an extraordinary general meeting under S. 186, the Court cannot direct the appointment of directors under that section. ——Ss. 198, 309 (3) and 348 — Partner in managing agency firm appointed Technical Advisor and later as Director — Remuneration paid as Technical Adviser — If can be considered.

A director may receive remuneration as a director and he may also get it in a capacity other than that of a director. The remuneration referred to in sub-s. (3) of S. 309 would include only the remuneration paid to the Director as a director and not remuneration paid to him in any capacity whatsoever.

What was sought to be controlled by S. 198 (1) was the cost of management and so what had to be considered was managerial remuneration and not remuneration paid for any other purpose.

Full effect must be given to the clear and emphatic language used by the Legislature in S. 348 that a managing agent cannot receive more than 10 per cent of net profits either in his capacity as managing agent or in any other capacity. The whole object of the Legislature would be defeated and the mischief aimed at would not be overcome if it were held that although the company had paid up to 10 per cent of the net profits to the managing agents it could further pay extra amounts to each one of the partners of the managing agents if the managing agency happened to be a firm. That would put a firm in an infinitely more advantageous position than an individual. 59 Bom LR 67: (1957) 27 Com Cas 105: AIR 1958 Bom 214 (215, 216, 217) (Pt B) (Prs 3, 4, 6) (DB).

——S. 205 — Winding up — Cumulative preference shareholders and ordinary shareholders — Rights and liabilities of Articles providing for payment of cumulative preferential dividend to preference shareholders and to priority over ordinary shareholders as regards dividend and capital — Effect of call on ordinary shareholders to pay capital and dividend of preference shareholders — Permissibility — Member holding ordinary and preference shares — Right to set off call liability in respect of ordinary shares against what may be payable in respect of preference shares — Companies Act (VII of 1913), Ss. 156, 184, 186, 187, 192 and 216 — Construction and Scope — Regulation 97 of Act of 1913 and S. 205 of Act of 1956 — Applicability to Company in winding up.

A provision in the Articles of Association of a Company that preference shareholders should have the right to a fixed cumulative preferential dividend and should rank both as regards dividend and capital in priority to other shares must be read as meaning that in a winding up, the preferance shares rank both as regards dividend and capital in priority to the other shares and are excluded from further participation in profits or assets, and in such a case the preference shareholders would be entitled to arrears of dividend out of the surplus assets, whether they include profits available for the purpose or not. Where the relevant clause of the Articles of Association provides that "the Cumulative Preference Shares shall confer on the holders thereof the right to payment of capital and arrears of dividend (whether declared or undeclared) up to the commencement of the winding up, but shall not confer any further right to participate in the profits or assets", there is a restriction on the rights of the preference shareholders in participating in the profits and assets of the Company in winding up; but as against this restriction priority is given to them as regards repayment to them of the capital and arrears of dividend. 'Arrears of dividend' in the context must in connection with the rights of the preference shareholders in the winding up of the Company, be construed as being intended to create a right in them to payment of cumulative dividend at the rate provided on the capital contributed by them. That is an absolute right created in them; and therefore the 'arrears of dividend' cannot be held to mean as applying to undistributed profits of the Company only and not to the available assets of the Company.

The Companies Act prevents distribution by way of Cividend anything other than the profits, and the Articles also provide that dividend cannot be paid except out of the profits. This, however, does not apply to a company in winding up. In the winding-up there is direct provision for refund and return of all capital paid by shareholders in the event of there being surplus assets and in the winding up the contributories are entitled to participate in the assets of the Company and use them inter alia, towards refund of capital contributed by them. In this view of the matter there is no warrant for holding that dividends cannot be paid to cumulative preference shareholders in winding up whilst the assets of the Company are being distributed. Regulation 97 of the Companies Act, 1913, corresponding to S. 205 of the Companies Act, 1956, which provides that no dividend shall be declared or paid except out of the profits of the Company, etc., has no application to a Company in winding up. It is not the law that no call can be made against the ordinary shareholders for the purpose of repaying to the cumulative preference shareholders the capital and arrears of dividend. Under Ss. 156, 184, 187 and 192 of the Companies Act, 1913 (corresponding to Ss. 425, 467, 470 and 475 of Act I of 1956), the Court is entitled to make calls for adjustment of the rights of the contributories amongst themselves. The rights of the different classes of shareholders as provided in the Articles necessarily require to be adjusted between the contributories in winding up. The plain meaning of the phrase "for the adjustment of the rights of the contributories" in these sections must be adjustment of such rights as are vested in different classes of shareholders under the Memorandum of Association and the Articles of Association of a Company. If the enforcement of these rights necessitates a call being made, the Court would be justified, having regard to the language of Ss. 156 and 187, in making an order for call. A call can be made against partly paid-up shareholders for adjustment of rights of the fully paid-up shareholders; call liability has been considered as an available asset for adjustment of rights between contributories.

An ordinary shareholder has no right to claim a set-off in respect of his call liability against what is ultimately payable to him for repayment of capital and cumulative dividend, when he holds both ordinary and cumulative preference shares. Sections 156, 186 and 216 of the Act of 1913 do not support such a claim. Nothing is due by way of debt by the Company to the holders of preference shares. The liability to repay the capital and cumulative dividend to the preference shareholders is not a debt. The liability arises only by way of adjustment of rights between contributories. That cannot be held to be "money due" within the meaning of the proviso to S. 186 (2). ——S. 205 — Dividends, nature of — Liability of company to pay.

Per Ramachandra Iyer, C. J.: A dividend is a share of the company's profits. It may be, at a fixed rate, or one determinable for each year out of the amounts allocated to the shareholders by the company. In either case, the company is not bound to divide the entirety of its profits amongst its shareholders, unless there is some provision in its Memorandum of Articles of Association which compels it to do so. Whether the entire profits are to be divided between the shareholders or whether a portion of such profits should be set apart for specified purposes and the rest alone is to be distributed is a matter for the company to decide. But when the company decides to set apart the whole or part of its profits for distribution amongst its shareholders as dividends, it should do it according to the terms of its constitution. It is well known that it is not necessary that equal rights and privileges should be attached to all shares. There may be preference shares, such preference existing either in regard to the capital or dividend or both or with respect to other matters. Preference shares, normally speaking, carry a preferential right to dividend which is expressed in a percentage of the nominal value of the share. But the right of a preference shareholder to obtain that dividend will arise just as in the case of an equity shareholder, only, when the dividend is declared. If a dividend is not so declared, he will, where the dividend is cumulative, be entitled to the dividend at the stipulated rate, including arrears, out of the dividends declared in future years. Dividend is out of the profits, and the declaration of dividend would presuppose the existence of distributable profits in the company. 76 Mad LW 588: (1963) 50 ITR 128: (1963) 33 Com Cas 932: ILR (1964) 1 Mad 157: (1964) 1 ITJ 427: (1964) 1 Mad LJ 325: (1964) 1 Com LJ 187: AIR 1964 Mad 83 (85) (Pt B) (Pr 8) (DB).

——Ss. 206, 207, 433 and 443 — Companies Court Rules, Rules 9, 28 (1), 31, 36 — Company — Petition for winding up — Respondent-company can apply to have the petition taken off the file as an abuse of process — Inherent powers of Court — Non-payment of dividend because of bona fide dispute — If amounts to 'neglect to pay' — One of the objects failing, substratum if gone — Misconduct of directors if a sufficient ground — Petitioner, past director, guilty of misfeasance — If can rely on the said misfeasance — Constructive res judicata — Solvency of the company — Applicability to winding-up proceedings — Dividends not drawn — Nature of practice—Arguments concluded — Evidence if can be adduced thereafter.

It is not a correct interpretation of S. 443 of the Companies Act 1956 to say that the Court is bound to enquire into the main winding-up petition, on its merits, that there can be only one such enquiry and that, consequently, the company, if at all it wants to resist the petition, must answer the averments in the main petition and cannot sidestep them. Tht Company may file a petition to restrain the respondents from proceeding with their winding-up petition on the ground that all is an abuse of the process of the Court. It is possible to reconcile S. 442 and Rule 36 on the one hand, and Rule 9 on the other, as indeed they must be. Even in a suit or petition tried under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure evidence is adduced before arguments are begun. It is necessary to adhere to this procedure all the more in the case of winding up petition, where the rule of evidence is even stricter than in the case of an ordinary suit.

When the company makes a deposit into Court only to overcome the effect of the averment in the counter-affidavit that the company did not have the necessary funds to make the payment, and the deposit was by no means intended to stave off the winding-up order itself, the contention that there is no winding-up because of the deposit has no force. A shareholder claiming dividend is a 'creditor' and can avail himself of the provisions of S. 434 (1) (a). Where there is a winding-up order and the company bona fide believes that the demand of shareholders for dividend cannot be complied with, non-compliance with that demand would not amount to 'neglect to pay' within the meaning of S. 434 (1) (a). For purposes of S. 426 (1) (g) undrawn arrears of dividends cannot lose their character of dividends. Even assuming they have lost their character of dividends, they would be an amount due to a member 'otherwise'.

When the auditor of the company is cross-examined as to the solvency of the company on a particular date (in a petition to wind-up the company on the ground of its being factually insolvent), the bar of constructive res judicata extends only to the state of things as on that date. This does not prevent the parties from showing that after that date circumstances occurred which made the company factually insolvent. Where the commission agency business of the company is gone (it being one of the objects stated in the memorandum), it would not be just and equitable to wind-up the company on that account without giving the company an opportunity to canvass new business under other clauses of its memorandum (like import, export-business, insurance agency, lending money, undertaking trusts, etc). There was reason to believe that the petitioners did not observe the statutory rules about the service of notice of the winding-up petition on the company, with a view to deprive the company of the knowledge of the petition in time, which might have enabled them to come to Court even before the advertisement of the winding-up petition appeared. Even if some of the allegations were true, it would not be just and equitable to wind-up the company under such circumstances. It will not be open to a past director to bring forward a winding-up petition on his own act of misfeasance. Misconduct on the part of directors will not, itself, justify the winding up of a solvent company.

In a proper case, it would be a proper exercise of the discretion of the Court under rule 31, Companies Court Rules, 1959, to dismiss the petition for non-compliance with rule 28 (i) (dealing with service of winding-up petition and notice of petition on the company).

The argument that proviso (c) to section 207 applies only when the right to receive dividend may be in dispute as when a shareholder dies; or the right to receive the dividend may be in dispute in the case of joint holders of a share, etc., is sound. Proviso (c) to S. 207 does not contemplate the case of a shareholder being benami for another (obiter). (1965) 2 Comp LJ 272: 78 Mad LW 579.

——Ss. 206 and 434 (a) — Transfer of share effected after declaration of dividend — It cannot convey title to transferee to receive payment of dividend already declared — T. P. Act (1882), S. 8.

A transfer of share effected after dividend has been declared by the company cannot, as against the company, convey title to the transferee to receive payment of the dividend already declared before the transfer although the transferee bought it cum-dividend. In such a case the transferor alone can be regarded as creditor of the company so as to entitle him to sustain a petition for winding up of the company if the dividend is not paid in compliance with the provisions of the section: AIR 1956 SC 655, Rel. on.

The mere fact that high price was paid for the shares cannot itself indicate that the transfer included the right to the past dividends as well. At any rate in the absence of evidence in that behalf one cannot assume that what the transferor intended to transfer was the shares plus the dividend that had already been declared as payment thereon. (1964) 1 Com LJ 339 : (1964) 34 Com Cas 209 : 77 Mad LW 255 : (1964) 2 Mad LJ 12 : ILR (1964) 1 Mad 832 : AIR 1964 Mad 519 (523) (Pt C) (Pr 12) (DB).

Where the resolution passed by a company in form and substance consisted of the separable parts, viz., the first part declaring dividend and the second part saying in contravention of S. 207 that payments will be effected when the commission due from the principals is realised.

Held, that the original but separable resolution relating to the declaration of dividend being within the competence of the company to pass, should alone be regarded as the resolution actually passed. In that view the amount of dividend would become payable forthwith on such a declaration and if that amount is not paid there will be a valid debt on which the petition for winding up of the company could be founded: AIR 1943 Bom 404; AIR 1959 Bom 303, distinguished. The stringent provision contained in S. 207 is intended to protect the shareholders against the arbitrary acts of the company in delaying payment of the dividends justly due. Any resolution of the company which will have the effect of contravening or evading that provision will be invalid inasmuch as it would be contrary to the specific terms of statute, default in that respect of it being made punishable. The punishment imposed by the section on the delinquent persons responsible for non-payment of dividend within the time prescribed is not merely one to enforce prompt payment of the dividend. The failure to pay the dividend within the time specified is treated as an offence and it will not be open to the shareholders to contract out of the provisions of the section. (1964) 34 Com Cas 209: (1964) 1 Com LJ 339: 77 Mad LW 255: (1964) 2 Mad LJ 12: ILR (1964) 1 Mad 832 : AIR 1964 Mad 519 (525) (Pt G) (Prs 17, 19) (DB).

——S. 210 — Scope of — Failure of Board of Directors to present Balance-sheet and Profit and Loss Account — When constitutes an offence — Non-convening of Annual General Meeting and consequent inability to lay balance-sheet — Relevancy.

Held,—From a perusal of Ss. 166 and 210 of the Companies Act, it is clear that the holding of Annual General Meeting is the pre-requisite for laying the balance-sheet and profit and loss account. The emphasis in S. 210 is on the meeting of the company held in pursuance of S. 166, so that, if no general meeting could be held in compliance with S. 166, the question of laying the balance-sheet and profit and loss account in accordance with S. 210 would not arise. Since it has been found by a competent Court that the general meeting under S. 166 could not be held for reasons beyond the control of the directors, as the books had been sealed and an application was filed for the winding up of the company, the question of laying the balance-sheet and profit and loss account would not arise. Therefore, the directors could not be held guilty for contravening the provisions of S. 210 of the companies Act, viz., for not placing before the company balance-sheet and profit and loss account at its Annual General Meeting. ILR (1964) Andh-Pra 542: (1963) 1 An. Under the Companies Act, the balance-sheet has to be drawn up in the form prescribed in Sch. VI, Part I of the Companies Act, 1956. Under the heading 'current liabilities and provisions' must be shown the items 'proposed dividend' as also 'provisions for taxation'. There is a difference between a 'debt' and a 'liability'. For example, a dividend, when proposed, does not become a debt; but only becomes a debt when declared. The case of 'provisions for taxation' is a liability. All debts are liabilities, but all liabilities are not debts. (1961) 42 ITR 288: 65 Cal WN 706: AIR 1961 Cal 649 (651) (Pt B) (Pr 7).

All that the authorised controller was authorised to do was to issue directions. When he was not vested as such with the powers of a director of a company, the fact that the authorised controller was authorised only to issue directions to persons having any functions of management in relation to the undertaking, without doubt, indicated that the control order contemplated the existence of persons having functions of management in regard to the undertaking. Keeping books of account, preparing statement of accounts and therefore preparing a balance-sheet may appropriately come under the functions of management in relation to an undertaking.

The authorised controller could direct the sole director or directors and the manager to produce a balance-sheet or to sign a particular balance-sheet or give such similar directions. The authorised controller could not give a direction which would be contrary to the provisions of the Indian Companies Act, unless there was a specific provision to that effect under the control order and that specific provision could be justified under S. 3 of the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act. When there was no specific power conferred on the authorised controller by the relevant notification authorising him to take over the control of the Jagdish Sugar Mills it cannot be said that if the authorised controller had authorised the Manager to sign the balance-sheet then such authorisation by him could validate the balance-sheet in spite of what was provided for in sub-section (1) (ii) of S. 133 of the Indian Companies Act.

Therefore, in order that a balance-sheet, which was not authenticated in accordance with the provisions of the Indian Companies Act, could be treated as a proper acknowledgment under S. 19 of the Indian Limitation Act, it had to be shown that there was an acknowledgment of liability in writing and that the person who signed that acknowledgment was either the debtor himself or an agent duly authorised. Showing of an outstanding liability may amount to an acknowledgment of liability but that would not be enough for purposes of S. 19 of the Indian Limitation Act unless it was further shown that the liability was acknowledged by either the party to be bound by that acknowledgment or a person duly authorised by that party to make such an acknowledgment.

Section 230 (5) of the Companies Act, gives a clear indication that in respect of debts recoverable from a company ordered to be wound up compulsorily the date material for determining the question of limitation would be the date of the winding up order. Therefore any debt due by a company which was barred on the date of the winding up order cannot be recovered in liquidation proceedings. There was a little controversy as to whether Art. 115 or Art. 120 of the Limitation Act applied. There is good authority for holding that in circumstances obtaining in the instant case benefit of Art. 120 could not be taken by the creditor. (1963) 2 Comp LJ 14: AIR 1963 All 284 (291, 292, 293) (Prs 36, 44, 45) (DB).

It is not illegal for an auditor to base his report furnished under S. 227 of the Companies Act on the work done by others, i.e., by a partner or employee of himself or his firm or by an outsider who is in practice, though as a general rule a statutory auditor would be guilty under the first part of Cl. 8 of Part I of the Second Schedule to the Chartered Accountants Act. When no professional misconduct is involved in submitting a report under S. 227 of the Companies Act based mainly on the work of another accountant, he cannot become guilty of misconduct simply because the auditor mentions the fact of his basing his report on the work of that other in his report. On the other hand it would be most improper on his part if he does not mention the work done by that other accountant in the relevant parts of his report. At the same time, if the opinion expressed by the auditor turns out to be false he cannot escape responsibility, and in ordinary circumstances it is the duty of the statutory auditor to inspect the books of account of the company himself and not merely to wholly rely on an inspection carried out by an Internal auditor. What can be gone into in proceedings under Section 21 of the Chartered Accountants Act is confined to the classes of professional conduct contained in Part I of the Second Schedule which describes the various kinds of professional misconduct in relation to chartered accountants in practice which require action by the High Court. (1964) 2 Comp LJ 161: 66 Punj LR 906: AIR 1964 Punj 452 (454) (Prs 5, 9, 10) (DB).

What the Registrar failed to do was to give the company 'an opportunity of being heard' before he made his written order. The company was undoubtedly heard through its advocates on at least two days, though it was subsequent to the written order.

Held, that as a matter of substance therefore the company could not complain either that it was not heard or that it was not given an opportunity to present its case in writing. The mistake made by the Registrar was in omitting to give the company an opportunity of being heard before he made his written order. ——S. 234 (7) — 'Is being carried on' — Meaning of.

The expression 'is being carried on' occurring in sub-section (7) relates to the stage of affairs at the time the representation to the Regisrar is made and not to something which is a matter of past history. If the persons who manage the affairs of a company commit acts of fraud or misappropriation or malversation the only persons who are likely to know about it at the time the wrongful acts are being committed are the wrongdoers themselves. 72 Mad LW 26: (1959) 29 Com Cas 97: 1959 Mad WN 113: AIR 1959 Mad 229 (232) (Pt B) (Prs 17, 19).

Neither sub-section (6) nor sub-section (7) requires that the Registrar of Companies should record any finding. Nor do either of the sub-sections say that the Registrar has to be satisfied that the representations are true; it is enough if he is of opinion that the affairs of the company are being carried on in the manner specified in sub-section (1). If it appears that the Managing Agents of the company have been misappropriating its funds then it will not be an answer to say that no creditor or person dealing with the Company has been defrauded. That will be the inevitable consequence if the matter is allowed to develop along the lines the Managing Agents are alleged to be following. It is unnecessary that the sole object of the operations which the Managing Agents carry on should be fraudulent or unlawful. It is not even necessary that it should be the dominant object. It would be sufficient if it is one of their objects. 72 Mad LW 26: (1959) 29 Com Cas 97: 1959 Mad WN 113: AIR 1959 Mad 229 (233) (Pt D) (Pr 25).

——S. 234 — Registrar making complaint against officers of company — Powers vested by section not availed of — Legality of action — (Criminal Procedure Code (1898), S. 154).

The Registrar of Joint Stock Companies does nothing illegal or prohibited by the Companies Act when he addresses a letter to the Inspector-General of Police charging officers of a company for offences under Ss. 406 and 409, Penal Code, without availing himself of the powers vested in him by S. 234 and other relevant provisions of the Act. 1957 Cri LJ 205: (1957) 27 Com Cas 97: (1957) Mad LJ (Cri) 27: 1956 Mad WN 866: AIR 1957 Mad 65 (67, 68) (Pt F) (Pr 17).

● ——Ss. 235, 240, 645, 646 and 658 — Inspector appointed to investigate under S. 138 of the old Act of 1913 — Power to issue notices under S. 240 of the new Act — General Clauses Act (1897), S. 6.

Ordinarily the effect of the repeal of the old Companies Act would be governed by the provisions of S. 6 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, but in the case of the new Companies Act, the application of the said section is subject to the provisions of Ss. 645 to 657 of the new Act; that is the effect of S. 658. The expression 'nothing in this Act' in S. 646 does not include S. 645 and so S. 646 should not be read as an exception to proviso to S. 645; Sections 645 to 648 are the saving sections, and ordinarily and in the absence of any indication to the contrary these saving clauses should be read as independent of, and in addition to, and not as providing exceptions to one another. Section 646 should be construed as an additional saving provision. Consequently the inspector appointed under S. 138 (4) of the old Act must, by legal fiction which is authorised by S. 645, be deemed to have been appointed under S. 235 of the new Act, and hence has authority and power to issue the notices under S. 240 of the new Act. It cannot be said that the duties of an Inspector appointed by the Central Government under S. 235 or under S. 237 of the Act are quasi judicial in their nature. Where the duties of an officer are not judicial or quasi judicial the question of bias becomes irrelevant and does not disqualify. 72 Mad LW 26: (1959) 29 Com Cas 97: 1959 Mad WN 113: AIR 1959 Mad 229 (234, 235) (Pt E) (Prs 30, 36).

——S. 237 (b) — "If in the opinion of the Central Government there are circumstances suggesting" — Meaning of — Nature of opinion to be formed — Central Government must proceed reasonably — Order, when justiciable — Company employing obliging auditors to cover up malpractices — Action under S. 237 (b) not unreasonable — Non-disclosure of ground for opinion does not invalidate proceedings.

Where an Act left an action dependent upon the opinion of the administration, by some such expression as "is satisfied" or "is of the opinion" or "if it has reason to believe" or "if it considers necessary", that opinion should be objectively formed, if the opinion to be formed is as to necessity of imposition of collective fine or opinion as to necessity for detention or opinion as to requirement of land for the purpose of acquisition under the Land Acquisition Act. The opinion to be formed under S. 237 (b), of the Companies Act, is however, not that type of opinion. The mind of the authority when it makes an order under Cl. (b) of S. 237, is at an exploratory stage and that is the reason why it has to proceed on circumstances suggesting the existence of malpractices mentioned in sub-clauses. The expression "if in the opinion of the Central Government there are circumstances suggesting" means that if it appears to the Central Government that there is a likelihood. Thus, if the Central Government is to proceed on "circumstances suggesting" it can merely proceed on hypothesis, that is to say, on a prima facie theory to be proved or disproved with reference to facts, later on ascertained. Now, if the character of the investigation is merely that of a fact finding commission, the Central Government cannot be expected to form a fully objective opinion about the malpractices mentioned in sub-clauses, before the investigation brings out relevant materials for the formation of such an opinion. It may merely form the opinion that there are circumstances, which may be capable of innocent interpretation but until so done suggestively sinister. The Government may proceed under S. 237 (b) only if there are "circumstances suggesting" the existence of malpractices envisaged in sub-clauses (i), (ii), and (iii) of Cl. (b). By "reasonably" is meant not what the Court considers "reasonable" but what the Court considers is a decision that "reasonable" body would come to.

An order of the Central Government under S. 237 (b), is certainly not justiciable, if the order has been made by the appropriate authority, bona fide and reasonably, even though the reasons may not fully appeal to a Court of law. It may not also be necessary for the Central Government to recite its reasonings when making an order under S. 237 (b). But when the exercise of the power is challenged as actuated by malice in law, before a Court of law, justification for the exercise of the power must not be blanketed from the Court. The Court, however, would not consider it proper to look into the material supplied, so as to enable itself to arrive at a decision, if the Government is not inclined to give inspection of the same to the Company against whom the order is passed.

If in the opinion of the Central Government there are circumstances suggesting that the petitioner company has been employing an obliging firm of auditors, which may cover up its malpractices, it cannot be said that the Government did not act reasonably in taking action under S. 237 (b) or must have proceeded on a fundamental misconception of the law and the matter in regard to which the opinion was to be formed: When the order is made by the appropriate authority, by and in the name of the President of India, and the opinion is also formed by the Central Government, the order cannot be characterised as not bona fide made, when apart from allegations of malice in law there is no allegations of malice in fact. The materials disclosed regarding employment of obliging auditors in the affidavit in opposition are circumstances, which may suggest to a reasonable man the necessity of a probe into the affairs of the petitioner company. 1948 WN 178, Dist.

Circumstances which suggest something to one may not suggest the same thing to another. Therefore, if the circumstances disclosed had the remostest relevancy, the Court cannot ignore them, even though they do not appeal to it and decide whether in those circumstances an investigation should take place or not. Only if the circumstances had been wholly irrelevant, even suggestively, the Court can pronounce its views.

The non-disclosure in the order under S. 237 (b) of the grounds for formation of opinion does not, however, invalidate the proceeding taken, but, in appropriate cases, disclosure of the grounds may be ordered.
